

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PART II.

THE LAW OF WAR.

Definition and Division of the Subject. In PART I has been considered MILITARY LAW PROPER, or that law, almost wholly enacted or written, by which the Army is governed at all times, in peace as well as in war. As to a few particulars only—such as are referred to under Arts. 45, 46, 52, and the statute relating to the offence of the spy, for example—has the subject of the Law of War, now to be examined, been heretofore touched upon.

By the general term Law of War is intended those principles and usages which, in time of war, define the rights and obligations, and regulate the relations, not only of enemies—whether or not in arms—but also of persons under military government or martial law and persons simply resident or being upon the theatre of war, and which authorize their trial and punishment when offenders. Unlike military law proper, the law of war in this country is not a formal written code, but consists mainly of general rules derived from the Law of Nations, supplemented by acts and orders of the military power and a few legislative provisions. In general it is quite independent of the ordinary law. Finding its original authority in the war powers of Congress and the Executive, and thus constitutional in its source, the law of war may, in its exercise, substantially supersede for the time the Constitution and laws of the land¹—as will be hereinafter illustrated.

Without entering upon discussions of questions which pertain to works on International Law, the present subject will be here considered principally with reference to the exercise of military authority and jurisdiction under the laws of war, as illustrated by the practice of our wars and especially that of the late civil war.

The subject will be divided as follows:—

- I. The law of war as affecting the rights of our own people.
- II. The law of war as affecting intercourse between enemies in general.
- III. The law of war as specially applicable to enemies in arms.
- IV. The status of Military Government, and the laws of war thereto pertaining.
- V. The status of Martial Law, and the laws of war applicable thereto.
- VI. Trial and punishment of offences under the law of war—the Military Commission.
- VII. Military authority and jurisdiction under the Reconstruction Acts of 1867.

I. THE LAW OF WAR AS AFFECTING THE RIGHTS OF OUR OWN PEOPLE.

The Taking or Destruction of Personal Property.

Whether and to what extent our armies, in advancing, retreating, or operating within our own territory, in time of war, may take or destroy private property is a question of necessity. Where there exists an urgent necessity or an immediate danger, the commander, (for such action cannot lawfully be initiated by an inferior,¹) may be warranted in appropriating, for the use of his army, supplies, material, buildings, animals, vehicles, &c., required for its subsistence, shelter, transportation, &c., or for its defence against the enemy, or in seizing or destroying such or other property to prevent its falling into the hands of the enemy or being availed of by him for attack or defence. The circumstances, however, must be most urgent; the exigency immediate, not contingent or remote. Otherwise the taking, &c., is not a legitimate act of war, is not justified by the laws of war, and the commander giving the order and those acting under him are trespassers, and it is they, and not the United States, who are liable in damages to the injured party. The leading case on this subject in our law is that of Harmony v. Mitchell,¹ in which judgment was given against Lieut. Col. D. D. Mitchell, of Col. Doniphan's command, on account of the appropriation, at Chihuahua in 1847, during the war with Mexico, of horses, mules, wagons and goods belonging to the plaintiff, a trader, at a time when the same, though important for facilitating the operations of the army, were not necessary for its use, and were not in danger of falling into the hands of the enemy then more than two hundred miles distant and not advancing. The rule here laid down has been observed in repeated subsequent adjudications, especially in suits arising out of the late war, in the majority of which, however, the taking, &c., was held warranted by the circumstances of the exigency.²

1. 1 Blatchford, 549. The judgment of $90,806.44, damages, awarded upon the trial in the U. S. Circuit Court, was affirmed in the Supreme Court, (Mitchell v. Harmony, 13 Howard, 115;) the principle of the ruling being expressed by Taney C. J. as follows:—"There are without doubt occasions in which private property may lawfully be taken possession of, or destroyed to prevent it from falling into the hands of the public enemy; and also where a military officer, charged with a particular duty, may impress private property into the public service or take it for public use. Unquestionably, in such cases, the government is bound to make full compensation to the owner; but the officer is not a trespasser. But we are clearly of opinion that in all of these cases the danger must be immediate and impending; or the necessity urgent for the public service, such as will not admit of delay, and where the action of the civil authority would be too late in providing the means which the occasion calls for. It is impossible to define the particular circumstances of danger or necessity in which this power may be lawfully exercised. Every case must depend on its own circumstances. It is the emergency that gives the right, and the emergency must be shown to exist before the taking can be justified."

Arrest of Persons. This subject, so far as affected by the laws of war, belongs rather to the special Titles of Military Government and Martial Law—to be considered hereafter.

II. THE LAW OF WAR AS AFFECTING INTERCOURSE BETWEEN ENEMIES IN GENERAL.

Rule of Non-intercourse. The principle here to be noticed is simply that of the absolute non-intercourse of enemies in war. As frequently reiterated in the rulings of the Supreme Court, not merely the opposed military forces but all the inhabitants of the belligerent nations or districts become, upon the declaration or initiation of a foreign or civil war,¹ the enemies both of the adverse government and of each other,² and all intercourse between them is terminated and interdicted.³ In special cases—by the authority, in our wars, of legislation of Congress, or, in the absence of legislation, of a license from the President as Commander-in-chief⁴—

4. The Act of July 13, 1861, c. 3, s. 5, which supplemented the law of war by specifically interdicting commercial intercourse with the insurrectionary States, authorized the President in his discretion to license such certain trade or communication may be permitted, but such permits are exceptions and are to be strictly construed.¹ The rule is that, pending the war, all domestic, social, and business relations are forcibly severed; all interchange, however personal and intrinsically harmless, is forbidden; no new contracts or engagements can be entered into; existing partnerships and joint undertakings are dissolved and existing pecuniary obligations are suspended.²

Enforcement and Violation of the Rule. The drawing of strict army lines, the patrolling, with troops or armed vessels, of the territory, rivers, &c., intervening between the belligerents, and the establishment of military posts upon main routes of travel and of blockades of important ports, while measures defensive and offensive as against the hostile forces, are also efficient means for the enforcement of this rule of non-intercourse. Infractions of this rule, by selling to, buying from, or contracting with enemies, furnishing them with supplies, corresponding, mail carrying, passing the lines without authority, &c., are violations of the laws of war, more or less grave in proportion as they render material aid or information to the enemy or attempt to do so, and, as will hereafter be illustrated, are among the most frequent of the offences triable and punishable by military commission.

intercourse in particular instances when deemed conducive to the public interests. And see McKee v. U. S., 8 Wallace, 163; Coppell v. Hill, 7 Id., 54, in which it was held that a commander of a military department was not authorized to give a license.

Morshead*, 6 Taunton, 237; Halleck, 359; DIGEST, edit. of 1868, p. 292.

III. THE LAW OF WAR AS SPECIALLY APPLICABLE TO ENEMIES IN ARMS.

Rights and Obligations of Warfare in general. While the laws and usages of civilized warfare, which constitute the main code of restraint and government as between opposing armies, authorize the killing or disabling of members of the one army by those of the other, in battle or hostile operations, by the ordinary and approved weapons, the capture and holding or paroling of individuals of the enemy's forces as prisoners of war, the practising of stratagems and deceptions which do not involve treachery or perfidy, the capture of enemy's property in general and its destruction where required in hostile operations,—the same laws and usages also impose obligations correlative to these rights or incident to their exercise, a violation or disregard of which may constitute a grave military offence.

Illegal Warfare—Killing, &c., of non-combatants. Thus it is forbidden by the usages of civilized nations, and is a crime against the modern law of war, to take the lives of, or commit violence against, non-combatants and private individuals not in arms, including women¹ and children² and the sick, as also persons taken prisoners or surrendering.³ Soldiers committing such offences forfeit their right to be treated as belligerents and become liable to capital punishment as violators of the laws of war. A marked instance of a conviction—as published in the General Orders of the War Department during the late war—of the unlawful taking of the life of a sick and helpless enemy, and after he had practically surrendered, was that of the killing of Brig. Gen. Robert L. McCook, in Alabama in 1862, a crime for which the death penalty was adjudged the offender by a military commission.⁴

1. A grave instance of this crime, consisting in the outraging of women, was that committed by the British forces, at the capture of Hampton, Va., in July, 1813. See Report of Com. of the Ho. of Reps., of July 31, 1813, Am. State Papers, Mil. Affairs, vol. I, pp. 375–381.

2. In Art. 5, (Sec. V.) of the Articles of Charles I, (taken from Art. 97 of Gustavus Adolphus,) it is prescribed that—"No man shall presume to * * * tyrannize over any churchmen, schollers, or poore people, women, maides, or children, upon paine of death, or other such punishment as in a strict Councell of Warre shall be awarded."

3. Dana's Wheaton § 343; Halleck, 426, 429; Lieber, Inst. § 22, 37, 44.

4. G. C. M. O. 505 of 1865. [The sentence in this case, however, was subsequently in effect remitted by an order directing that the offender be held as a prisoner of war. See G. C. M. O. 204 of 1866.] Compare State v. Gut, 13 Min. 341.

Right of Capture of Property—Its Limitations. By the law of war, the army of one belligerent may seize and appropriate not only the public property of the other belligerent, but also the private property of individual enemies. This right, however, has been qualified in its exercise by the law of nations, and private property is in general regarded as properly exempt from seizure except where appropriate for military use or of a hostile character.¹ In our late civil war the capture of private property of enemies (valuable or useful for public purposes) was authorized "without regard to the status of the owner,"² and it was declared to be the duty of the military, as of the naval forces at sea, to take and hold such property on behalf of the government.³ In deference, however, to "the humane maxims of the modern law of nations which exempts private property of non-combatant enemies from capture as booty of war,"⁴ Congress by special legislation, during the war,⁵ provided for the conversion of all captured private property into money and its deposit in the Treasury, subject to the claims of the original owners and their recovery of the same on proof of loyalty.

The species, indeed, of private property which was mainly the subject of captures, and which was chiefly disposed of under this statute, was cotton, which, constituting as it did the main resource of the enemy for the prosecution of the war, was held to be clearly

3. Lamar v. Browne, ante, 187, 194, 196. In an "Executive Order," dated "War Department, Washington, July 22, 1862," it was ordered, among other things, as follows:—"That military commanders within the States of Virginia, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Arkansas, in an orderly manner, seize and use any property, real or personal, which may be necessary or convenient for their several commands for supplies, or for other military purposes; and that while property may be destroyed for proper military objects, none shall be destroyed in wantonness or malice." And see G. O. 154, Army of the Potomac, 1862, containing directions for carrying out this Order.

hostile property—"as much so as the military supplies and munitions of war it was used to obtain."¹

But all the captures recognized as legitimate in our law and practice have been captures for, and by the authority of, the United States. No taking for private use or gain has been allowed,² but such taking has been regarded as a grave military offence in violation of the 42d or other Article of war. The spoil or booty sometimes permitted to European armies, of property seized on the battle-field or at the storming of a fortified place,³ would not be recognized as legal in our law,⁴ but property thus captured would be considered as within the spirit if not the letter of the 9th Article which provides that stores taken from the enemy shall accrue to the United States.⁵

The subject of the exacting of money or other private property of enemies, by way of contribution to the support of the government or army, or of indemnity to individuals, will be more appropriately considered under the Title of Military Government.

Destruction of Property of the Enemy. This may be resorted to by the army where necessary or expedient in the due course and prosecution of hostile operations, but not in general otherwise. The usages of civilized nations not only exempt public institutions of a civil character such as State houses, court houses, churches, asylums, colleges, museums and the like from the operations of war,¹ but forbid any wanton or malicious destruction of property, public or private.² The burning of isolated private dwellings or buildings may, in rare and exceptional cases, be excused by an emergency of war, but the firing of a town or village, unless accidentally caused by its being involved in an engagement or other legitimate hostile operation, is an act of inexcusable vandalism and a grave crime in violation of the laws of war. Such, in the opinion of American writers,³ was the burning of a portion of Washington, including the Capitol and President's House, by the British forces in 1814; and such would appear to have been the burnings or partial burnings of towns in some instances during the late civil war.⁴

1. Whitfield v. U. S., 92 U. S., 170. "That cotton, though private property, was a legitimate subject of capture is no longer an open question in this court. U. S. v. Anderson, 2 Wallace, 404; U. S. v. Padelford, 9 Id. 540; Haycraft v. U. S., 22 Id. 81. It was the foundation on which the hopes of the rebellion were built. It was substantially the only means which the insurgents had of securing influence abroad. In the hands of private owners, it was subject to forced contributions in aid of the common cause. Its exportation through the blockade was a public necessity. Importing and exporting companies were formed for that purpose. It is not too much to say that the life of the Confederacy depended as much upon its cotton as it did upon its men. If they had had no cotton, they would not have had, after the first year or two, the means to support the war. To a very large extent it furnished the munitions of war and kept the forces in the field. It was therefore hostile property and legitimately the subject of capture in the territory of the enemy." Waite C. J., in Lamar v. Browne, 92 U. S., 194. And see Mrs. Alexander's Cotton, 2 Wallace, 404; Radich v. Hutchins, 95 U. S., 213; Young v. U. S., 97 Id., 58. In Coolidge v. Guthrie, Flippin, 97, it was held that an action would not lie against a military officer for the taking of cotton jure belli.

2. Compare Executive Order of July 22, 1862, cited ante. Note also Arts. 97 and 98 of the Code of Gustavus Adolphus, (and Art. 5, Sec. V, of Charles I, derived therefrom,) making punishable the firing or despoiling of churches, hospitals, schools, colleges and mills.

3. Halleck, 456; Woolsey, § 131; Dana's Wheaton, § 351. And see opinion of the Court of Inquiry in the case of Brig. Gen. W. H. Winder, of February, 1815. The act was emphatically denounced at the time in the British House of Commons by Sir James Mackintosh. Hansard, Parl. Deb., vol. XXX, 526.

4. As, for example, the burning and plundering of Chambersburg, Pa., July 30, 1864: see the full account in Moore's Rebellion Record, vol. 11, pp. 537-544. As to the burning of Columbia, So. Ca., on February 17, 1865, it is the conclusion of the author, upon the testimony, that this cannot fairly be fixed upon any responsible commander of either the Federal or the Confederate army, but was probably the work of irresponsible persons—soldiers or others. On this question the student may be referred to the printed "Testimony," in the State Department, of the "British and American Mixed Commission," vol. XIV, Claims 103, 292, &c.; Howard's Report on British-American Claims, pp. 49, 433-512; Gen. Sherman's Report on the Campaign of the Carolinas, of April 4, 1865; Letter from Gen. Hampton to Hon. Reverdy Johnson, U. S. Senate, of April 21, 1866, published in the "Southern Historical Papers," vol. VII, pp. 156-158; Paper by Col. Jas. Wood Davidson, in same vol., p. 185; also Papers in vol. 9, p. 202, vol. 10, p. 109, and vol. 12, p. 233, of the "Southern Historical Society."

Right of retaliation. For all such infractions of the law of war the responsible parties may, if captured, be tried and punished. The usual remedy, however, of a belligerent, whose citizens have suffered from captures or destruction of property, exactions of contributions, or other severity, is retaliation. But the right of retaliation will not justify a resort to means or measures repudiated by civilized warfare.¹

Guerilla Warfare. The unlawful taking of life or property in our wars has, in the majority of cases, been the act of armed enemies, not commissioned, enlisted, or duly employed in the military service of the enemy, but acting independently—singly or in bands—and usually within districts of the enemy's country, occupied or invaded by our armies, or in contiguous portions of our own territory. Such parties, in the killing, wounding, robbery, &c., of peaceable citizens or of soldiers, or the seizure, burning, or otherwise destroying of private property, or of munitions of war, means of transportation, &c., of our army, are, whether

1. See Halleck, 444, 445; also G. O. 49, Dept. of the Mo., 1862, cited in full, post. A form of indirect retaliation is sometimes practised by the seizing of subjects of the enemy as hostages, and holding them in confinement till indemnity is furnished for wrong done, or till offenders are surrendered for trial, &c. See Halleck, 673; G. O. 4, Div. of the Miss., 1863.

As to retaliation for improper treatment of prisoners of war, see post.

It may here be noted that, in the opinion of the author, the soundest, under the law of war, of the grounds advanced for the trial and sentence of the so-called "Emperor" Maximilian of Mexico, was his decree of Oct. 3, 1865, to the effect that all juarists, i. e. supporters of the existing republican government, taken with arms in their hands, should be treated as bandits. (See D'Hericault, "Maximilien et Le Mexique," pp. 310, 335-6.) His own treatment, therefore, by the government of Juarez, when, after the departure of the French army, it came into power, was but a form of retaliation. It may be added that, upon the capture of Maximilian with his generals Miramon and Mejia, the U. S. Government made some attempt to induce their being treated as prisoners of war. Its dispatch on the subject, (Mr. Seward, Sec. of State, to L. D. Campbell, Minister, April 6, 1867,) was, however, never actually presented.

In connection with the subject of retaliation, the student may be referred to G. O. 54, 59, 60, III, A. & I. G. O., Richmond, 1862, in which the Government of the Confederate States authorized and directed retaliatory proceedings on account of action taken by certain federal commanders in the late war; also Joint Resolution of the Confederate States Congress, "on the subject of retaliation," of May 1, 1863, incited mainly by the Proclamations of the President of the United States, in reference to the emancipation of the slaves, of Sept. 22, 1862, and Jan. 1, 1863.

actuated by hostility, revenge, or a desire of personal profit, in general to be regarded as criminals and outlaws, not within the protection of the rights of war, or entitled, upon capture, to be treated as prisoners of war, but liable to be shot, imprisoned, or banished, either summarily where their guilt is clear or upon trial and conviction by military commission. Numerous instances of trials, for "violation of the laws of war," of offenders of this description, termed guerilleros in the war with Mexico,¹ and principally known during the late civil war as guerillas,² are contained in the General Orders especially of the latter period.³

1. In G. O. 372, Hdqrs. of Army, 1847. After the battle of Cerro Gordo, guerilla warfare became in fact a systematic mode of prosecuting hostilities sanctioned by the Mexican government. Compare Halleck, 438.

2. Called "guerilla-marauders" in the Act of July 2, 1864, c. 215, and the 105th Article of war. They were also styled, in different localities, "bushwhackers," "jayhawkers," "regulators," &c. Prof. Lieber, (Inst. § 82, 84,) refers to them as "highway robbers or pirates" and "armed prowlers." In his "Guerilla Parties," Miscellaneous Writings, vol. 2, p. 277, he more fully defines this class, distinguishing them from partisans, &c.

It may here be noted that an act "to organize Bands of Partizan Rangers" was passed by the Congress of the late Confederate States on April 21, 1862. But whether because their character as partisan troops was not sufficiently recognized by the federal forces, or because the service was found to be demoralizing, or for other reason, the Act was repealed by an Act of Feb. 17, 1864, by which also all such existing bands were authorized to be incorporated into the regular "Provisional Army."

3. Some of the more marked of the numerous cases of Guerillas, sentenced to death for homicides or other violence in the late war, are found in G. O. 135, 267, 382—of 1863; Do. 23, 41, (six cases,) 52, 62, 71; G. C. M. O. 87, 93, 98, 110, (eight cases,) 153, 198, (Jessie A. Magruder;) Do. 11, Id., 1866, (Samuel O. Berry.)

Among the principal cases of persons of this class capitally sentenced for the seizure, burning, or destruction, of steamboats, buildings, railroad trains and bridges, telegraph lines, &c., were those of Robt. Loudon, (G. O. 41 of 1864,) Wm. Murphy, (G. C. M. O. 107 of 1866,) John Y. Beall, (G. O. 14, Dept. of the East, 1865,) Robt. C. Kennedy, (Do. 24, Id.,) T. E. Hogg, (Do. 52, Dept. of the Pacific, 1865;) also cases in G. O. 12, 15, 19, Dept. of the Mississippi, 1862.

In this connection may also be noted the following Orders in which

Use of illegitimate weapons or means. An illegitimate weapon of war would be one which, in disabling or causing death, inflicted a needless, unusual and unreasonable amount of torture or injury, and the deliberate use of such a weapon would properly be treated as a violation of the laws of war. So the employment of an insidious means which cannot be guarded against, as poison in the infecting of wells, food, &c., is universally condemned by the authorities as wholly interdicted by the usages of civilized belligerents.² A poisoning by the enemy of provisions abandoned by them in evacuating a military post in Arkansas in 1862, as a result of which lives were destroyed, is commented upon by Maj. Gen. Halleck in a General Order, as a grave instance of unlawful warfare.³

Stragem and Deception. Though it is permitted to surprise and prevail over the enemy by feints, pretended retreats or other movements, false signals, fictitious dispatches allowed to be discovered or intercepted, and the like, a resort to secret and treacherous means, which cannot be guarded against by ordinary vigilance, is not permitted by the law of war. Thus it is held not to be a lawful ruse de guerre to deceive an enemy by being disguised in the uniform of his army; and soldiers captured, when so disguised, within the lines of the opposing forces, are not entitled to quarter but may be shot without trial,¹ or, if tried, be sentenced to death in the same manner as spies.² The offence of the spy, heretofore considered, is itself a marked instance of a prohibited act of this class.

One brave officer and several men have died, and others have suffered terribly from this barbarous act—an act condemned by every civilized nation, ancient and modern. We cannot retaliate by adopting the same barbarous mode of warfare; nor can we retaliate by punishing the innocent for the acts of the guilty. The Laws of War forbid this. But the same code authorizes us to retaliate upon the guilty parties. Any persons guilty of such acts, when captured, will not be treated as ordinary prisoners of war; they will not be shot, but will suffer the ignominious punishment of being hung as felons. Moreover, all officers are, in a measure, responsible for the acts of the troops under their command. Officers of troops guilty of such acts, although not themselves the advisers or abettors of crime, will, therefore, when captured, be put in irons, and conveyed as criminals to these Head Quarters. The Laws of War make it their duty to prevent such barbarities; if they neglect that duty they must suffer the consequences." G. O. 49, Dept. of the Mo., 1862.

Secretly Entering the Lines. Similar to the violation of the laws of war committed by the spy is that of officers, soldiers, or agents of the enemy, coming secretly within our lines or into country occupied and held by our forces, for any unauthorized purpose, as, for example, for the purpose of recruiting for their army, obtaining horses or supplies for the same, holding unlawful communication, &c.,—a class of offences of which instances were not unfrequent in the border States during the late war.³

Abuse of a Flag of Truce. A bearer of a flag of truce who employs the same for an illegitimate purpose, as for the purpose of observing the enemy's position, numbers, &c.; or who, having been halted with his flag outside the lines, obtains access within them by making false representations; or, when admitted within the lines, abuses his privilege by false statements, secret communications, taking notes, &c., is liable to be arrested and tried under the laws of war, or, in a clear case, to be shot without trial.⁴ Trials for this offence have been rare in practice.⁵

Violation of a Truce. This offence may consist in an act in contravention of the terms of the truce as agreed to, or in an act wholly inconsistent with the truce status. In the Mexican war, (1847,) a violation of the laws of war was, as claimed by Gen. Scott, committed by Santa Anna, in his strengthening the defences of the city of Mexico, during an armistice and in disregard of one of its expressed conditions.¹

A gross instance of a breach of the laws of war would be the taking advantage of a temporary truce between the armies to seize or kill individuals of the enemy or make an attack upon his forces. Of this class was the offence of the Modoc Indians, who during a truce and conference between their tribe and our army in the course of hostilities in Northern California, in April, 1873, took the lives of Brig. Gen. Canby and Rev. E. Thomas, a "peace commissioner." Of this crime Atty. Gen. Williams observes:—"All the laws and customs of civilized warfare may not be applicable to an armed conflict with the Indian tribes upon our Western frontiers, but the circumstances attending the assassination of Canby and Thomas are such as to make their murder as much a violation of the laws of savage as of civilized warfare, and the Indians concerned in it fully understood the baseness and treachery of their act."²

S. military employee, whom he thereupon caused to be fired upon and killed. The accused was convicted and sentenced to be hung. The proceedings, however, were disapproved by the reviewing authority on the ground that the personal guilt of the accused was not sufficiently established, and he was ordered to "be reported to the Commissary General of Prisoners as a prisoner of war."

Cong., 404, the Continental Congress denounces the killing of our soldiers, when surrendered as prisoners of war, by Indians in the service of the British, near Montreal, in May, 1776, as a "gross and inhuman violation of the laws of nature and nations." A similar crime, in the instance of the massacre of American prisoners of war, taken at the River Raisin, Ky., in January, 1823, by the British forces under Col. Proctor, is especially denounced in the Report of the Committee of the Ho. of Reps., dated July 31, 1813, published in American State Papers, Military Affairs, vol. I, p. 339. And see Brackenridge, Hist. War of 1812, pp. 91-93. On the other hand, Marion's men, of the American army in the Revolutionary war, are charged, (in common with their opponents,) with taking the lives of prisoners of war captured by them, "even contrary to agreements of surrender." Simm's Life of Marion, 165, (cited by Prof. Lieber in his "Guerilla Parties.")

If the captor is without the means of subsisting his prisoners, he should release them on parole. (See Vattel, 354; Halleck, 439.) Unless indeed some arrangement exists between the belligerents by which it is agreed or understood that the one shall supply the prisoners of war in his hands with "the necessary comforts" at the expense of the other.

When a prisoner captured from the enemy is recognized as a deserter from our army, he may, by the law of war, be summarily shot without trial. (See Woolsey § 128; Lieber, Inst. § 48.) Prisoners of war may also be tried and punished for crimes or offences committed while they are held as prisoners,—as for the killing of fellow-prisoners, (G. O. 79, 83, Northern Dept., 1864;) or the bribing of a guard with a view to effecting an escape, (G. O. 38, Dept. of the Mo., 1862.)

or cruel, treatment of prisoners is practised or permitted by one belligerent, the other may, as far as legally permissible, retaliate;¹ and any individual officer resorting to or taking part in such act or treatment is guilty of a grave violation of the laws of war, for which, upon capture, he may be made criminally answerable.² Two leading examples of such jurisdiction in our late war were the cases of Captain Henry Wirz³ of the confederate army, and his employee James W. Duncan,⁴ who, on being themselves taken prisoner at the end of the war, were brought to trial by military commission, respectively at Washington in the fall of 1865 and at Savannah in March, 1866, for cruel treatment and unlawful killing of prisoners of war under their charge at Andersonville, Georgia, and, on conviction, were sentenced, the one to be hung, and the other to imprisonment at hard labor for fifteen years. In a third case, that of Major John H. Gee of the same army,⁵ tried at Raleigh, No. Ca., in 1866, by military commission, for violation of the laws of war in failing to take proper care of the federal prisoners of war in his charge at Salisbury, No. Ca., in 1864, and in causing the death of several of the same, the accused was fully acquitted.

While the general rule as to the treatment of prisoners of war is as above set forth, it is to be noted that such prisoners "remain always responsible for penal crimes committed before the capture"⁶ and within the military jurisdiction.

Violation of Parole by Prisoner of War. A breach of his parole by a paroled prisoner of war is a violation of the laws of war rendering him liable to the punishment of death.⁷ The offence, which was a rare one during the late war,¹ was so frequent during the war with Mexico that offenders were publicly threatened with hanging by General Scott, and the signing of the parole was required to be accompanied by the taking of a religious oath.* The engagement of the parole is usually to the effect that the prisoner will not serve actively in the field during the pending war unless duly exchanged. He may in general, in the absence of specific stipulation to the contrary, legally perform "internal service such as recruiting or drilling recruits,"³ garrisoning posts not on the theatre of war, and—as it is declared in a General Order issued during the last war with Great Britain—"guarding stores and provisions of war in the interior," and "paying the troops and making purchases on account of the United States."⁴ In the official cartel, however, agreed upon between the United States and the Confederate States during the late war,⁵ it was, more strictly, prescribed that paroled prisoners should "not be permitted to take up arms again, nor to serve as military police or constabulary force in any fort, garrison, or field work held by either of the respective parties, nor as guards of prisons, depôts or stores, nor to discharge any duty usually performed by soldiers," or any "field duty,"—until exchanged.⁶ Under this cartel it was held by the Attorney General that the United States government would not be authorized to employ paroled prisoners in repelling an invasion or suppressing an outbreak of hostile Indians.¹

In the capitulation agreed upon between Gens. Grant and Lee, of April 9, 1865, it was stipulated that each officer should give a parole under oath, for himself, (and also for the men under his command, when a commanding officer,) that he (and they) would not thereafter serve in the armies of the Confederate States or in any military capacity whatever against the United States of America, or render aid to the enemies of the latter, until exchanged; and that prisoners, on being paroled, should be at liberty to return to their homes. It was held by the Attorney General that this meant homes in the insurrectionary States, and that paroled prisoners could not legally return to homes in any loyal States, or publicly appear in their uniform therein, pending the war.²

IV. THE STATUS OF MILITARY GOVERNMENT AND THE LAWS OF WAR THERETO PERTAINING.

Military Government Defined—Distinguished from Martial Law. By military government is meant that dominion exercised in war by a belligerent power over territory of the enemy invaded and occupied by him and over the inhabitants thereof. By most writers, prior to the appearance of the dissenting opinion of Chase, C. J., in Ex parte Milligan,³ this species of government was designated in general terms as "martial law," and thus was confused with or not properly distinguished from the *martial law proper*⁴ exerted at home under circumstances of emergency, and yet to be considered. In the case referred to, the Chief Justice describes Military Government as a form of "military jurisdiction to be exercised by the military commander

2. XI Opins., 204. That the cessation of war and return of peace duly announced releases a paroled prisoner from his parole and from the military jurisdiction—see XII Id., 120, 332; Lieber, "Status of Rebel Prisoners of War," Miscellaneous Writings, vol. 2, p. 293.

under the direction of the President, in time of foreign war without the boundaries of the United States, or in time of rebellion and civil war within states and districts occupied by rebels treated as belligerents." Martial Law, on the other hand, he defines as an authority called into action, when the public danger requires it, in a locality or district, not of an enemy's country, but of the United States, and "maintaining adhesion to the general government."

Subsequently, indeed, to the date of this Opinion, the name "martial law" was not unfrequently applied to the status of military government in the late insurrectionary States.¹ For the more exact purposes, however, of this treatise, it is preferred to retain the above distinction.

Military government—as the term is here employed—is thus exercised over the belligerent or other inhabitants of an enemy's country in war foreign or civil; martial law over our own immediate fellow citizens, who, though perhaps disaffected or in sympathy with the public enemy, are not themselves belligerents or, legally, enemies. As the field of the former is country involved in war, so its term is that of the duration of the war, just as the term of martial law is the duration of the immediate exigency. But a state of war may subsist though active hostilities are not prosecuted. Thus, as the President, before a war is formally declared or initiated, may be called upon to employ the army in defensive operations,² so military government may legally be continued in bello nondum cessante equally as in flagrante bello.³

Military government is further distinguished from martial law in that, unlike the latter, it requires no formal proclamation or declaration for its inauguration but exists simply as a consequence of occupation and possession.⁴ A proclamation is indeed useful, especially as a notice to resident or commorant foreigners.

Its General Effect—Instances of its Exercise. Military government is an exercise of sovereignty and as such dominates the country which is its theatre in all the branches of municipal administration. The country must indeed be not merely occupied by the prevailing belligerent but firmly held,¹ but when so held, his government, whether administered by officers of his army or by civilians appointed for the purpose, is the government of and for all the inhabitants, native or foreign, wholly superseding the local law and civil authority except in so far as the same may be permitted by him to subsist. The municipal laws and ordinances may indeed be left in force, or they may be, in whole or in part, suspended and others substituted in their stead—in the discretion of the governing authority.² How such discretion shall be exercised will in general depend mainly upon the previous political relations of the belligerent powers, upon the present temper of the inhabitants and their officials, and upon the ability of the latter to preserve order and maintain justice. It may indeed happen that because of the incapacity of the local authorities to afford protection to the peaceable portion of the community, a strict military government may become a necessity.³

Instances in our history of military government are presented in our Revolutionary war during the occupancy by the British of Boston, New York and Philadelphia; at Castine, Maine, when taken and held by the British in 1814-15;⁴ and in the provinces of Mexico in the course of the conquest of the same by our forces in 1846-7.⁵ It was however during the late civil war, which, by reason of its exceptional proportions, was assimilated to an international war,¹ that Military Government was more generally and variously exercised, and its nature more fully illustrated than at any previous period of our history.

By whom Exercised. Chief Justice Chase² describes military government as "exercised by the military commander under the direction of the President, with the express or implied sanction of Congress." Congress having, under its constitutional powers, declared or otherwise initiated the state of war, and made proper provision for its carrying on, the efficient prosecution of hostilities is devolved upon the President as Commander-in-chief. In this capacity, unless Congress shall specially otherwise provide, it will become his right and duty to exercise military government over such portion of the country of the enemy as may pass into the possession of his army by the right of conquest. In such government the President represents the sovereignty of the nation, but as he cannot administer all the details, he delegates, expressly or impliedly, to the commanders of armies under him the requisite authority for the purpose. Thus authorized these commanders may legally do whatever the President might himself do if personally present, and in their proceedings and orders are presumed to act by the President's direction or sanction.³

Magnitude of the Power—Its Limitation. The power of military government thus vested in the President or his military subordinates is a large and extraordinary one, being subject only to such conditions and restrictions as the law of war, in defining the particulars to which it may extend, imposes upon the scope of its exercise. As it is expressed by the Supreme Court, the governing authority "may do anything necessary to strengthen itself and weaken the enemy. There is no limit to

Features of its Exercise—Appointment of Executive Officials. While the conquering belligerent may, if he see fit, abstain from changing the machinery of the civil government of the enemy's country, he may, on the other hand, find it necessary or expedient to appoint for the same competent civilians or military persons as commissioners, governors, mayors, sheriffs, secretaries of state, collectors of customs, &c., who, upon his nomination and under his orders, will legally supersede the existing officials and so far administer the government.

In the leading case of Cross v. Harrison,² the Supreme Court affirmed the legality, "under the law of arms and the right of conquest," of the civil government established, pursuant to the orders of President Polk, by Gen. Kearney, in 1847, in Upper California, then in the possession of our forces as a conquered Mexican province. This government consisted mainly of military officers appointed to act as civil officials, to wit: Col. R. B. Mason, 1st Dragoons, as Governor, 1st Lieut. H. W. Halleck, Engineer Corps, as Secretary of State, Capt. J. L. Folsom, A. Q. M., as Collector of Customs, &c. Col. Mason was succeeded by Bvt. Brig. Gen. B. Riley, who continued military governor till Dec. 20, 1849, the date of the ratification and adoption of the first constitution of California.

In the later case of Leitensdorfer v. Webb,³ the provisional civil government established by Gen. Kearney, in taking possession of New Mexico in 1846, was held, by the same Court, to have deposed the pre-existing municipal government, and to have been legally administered during the period of the possession of the country as a conquered province.

Andrew Johnson, Edward Stanley and Geo. B. Shepley, as "military governors" of Tennessee, North Carolina and Louisiana, in March, May and June, 1862, respectively;¹ and, in 1865, of Messrs. Holden, Sharkey, Johnson, Hamilton, Parsons, Perry and Marvin as "provisional governors" of North Carolina, Mississippi, Georgia, Texas, Alabama, South Carolina and Florida respectively,²—presented further examples of an exercise, by the prevailing belligerent, under the laws of war, of the power to govern hostile states held by his armies. In New Orleans, in 1862, the department commander repeatedly appointed civilians, or detailed military officers, to fill municipal offices.³

Appointment of Judges and Creation of Courts. In the instance referred to in Leitensdorfer v. Webb, above cited, a part of the provisional government established in New Mexico by the commander of the invading army, and held legal and operative by the Supreme Court, was "a judicial system" consisting of a superior or appellate court, and circuit courts, whose jurisdiction was also specifically defined.

In the late civil war there was established at New Orleans by the President, by an order of Oct. 20, 1862, a civil court entitled the "Provisional Court of Louisiana," with both civil and criminal jurisdiction.⁴ The authority of this court to hear and determine a cause in admiralty was sustained by the U. S. Supreme Court in The Grapeshot;¹ and its judgment for the recovery of a mortgage debt of $80,000, and execution issued for the sale of the mortgaged premises, were by the same court recognized as valid in Burke v. Miltenberger.² As to its jurisdiction of crimes, this appears maintained in an extended opinion of its judge, Hon. C. A. Peabody, in the cases of U. S. v. Reiter and Louis, charged with murder and arson.³

As to the exercise of the power of appointment of civil officials, as most freely resorted to under the military government established by the Reconstruction Laws, see Title VII, post.

4. The order further appointed a person named as judge of the court, and empowered him to appoint a prosecuting attorney, marshal and clerk for the same; these appointments "to continue during the pleasure of the President, not extending beyond the military occupation of the city of New Orleans, or the restoration of the civil authority in that city and in the State of Louisiana." An interesting account of this Court is to be found in Moore's Rebellion Record, vol. 10, pp. 341-346.

The Supreme Court, further, in Mechs. & Traders' Bank v. Union Bank,⁴ affirmed the legality of a judgment rendered by another war-court—the “Provost Court of New Orleans,” (established by the Department Commander in 1862,⁵) in an action for the recovery of a loan of $130,000.

Other Provost Courts, with a jurisdiction assimilated in general to that of justices' or police courts, were established from time to time by military commanders during the war; as—for example—The “Provost Court of the Department of the Gulf,”⁶ a “Provost Court for the Department of Virginia,”⁷ a “Provost Court for the State of Texas,”⁸ a “Provost Court of the Department of Arkansas,”⁹ Provost Courts for the Posts of Vicksburg and Natchez,¹⁰ “Superior” and “Circuit” Provost Courts in Sub-Districts of the Department of the South,¹¹ “Post Provost Courts” in the Department of South Carolina,¹² a Provost Court at Alexandria, Va., whose jurisdiction was confined to cases in which colored persons were interested.¹³

ignated a "Civil Commission," has been the subject of judicial examination, and its jurisdiction has been sustained by the courts of Tennessee.¹

To cite a further instance—a "Court of Conciliation," consisting of three "Arbitrators," was established by Maj. Gen. Halleck at Richmond in 1865,² the function of which mainly was to adjudicate actions of debt "where the contracts were made upon the basis of confederate currency," which, it is added, "now has no legal existence."

As to this class of courts, it is to be said in general—that it is not only within the power of the commander, but, "for the security of persons and property and for the administration of justice,"³ it often becomes his duty, to establish the same; that they are as legally authorized as any other courts of the land; and that their orders, decrees and records are entitled to the same full faith and credit as those of any other lawfully constituted tribunals.⁴

As illustrating the authority and jurisdiction of the courts established by military power during the occupation of the enemy's country in the late war, the remarks of Chief Justice Chase in his Address to the Bar, at Raleigh, No. Ca., in June, 1867, may well

Any surplus will be given to the poor. * * * No fees will be charged to the poor. * * * In its decisions the Court will be governed by the principles of equity and justice. All alike, white and colored, will be allowed the benefit of its jurisdiction. All proceedings will be simple and brief, and directed solely to ascertaining and securing exact justice." By G. O. 10, Id., the jurisdiction of the court was extended to the counties of Henrico and Chesterfield; and by G. O. 114, Id., (Gen. Terry,) to the entire Dept. of Va., "as to suits by loyal owners to recover possession of real or personal property, sold or disposed of by authority of the confiscation laws of the confederate government."

An instance of a similar special court, called a "commission," consisting of three Mexicans as "Arbitrators," to determine an old litigated controversy as to the rights of two citizens to certain land, was established, in the Mexican war, by Gen. Wool, in G. O. 516 of his Command, of 1847.

be cited, as follows:—"The national military authorities took the place of all ordinary civil jurisdiction or controlled its exercise. All courts, whether state or national, were subordinated to military supremacy, and acted, when they acted at all, under such limitations and in such cases as the commanding general, under the directions of the President, thought fit to prescribe. Their process might be disregarded and their judgments and decrees set aside by military orders. * * * The military tribunals, at that time, and under the existing circumstances, were competent to the exercise of all jurisdiction, criminal and civil, which belongs under ordinary circumstances to civil courts."¹

The civil court, as a branch of the civil government under the law of war and conquest, should—it need hardly be repeated—properly be established by the commander of the army of occupation. An inferior officer cannot in general be authorized to exercise such right of sovereignty.²

Restrictions upon Courts. As incidental to the power last considered, the President or army commander, in establishing new courts, or—especially—where he leaves the existing courts in operation, may impose upon the same such restrictions as to jurisdiction or procedure as he may deem requisite for the protection of loyal citizens, as well as of military persons or employees of the government. Specific instructions to this effect were given to commanders by the President in an order issued from the War Department near the close of the war.³ Previously,

3. G. O. 3 of Jan'y. 12, 1866. This order is in full as follows:—

"To protect loyal persons against improper civil suits and penalties in late rebellious States.

Military Division and Department Commanders, whose commands embrace, or are composed of, any of the late rebellious States, and who have not already done so, will at once issue and enforce orders protecting from prosecution or suits in the State or Municipal Courts of such States, all officers and soldiers of the armies of the United States, and all persons thereto attached, or in anywise thereto belonging, subject to military authority, charged with offences for acts done in their military capacity, or pursuant to orders from proper military authority; and to protect from suit or prosecution all loyal citizens or persons charged with offences done against the rebel forces, directly or indirectly, during the existence of the rebellion, and all persons, their agents or employees, charged with the occupancy of abandoned lands or planta-however, orders had been made from time to time in the military departments, with a view to the extending of similar protection against suits, prosecutions, or criminal process, as also against oppressive sales on execution, foreclosures, &c.¹ Proceedings had also been prohibited or suspended as against other special classes of persons; as, for example, suits, on the part of the original owners, against purchasers of confiscated property,² and for rent against lessees of captured or abandoned estates.³ Subsequently to the General Order above cited, to wit, pending the period of the execution of the Reconstruction Laws, a similar course of action was quite generally pursued by the district commanders, as will hereafter be specified.

Exaction of Contributions. As a further feature of Military Government, the President, or commanding officer representing him, is authorized by the laws and usages of war to exact pecuniary contributions from the inhabitants for the support of the government or army.⁴

"Contributions" so called are generally exacted from persons in the mass—as from communities, towns, &c. Thus, upon the conquest of Mexico in 1847, Gen. Scott levied assessments, 'for the support of the American military occupation,' upon the nineteen States of that Republic, in sums from $5,000 to $668,332, the latter being the amount levied upon the Capital.¹ Previously, in March of the same year, at Monterey, Gen. Taylor had made and enforced an assessment upon the inhabitants of Tamaulipas, New Leon and Coahuila, by way of indemnification for the pillage and destruction of his wagon trains.²

In the case of Fleming v. Page,³ the Supreme Court recognized as legal the establishing by the military commander of a custom house at Tampico, upon its occupation in 1847, and the levying through the same of duties on the foreign commerce of the country as "a mode of exacting contributions from the enemy to support our army," and therefore a legitimate war measure or "weapon of war." So, later, in Cross v. Harrison,⁴ the same Court recognized as valid the authority of the President to impose, at San Francisco in 1847, through the military commander, "duties on imports and tonnage as military contributions for the support of the government and of the army."

In some instances special assessments have been resorted to for particular objects not of a military character, or for the benefit of classes or individuals. General Butler, as department commander, in 1862, levied about $700,000 upon individuals and corporations, (alleged to have aided and abetted the enemy,) for the benefit of the "destitute poor" of New Orleans;⁵ and it has been held that a subsequent commander, in 1864, was authorized in levying a tax of five dollars per bale on cotton brought into that city, to be applied to hospital, sanitary and charitable purposes.⁶

Scott states in his Autobiography, (p. 582,) that there actually came into his hands "about $220,000," of which $102,000 was expended for the benefit of the soldiers, and $118,000 was sent to Washington for the purposes of the founding of an Army Asylum—the present "Soldiers' Home."

In an order issued by General Grant, dated "In the Field, Chattanooga, Tenn., Nov. 5, 1863,"¹ stringent directions were given for the indemnifying of "Union families" and "Union refugees," (who had suffered from raids or been driven from their homes,) by means of "assessments" to be made upon "secessionists of the neighborhood." Similarly, by an order of the commander at Memphis in 1863,² resident enemies, having property, were required to contribute to the support of refugees driven within our lines by "insurrectionary violence." And by a subsequent order from the same source³ assessments were levied upon a similar class of persons to indemnify loyal individuals for damages suffered by reason of the seizure or destruction of their property by parties engaged in illegal warfare. In some instances also the contribution was exacted with a view to the compensation or relief of the families of loyal citizens or of soldiers whose lives had been taken by guerillas or the like.⁴

Seizure and Appropriation of Property in general.

Upon the occupation and firm possession of enemy's country the title to public property found therein passes to the conqueror,⁵ subject, as to lands and territory, to his conquest being confirmed—as the term is understood at international law.⁶ In general, however, the private property of the individual inhabitants, including moneys, rents and proceeds, debts and the like, (though liable, as above indicated, for contributions,) remains, under the humane modern law of war, exempt from seizure, except under special conditions already indicated, as where, for example, its appropriation is "required by the necessities or convenience of the army,"⁷ or where it is employed by the owner in unlawful trade or intercourse,⁸ or is otherwise used, or intended or subject to be used, for the support or assistance of the enemy. Such for example were the rents held to have been lawfully seized by the federal commander at Memphis in 1862, as a precautionary measure to prevent their accruing to the enemy's benefit.¹ Of this description also was the cotton referred to under the last Title as frequently seized by the national forces in territory of the insurrectionary States invaded or occupied in the late war.² The legislation of Congress in regard to the capture of property at this time, and its disposition when captured, has also been remarked upon under that Title.

The right, under Military Government, to appropriate the private property of enemies for any purpose is to be regarded as materially modified where, upon a permanent or continued occupation, an increased measure of protection to person and property may come to be extended.³ So, where a commander, in occupying a country or town of the enemy, has formally pledged the government to the holding inviolate of the rights of property of individuals, the seizure of private property by the military authorities will not be recognized as legal.⁴ Thus an order given by Gen. Banks, commanding at New Orleans in 1863, for the taking possession for military use of moneys belonging to enemies on deposit in banks of that city, was held by the Supreme Court to have been unauthorized for the reason that Gen. Butler, by his proclamation, on first occupying the city, of May 1, 1862, had given an express pledge of the character indicated.⁵

Impressment of Citizens into the Military Service.

This, by the laws of war under military government, may be resorted to in an emergency, for the public defence, where material exists for the purpose. Thus, the inhabitants generally were required by Gen. Jackson to perform military service or labor in the defence of New Orleans against the British, in 1814-15. in 1863, district, division and brigade commanders were required to impress all able-bodied persons so as to fill up regiments and batteries to their maximum.¹ A similar order, (G. O. No. 4,) was made in the same year by the commander of the Department and Army of the Tennessee.

Police Regulations. Gen. Scott, in occupying Mexico, made provision in one of his principal orders² for establishing a Mexican civil police to act in conjunction with the army. The organization of a local police force in some districts of the South was also provided for in Orders during the late war.³

Of the regulations of police ordained by commanders in that war the most frequent were the quarantine regulations, established generally at sea ports occupied by our forces,⁴ pursuant to a direction of the President.⁵ Regulations were also imposed by way of restriction upon local traders, especially those trading by boats on the great rivers connecting States, as the Ohio⁶ and Mississippi;⁷ as also upon persons carrying on business injurious to the military service—such as dealers in liquor⁸ and in military clothing.⁹ Other regulations made provision in regard to the passes which should be required for passing the lines,¹⁰ or for travelling through disturbed parts of the country;¹¹ also in regard to passengers embarking upon and landing from vessels, who were required to be furnished with passports, to have their baggage examined and to be deprived of the arms in their possession.¹ Others regulated the use of railroads and of telegraph lines.² By orders issued by the department commander in August, 1862, the population of New Orleans, (with some exceptions,) was required to be disarmed.³

Regulation of Labor. The regulating of labor was in general restricted to cases of freedmen or colored persons brought by the chances of war within military protection and care, for whose government, subsistence and employment upon plantations, &c., orders were frequently issued.⁴

Requirements as to Oaths of Allegiance. Upon the occupation of hostile country during the late war, the taking and subscribing of an oath of allegiance to the United States were not unfrequently required of citizens before they were permitted to act or resume their functions as civil officers, attorneys, jurors, &c., or to trade, vote, &c.⁵ One of the most pointed of the orders of this description was G. O. cited of the Dept. of Va. & No. Ca., the official acts of civil officers not taking the oath are declared void. In G. O. 49, Id., transfers of property by persons who have not returned to their allegiance are forbidden and declared to be without legal validity. The administering of the oath was generally devolved upon the Provost Marshal, whose duty it was also made to arrest persons who violated their oaths.

Deserters from the enemy were also required to take the oath before they could be released from arrest or employed. See G. O. 4, Dept. of the Ohio, 1864.

by Gen. Halleck during the military government of Richmond in April of that year.¹

Regulation of Elections. Beside requiring voters to take an oath of allegiance,² the commander administering military government may, in proper cases, order elections to be held,³ and, where disorder or fraud is apprehended at any election, may so regulate the conduct of the same as to secure a fair ballot and prevent breaches of the peace.⁴ The subject, however, of the ordering and regulating of elections is one which, in our history, has been most fully illustrated by the special military government

1. This Order is in full as follows:

"I. Clerks of courts of records in Richmond and Petersburg will be permitted to resume their functions on taking the oath of allegiance.

II. All attorneys, counsellors, advocates and proctors, and others licensed to practice a particular profession, trade or business; the presidents, directors and officers of all corporations, and all persons availing themselves of the benefit of General Order No. 2, in regard to trade, will be required to take the oath of allegiance to the United States. Any person in the above mentioned cities, who, without taking the oath, shall, after the first of May next, attempt to practice any licensed profession, or engage in any licensed trade or business, or shall exercise the functions of a president, director, or officer of any corporation, will be arrested. The foregoing provisions will be enforced in other parts of the State as early as practicable.

III. All persons making claims for restoration of private property, before a Provost Marshal, or any other military officer, court, or commission, will be required to take the oath of allegiance to the United States, and until the claimant takes the prescribed oath, his claim will neither be granted nor considered.

IV. All officers of customs in this Military Division are requested to give no clearances or permits to ship or land goods or other articles of trade, to any person or for the benefit of any person who has not taken the oath of allegiance to the United States.

V. No marriage license will be issued until the parties desiring to be married take the oath of allegiance to the United States, and no clergyman, magistrate, or other person authorized by State laws to perform the marriage ceremony, will officiate in such capacity until he himself and the parties contracting matrimony have taken the prescribed oath of allegiance.

VI. Any person acting in violation of these orders will be arrested, and a full account of the case reported to these Head Quarters."

instituted under the Reconstruction Laws—to be adverted to hereafter.

Direction of Education or Religious Worship. This is an authority which, though rarely exercised, is still, in a proper case, within the powers of military government. An instance of an assuming of control of the subject of education is presented by an Order of 1864 in which Gen. Butler, as Department Commander, appoints an army chaplain to be superintendent of public education, both for white and black children, and makes attendance at school compulsory, &c.¹ A marked instance of direction as to religious ministration is found in the General Order of the Department of Alabama, in which the Episcopal Bishop Wilmer, who had instructed the clergy of his diocese to omit from the church service the usual prayer for the President, was, with the clergy who had complied, suspended and forbidden to preach or perform divine service, and their churches were closed, till they should resume the prayer and take the amnesty oath prescribed in the President's proclamation of Dec. 8, 1863.² In New Orleans, in 1862, several Episcopal clergymen were arrested and sent to New York, for confinement in Fort Lafayette, for refusing to read the same prayer;³ and on another occasion the churches of the city were ordered not to observe a particular day which had been designated by President Davis as a fast.⁴

Control of Publications. The commander, in the exercise of military government, may suppress or suspend newspapers, books, or other publications by which hostility is excited against

Orleans in 1862, when, it is said,—“the school system was reorganized on the model of that of Boston. A bureau of education and a superintendent of public schools were appointed.”

2. G. O. 38, Dept. of Ala., 1863. Later, in the remarkable G. O. 40, Div. of the Tenn., 1865, (published in G. O. 2, Dept. of Ala., 1866,) Gen. Thomas removed the restriction on the ground that the action of Wilmer had been practically repudiated by the people of Alabama, as manifested by their increasing loyalty to the Union.

3. On being released and returned to N. Orleans, these clergymen were required by Gen. Banks to take an oath of allegiance as a condition to their landing; and, on their refusal to do so, they were sent back to New York. Parton, "Gen. Butler in New Orleans," p. 484.

his Government or its measures in the prosecution of the war, or information or encouragement is conveyed to the enemy. In New Orleans, in 1862, Gen. Butler, after interdicting a certain class of publications in his proclamation of May 1,¹ temporarily suspended several newspapers;² one, the "True Delta," being placed in charge of two officers detailed for the purpose, who proceeded to edit it "in the interest of the United States."³ By an order published in Memphis in 1863, Gen. Hurlbut suppressed a Chicago newspaper within his command for publishing a series of calumnious articles against the President and thus exciting disloyalty to the Government.⁴ So, in an Order of the Department of Virginia of 1865, Gen. Terry ordered the Provost Marshal of his command to seize the presses, types, &c., belonging to the proprietors of one of the Richmond newspapers, and prevent its future publication, because it had styled a part of the President's amnesty proclamation as "heathenish," and a certain Act of Congress as "mean, brutal and cowardly, revoltingly absurd and atrociously unjust."⁵ In a later G. O. of the same Department the same commander ordered the office of another Richmond newspaper to be closed, and the writer of an article therein, which had disparaged the memory of President Lincoln and reflected offensively upon President Johnson and his administration, to be placed in arrest.⁶ In Orders of the Department of the Ohio of 1863 the circulation is interdicted of a New York and a Chicago newspaper as being disloyal and incendiary,¹ and the publication of "disloyal books" is prohibited,²—under pain of the arrest and punishment of the offenders.

In an Order of the Department of the East of 1865, Gen. Dix, pursuant to instructions from the War Department, gives notice to editors and proprietors of all newspapers in his Department that "the system of correspondence with the rebel States by advertising under the head of 'Personals' or otherwise in the columns of such papers must immediately cease." And it is added that, if continued, the parties concerned will be arrested and brought to trial by military commission for a violation of the laws of war.³

In other instances—to be referred to under the head of the Military Commission—editors and publishers, or correspondents, of newspapers have been brought to trial and sentenced to imprisonment, expulsion from the military department, &c., on account of published articles giving information to the enemy, supporting the hostile cause, discouraging volunteer enlistments, counselling resistance to the draft, &c.⁴

Restraint and Punishment. While the peaceable citizens of a country under military government are in general exempt from military arrest or restraint of the person, the governing commander⁵ is authorized to apprehend all persons guilty of violations of the laws of war, hostile demonstrations, or public dis-arrest of persons who should "exult over the assassination of President Lincoln," adds—"Any paper so offending, or expressing any sympathy in any way whatever with the act, will be at once seized and suppressed."

orders, and in extreme cases to inflict upon them summary punishment. Thus, in the Department of the Gulf in 1862, persons of both sexes charged with disloyal or illegal acts were in several instances sent to Ship Island for confinement:¹ in another instance four persons were hung without trial for aggravated plundering and robbery.² In the same department in 1863, a citizen, for violations of the trade regulations with a view to aid the enemy, was condemned by the department commander, without a trial, to a year's hard labor and a fine of $25,000.³ And in repeated cases,—for hostile language or conduct, or for refusing to register and take the oath of allegiance, &c.,—persons have been summarily put outside the lines of the army or banished from the country.⁴

. In the great majority of cases, however, the inhabitants of States or districts under military government during the late war, who offended against the laws of war, or were guilty of crimes or disorders, were brought to trial before military commissions—as hereafter to be more particularly indicated.

V. THE STATUS OF MARTIAL LAW AND THE LAWS OF WAR APPLICABLE THERETO.

Martial Law Defined. Martial law, as the term is used in this treatise, is military rule exercised by the United States, (or a State,) over its own citizens, (not being enemies,) in an emergency justifying it. In the early Chapters the distinction has been referred to between this law and Military Law proper, the code of the soldier, with which it was formerly confused.⁵ In the present PART it has already been distinguished from Military Government, the dominion exercised in war, (foreign or civil,) over the territory and inhabitants of an enemy's country upon its conquest and occupation. The term "martial law," has indeed not unfrequently been employed indifferently to describe any form of military control whether of our own people or of enemies. But this use, while colloquially admissible, is regarded by the author as unsatisfactory and confusing as a legal designation.

O. 38, Dept. of the Ohio, 1863, it is declared generally that persons in "the habit of declaring sympathies for the enemy" will be at once arrested with a view to trial, "or sent beyond our lines into the lines of their friends."

5. The apparent confounding of these designations by Hale and Blackstone, as indicated in Chapter V, led to a confusing of the same by subsequent writers. This confusion is still occasionally encountered, though the later authorities in general clearly define and separate the two terms.

Occasion and Field of Martial Law. It has been held by the Supreme Court in *Ex parte Milligan*¹ that "martial law" is "confined to the locality of actual war," and also that it "can never exist when the courts are open and in the proper and unobstructed exercise of their jurisdiction." But this ruling was made by a bare majority—five—of the court at a time of great political excitement, and the opinion of the four other members, as delivered by the Chief Justice, was to the effect that martial law is not necessarily limited to time of war but may be exercised at other periods of "public danger,"² and that the fact that the civil courts are open is not controlling against such exercise since they "might be open and undisturbed in the execution of their functions and yet wholly incompetent to avert threatened danger or to punish with adequate promptitude and certainty the guilty." It is the opinion of the author that the view of the minority of the court is the sounder and more reasonable one,³ and that the

The name by which our military courts are designated—"court martial"—has probably had not a little to do with perpetuating the confusion referred to.

2. See Hallam, Const. Hist. Eng., vol. 1, p. 240, cited post; also 9 Am. Law Reg., 498.
3. Wells, in his work on the Jurisdiction of Courts, p. 575, in expressing his concurrence with the views of the minority of the judges in Ex parte Milligan, observes of the conclusion of the court as adopted by the majority—"This case can never become a lasting precedent." And see 1 Bishop, C. L. § 52, note, where, referring to the ruling in question, the conclusion of the majority was influenced by a confusing of martial law proper with that military government which exists only at a time and on the theatre of war, and which was clearly distinguished from martial law by the Chief Justice, in the dissenting opinion—the first complete judicial definition of the subject.¹

While therefore the emergency under which martial law is lawfully exercised may be war; while it is in fact during war, and because of the exigencies incident to war, that such law has most frequently been resorted to; it is not—in the judgment of the writer—war alone that may call it into existence. It may also, it is believed, legally be inaugurated at a time of “rebellion or invasion,” when, as provided in the Constitution,² “the public safety may require” the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus; or at a time of the “insurrection” or “invasion” of which Congress is empowered by the same instrument to provide for the suppressing or repelling;³ or at a juncture of impending hostilities⁴ or internal riot or disorder, when the laws of the United States cannot otherwise be duly enforced. At such times, whether it be essential under the Constitution that Congress shall specially authorize it, or sufficient that the President, as the official charged to faithfully execute the laws and command the armies,⁵ formally proclaim it,—it may, it is considered, be initiated, in any part of the United States in which the emergency may occur, with the same legality as at a time and on the field of actual war.⁶

author says—“A mere dictum from the bench carries no weight beyond that of its own inherent reasons.” See also Id. § 64, note.

1. See his opinion, as cited ante, p. 18, under the head of “Military Government Defined.” A similar distinction is also taken by Atty. Gen. Cushing, (VIII Opins., 368, 369,) between martial law as exercised in an enemy’s country, (the “military government” of Chief Justice Chase,) and martial law as a “domestic fact” exercised at home. And compare Halleck, 372–3.

6. To quote again from Chief Justice Chase’s definition,—it, (martial law,) is “to be exercised in time of invasion or insurrection within the limits of the United States, or, during rebellion, within the limits of States maintaining adhesion to the National Government, when the pub-

Assimilated to the State of Siege. As thus exercisable, martial law, in this country, resembles, and has been compared to,¹ the state of siege of the continental nations of Europe—a condition of domestic military rule imposed in besieged towns, as also in cities or districts during foreign or civil war, or at periods of grave public disorder especially those succeeding upon a state of war.²

As Exercised under British rule. Martial law, as such, has not been proclaimed or exercised in England since the Revolution of 1688. The Riot Act, under which the military, acting in aid of the civil authority, may attack mobs not duly dispersing, seems to have proved a sufficient provision for the suppression of such disorders as have occurred. That martial law may be resorted to in the event of actual rebellion seems to be conceded,³ though it would appear that it would have to be expressly authorized by Act of Parliament, or at least sanctioned by a subsequent Act of Indemnity. It has been repeatedly resorted to in lic danger requires its exercise, * * * and is called into action by Congress, or temporarily, when the action of Congress cannot be invited and in the case of justifying or excusing peril, by the President, in times of insurrection or invasion, or of civil or foreign war, within districts or localities where ordinary law no longer adequately secures public safety and private rights." 4 Wallace, 141.

As to the power of the President, by virtue of his being Commander-in-chief, to exercise martial law, see, further, Whiting, War Powers, 163 et seq.; Kees v. Tod, Id., 216; McCormick v. Humphrey, 27 Ind. 144. The view of Bishop, (1 C. L. § 60,) that the President possesses this power as Executive, martial law being one of the "laws" which he is required faithfully to execute—is deemed more curious than sound.

2. As in Paris and other parts of France and in Algiers, after the Franco-Prussian war and the suppression of the Commune, in 1871.

3. "There may, in times of pressing danger, when the conservation of all demands the sacrifice of the legal rights of the few—there may be circumstances that not only justify but compel the temporary abandonment of constitutional forms. It has been usual for all governments, during an actual rebellion, to proclaim martial law, or the suspension of civil jurisdiction." Hallam, Const. Hist. Eng., vol. 1, p. 240. "It cannot be too strongly urged that such a thing as martial law is unknown to English jurisprudence. The law of England presupposes a state of peace, and disturbers of that peace can be found guilty of treason, felony, or misdemeanor, according to circumstances. On the other hand, no judicial decisions can alter the fact that the application of military government under the law of necessity, commonly called martial law, must always exist, although it is difficult to exactly define it." Pratt, 214.

Ireland, as also in the colonies—notably in Jamaica, Ceylon, Demerara and at the Cape of Good Hope, in giving its exercise in Jamaica in 1867, under the proclamation of Governor Eyre, 354 persons were put to death under sentence of court-martial and 85 persons without trial; 600 persons, some of whom were women, were flogged and imprisoned; and 1000 dwellings were destroyed by burning—all by way of punishment of alleged rebels and within a period of one month. The English authorities have differed as to the proper nature of martial law and the extent of the military control which it justifies. Thus, some have considered that it simply permits the application to the citizen of the code of the soldier; others that it places in the hands of the military commander a discretionary power to be exerted according as, and so far as, the necessities of the exigency may require.

The latter view is the one which accords the more nearly with our own law and practice.² But as we have never had occasion to employ martial law with regard to a subject and inferior race, its exercise in this country has had little in common with its mode of application in the British colonies.

Its Formal Initiation. Unlike Military Government, which exists as a consequence of occupation and possession of enemy's country, martial law, involving as it does a material change in the political condition of peaceful citizens and a considerable restriction perhaps of their rights or privileges, is properly and customarily inaugurated by a formal proclamation of the President as Commander-in-chief,³ or declaration of the commanding gene-

See his "Treatise on Martial Law," "Commentaries on Martial Law," "History of the Jamaica Case," "Report of the Case of Queen v. Eyre," "Review of the Authorities as to the repression of Riot and Rebellion."

3. When initiated in a State, it may be proclaimed by the Governor or declared by an Act of the Legislature, according as may be deemed legal or expedient under the Constitution and laws. In the case of the Dorr rebellion in Rhode Island, the General Assembly, by an Act of June 25, 1842, placed the State under martial law, and the Governor thereupon issued a proclamation announcing the fact. *Luther v. Its Limitations. The employment of martial law has been likened to the exercise of the right of self-defence by an individual.³ Its occasion and justification thus is necessity.⁴ But though in general without other limit than the discretion of the commander upon whom its execution is devolved, it is not an absolute power but one to be exercised with such stringency only as circumstances may require. The often quoted remark that martial law is simply "the will of the general who commands the army"⁵ is a description much less apposite in practice to martial law proper, or domestic martial law, than to that *military government of enemies*⁶ heretofore considered, and with reference to which in fact the observation was originally employed by Wellington. Martial law is indeed resorted to as much for the protection of the lives and property of peaceable individuals as for the repression of hostile or violent elements.¹ It may become requisite that it supersede for the time the existing civil institutions, but, in general, except in so far as relates to persons violating military orders or regulations, or otherwise interfering with the exercise of military authority, martial law does not in effect suspend the local law or jurisdiction² or materially restrict the liberty of the citizen: it may call upon him to perform special service or labor for the public defence but otherwise usually leaves him to his ordinary avocations.³

It is a principle of the exercise of martial law that even when required to be executed with exceptional stringency and for a protracted period, it shall not be permitted to serve as a pretext for license or disorder on the part of the military; and acts of undue violence and oppression committed in its name will by the laws of war be visited with extreme punishment.⁴

It is a further principle that, while martial law is not to be inaugurated precipitately or inconsiderately, so it is to be continued only so long as the public exigency on account of which it was declared shall prevail.⁵ It is not indeed essential to the discontinuance of such state that the original declaration of the same be formally revoked: when the emergency has ceased, or within a reasonable interval thereafter, the status may be deemed to have lapsed, and cannot lawfully be further continued or enforced.⁶

Instances illustrating the Operation of Martial Law.

The nature and operation in practice of martial law will be illustrated by a reference to the principal instances of its employment in our history.

Passing over such early cases as those of the proclamation of martial law in Boston by General Gage in June, 1775,¹ and in Virginia in November of that year by Governor Dunmore,² as well as the occasion of its being substantially exercised by Gen. Wilkinson, in Louisiana, at the period of the Burr conspiracy, in November, 1806,—an instance more material to be noticed in referring presently to the subject of the suspension of the writ of habeas corpus,—we come to the action by Gen. Jackson at New Orleans in 1814.

As declared by Gen. Jackson at New Orleans. This action was initiated by a proclamation of Dec. 16 of that year, as follows:—"Major General Andrew Jackson, commanding the seventh United States military district, declares the city and environs of New Orleans under strict martial law, and orders that in future the following rules be rigidly enforced, viz: Every individual entering the city will report to the adjutant general's office, and, on failure, to be arrested and held for examination. No person shall be permitted to leave the city without a permission in writing, signed by the General or one of his staff. No vessels, boats, or other craft will be permitted to leave New Orleans or Bayou St. John without a passport in writing from the General or one of his staff, or the commander of the naval forces of the United States on this station. The street lamps shall be extinguished at the hour of nine at night, after which time persons of every description found in the streets, or not at their respective homes, without permission in writing as aforesaid, and not having the countersign, shall be apprehended as spies and held for examination."

The British forces under Maj. Gen. Pakenham were then threatening the city, and, as it is added by a late writer,³—"All able-bodied men, of whatever race, color, rank or condition, were compelled to serve either as soldiers or sailors. The old men and the infirm were formed into a veteran guard for the police of the town and the occupation of its forts."

The martial law status thus instituted was maintained till March 13, (the date on which news was received of the ratification of the treaty of peace,) although the British finally retreated to their fleet on January 19th. Meantime, (as is described in the history of the period,) the military authority of the General was exercised in so arbitrary a manner as to bring about a serious collision with the U. S. Judiciary. A citizen and member of the Legislature—Louis Louaillier—having published in a newspaper a remonstrance against an oppressive order for the temporary banishment from the city of the French population, was arrested and confined by General Jackson; and when Judge Hall, of the U. S. District Court, granted a writ of habeas corpus, directing the General to bring the prisoner before the court to be dealt with according to law, Jackson caused the Judge himself to be arrested, ("for aiding and abetting and exciting mutiny in my camp,") and confined at the barracks for nearly a week, when he was conducted beyond the limits of the city. Returning after the announcement of peace, the Judge cited the General before the court, adjudged him to have been guilty of a gross contempt of court, and imposed upon him a fine of one thousand dollars.¹

The comments of the Supreme Court of Louisiana in the case of Johnson v. Duncan, 3 Martin, 530, with reference to the martial law declared by Gen. Jackson, may here be referred to as indicating the temper of the judiciary at this time. In holding that the proclamation could not legally have the effect of suspending their functions, the court observe:—"The idea that American citizens may be left at the mercy of an individual who may in certain cases, the necessity of which is to be judged of by himself, assume a supreme, overbearing, unbounded power, is not only repugnant to the principles of any free government, but subversive of the very foundations of our own. * * * The proclamation of martial law cannot have had any other effect than that of placing under military authority all the citizens subject to militia service. It is in that sense alone that the vague expression of martial law ought to be understood among us. To give it any larger extent would be trampling upon the constitution and laws of our country." And Lamb's Case, Car. Law. Rep., 330, is cited, in which Judge Bay illustrates the horror with which martial law is commonly regarded by the judiciary, by declaring—"If by martial law is to be understood that dreadful law, the law of arms, * * * I have no hesitation in saying that such a monster could not exist in this land of liberty and freedom." On the other hand,

As declared by Gen. Scott in Mexico. The next instance to be noted is that of the declaration of martial law in Mexico by Major General Scott, in his General Orders of 1847,¹ in which also, (as will be hereafter more particularly indicated,) military commissions were first instituted for the trial of offenders. The form of the declaration here is:—"Martial law is hereby declared as a supplemental code in and about all cities, towns, camps, posts, hospitals, and other places which may be occupied by any part of the forces of the United States in Mexico, and in and about all columns, escorts, convoys, guards and detachments, of the said forces, while engaged in prosecuting the existing war in and against the said republic and while remaining within the same." But, as has already been remarked,² this declaration, (except for purposes of notice,) was a superfluous and unnecessary proceeding, adding nothing to the military authority or jurisdiction, since the region and people to which it related were already subject to the military government incident to the conquest and occupation of enemy's country.

As declared in the late war—Proclamations of the President. It is the period during and immediately succeeding the late civil war that furnishes the most marked illustrations of martial law as specifically proclaimed and declared. Thus, early in the war, the comprehensive proclamation of the President of Sept. 24, 1862, made "subject to martial law" not only insurgent enemies in the insurrectionary States but also "their aiders and abettors within the United States, and all persons discouraging volunteer enlistments, resisting militia drafts, or guilty see the views of Gen. Jackson, as expressed in his extended G. O. of March, 1815, in the case of Louaillier, tried by court-martial.

Gen. Jackson's fine was refunded to him, with interest, by Act of Congress of Feb. 16, 1844, nearly thirty years after its imposition, and only in the year before his death.

As to the action of Gen. Jackson in disregarding a writ of habeas corpus issued, in Florida, in 1821, by the U. S. Dist. Judge Fromentin, in the case of Col. Collava, then recently Spanish Governor of Pensacola, who had been arrested and confined by Gen. Jackson's order—see Halleck, 379; Parton, Life of Jackson, ch. XLV, p. 614. This instance is not, in a legal point of view, important.

of any disloyal practice affording aid and comfort to rebels against the authority of the United States."¹

- Further, by proclamation of the President of July 5, 1864, martial law was established in the separate State of Kentucky, (not one of the Confederate States;) the reasons for such action being set forth in the preamble as follows:—"Whereas many citizens of the State of Kentucky have joined the forces of the insurgents, and such insurgents have, on several occasions, entered the said State of Kentucky in large force, and, not without aid and comfort furnished by disaffected and disloyal citizens of the United States residing therein, have not only disturbed the public peace, but have overborne the civil authorities and made flagrant civil war, destroying property and life in various parts of that State; And whereas it has been made known to the President of the United States by the officers commanding the national armies, that combinations have been formed in the said State of Kentucky with a purpose of inciting rebel forces to renew the said operations of civil war within the said State, and thereby to embarrass the United States armies now operating in the said States of Virginia and Georgia, and even to endanger their safety:" And it is subjoined, in conclusion, as follows:—"The martial law herein proclaimed, and the things in that respect herein ordered, will not be deemed or taken to interfere with the holding of lawful elections or with the proceedings of the constitutional legislature of Kentucky, or with the administration of justice in the courts of law existing therein between citizens of the United States in suits or proceedings which do not affect the military operations or the constituted authorities of the government of the United States."²

1. This proclamation also suspended the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus. See post.

2. The privilege of the writ of habeas corpus was also suspended by this proclamation. See post. As to the declaration of martial law, it was revoked in the next year, by proclamation of Oct. 12, 1865. In this connection, see G. O. 51, Dept. of Ky., 1865, and Circ. No. 3; Id., as to the classes of persons affected by martial law in Kentucky, and its operation in suspending the functions of civil courts therein.

In connection further with these two proclamations, (the only ones by which martial law was in terms declared by the President,) see other executive proclamations, noted post, suspending the issue of the writ of habeas corpus; also proclamation of March 17, 1865, making amenable to arrest and trial by court-martial "persons dwelling in contiguous foreign territory" who furnish arms or munitions of war to hostile In-

Action of military commanders. Of declarations of martial law by military commanders during the late war, (some of which, for reasons already set forth, were unnecessary, the region to which they applied being under or subject to military government,) the following may be noticed as the principal:

(1.) By an order of Maj. Gen. Fremont, commanding Western Department, dated August 14, 1861, martial law was 'declared and established in the city and county of St. Louis.' The order appointed Major J. McKinstry Provost Marshal, and directed that 'all orders and regulations issued by him should be respected and obeyed.' That officer thereupon published a proclamation in which it was recited that the power conferred upon him would be exercised only in cases where the civil law was "found to be inadequate to the maintenance of the public peace and the public safety." In a subsequent order he prohibited the wearing of concealed weapons, and later the sale or giving away of any description of fire-arms without a special permit.

Gen. Fremont was succeeded in command by Maj. Gen. Halleck in November, 1861, and by G. O. 34, Dept. of the Mo., of Dec. 26, 1861, martial law was formally declared by the latter in the city of St. Louis, and "in and about all railroads in this State," (Missouri,) "in virtue," as it was specified, "of authority conferred by the President of the United States." It was added:—"It is not intended by this declaration to interfere with the jurisdiction of any civil court which is loyal to the Government of the United States, and which will aid the military authorities in enforcing order and punishing crimes." A subsequent Gen. Order, No. 39 of 1862, reiterates that the previous declaration is not designed to affect the courts, which are to proceed as before in the exercise of their functions, or the operation of the ordinances or laws of the City or State. Later, however, the department commander was obliged to enforce more strictly the martial law status and to suspend in a measure the civil authority.¹

(2.) On April 25, 1862, by G. O. 8 of the Dept. of the South, (including South Carolina, Georgia and Florida,) Maj. Gen. David Hunter, Department Commander, declared martial law within the Department. In a subsequent Order, No. 11 of May 9, he repeated this declaration, adding—"Slavery and martial law in a free country are altogether incompatible; the persons in these three States heretofore held as slaves are therefore declared forever free."

(3.) Upon the occupation by the Union forces of New Orleans in 1862, Maj. Gen. Butler, commanding Department of the Gulf, by proclamation of May 1st, placed the city and its environs under martial law. In this proclamation it was declared, among other things, that:—"All the rights of property, of whatever kind, will be held inviolate, subject only to the laws of the United States." All the inhabitants are enjoined to pursue their usual avocations. * * * All disorders, disturbances of the peace, and crimes of an aggravated nature, interfering with the forces or laws of the United States, will be referred to a military court for trial and punishment. Other misdemeanors will be subject to the municipal authority, if it desires to act. Civil causes between party and party will be referred to the ordinary tribunals. * * * No publication of newspapers, pamphlets, or hand bills, giving accounts of the movements of the soldiers of the United States within this department, reflecting in any way upon the United States, intended in any way to influence the public mind against the United States, will be permitted, and all articles on war news, editorial comments, or correspondence making comments upon the movements of the armies of the United States, must be submitted to the examination of an officer who will be

1. This Order, so far as regards slavery, was, in the President's proclamation of May 19, 1862, declared to be unauthorized and void; the President, as it was expressed, reserving the power to himself to emancipate the slaves, when deemed necessary to exercise it. It was in fact exercised in the proclamation of January 1st following.

2. Compare the following extract from the proclamation of May 14, 1861, issued by the same general, as commanding Dept. of Annapolis, upon his occupying Baltimore:—"Private property will not be interfered with by the men under my command, nor allowed to be interfered with by others, except in so far as it may be used to afford aid and comfort to those in rebellion against the government whether here or elsewhere, all of which property, munitions of war, and that are fitted to aid and support the rebellion, will be seized and held subject to confiscation."

detailed for that purpose from these headquarters. * * * All the requirements of martial law will be imposed so long as, in the judgment of the United States authorities, it may be necessary; and while it is desired by these authorities to exercise this government mildly, and after the usages of the past, it must not be supposed that it will not be rigorously and firmly administered as the occasion calls for it."

Sundry features of this military government, (which continued to March 18, 1866,) have been referred to under the preceding Title.

(4.) By a proclamation of Maj. Gen. R. C. Schenck, as Commander of the Middle Department, dated Baltimore, June 30, 1863, martial law was declared in Baltimore and the western counties of Maryland, as being required "as a military necessity" by reason of "the immediate presence of a rebel army within the Department and State."¹ The proclamation further specifies as follows:—"The General Commanding gives assurance that this suspension of the civil government within the limits defined shall not extend beyond the necessities of the occasion. All the courts, tribunals and political functionaries of State, county and city authority, are to continue in the discharge of their duties as in times of peace; only in no way interfering with the exercise of the predominant power assumed and asserted by the military authority. All peaceful citizens are required to remain quietly at their homes and in pursuit of their ordinary avocations, except as they may be possibly subject to call for personal service, or other necessary requisitions, for military purposes or uses hereafter. All seditious language or mischievous practices tending to the encouragement of rebellion are especially prohibited, and will be promptly made the subject of observation and treatment. Traitorous and dangerous persons must expect to be dealt with as the public safety may seem to require. 'To save the country is paramount to all other considerations.'"²

1. It was held—June, 1865—by the Judge Advocate General that, though this proclamation had never been in terms revoked, it had, at that date, ceased to be operative, the emergency having sometime ceased to exist. In the case of Mrs. Sarah Hutchins, (G. O. 115, Middle Dept., 1864,) it is alleged in the specification that the offence occurred on November 3, 1864, "in Baltimore, a place under martial law."

2. To this declaration are appended "ORDERS UNDER MARTIAL LAW," as follows:—

ORDERS.—Until further orders, no arms or ammunition shall be sold

(5.) By G. O. 17, Dept. of Kansas, 1862, the Department Commander declared martial law throughout the State of Kansas, with a view to the suppression therein of "jayhawking." In G. O. 54 of the same Department, of 1864, a further proclamation was made of martial law within the State, in anticipation of the invasion of the same by the army under Gen. Price. The Order specifies that, as the status thus established is intended to continue only while danger of invasion is apprehended, the functions of the civil authorities will not be disturbed nor the proceedings or processes of the courts interrupted.

(6.) In an Order of the Department of the Ohio, of 1862, martial law was declared within Jefferson county, Kentucky, for the reason as stated that the civil authorities were unable to afford the proper protection to persons or property.¹ In a further Order of the same Department, of 1863, the commanding general, in view of the threatened advance of the forces under Gen. Morgan, de-by any dealer or other person within the city and county of Baltimore without a permit from the General Commanding the Military Department, or from such officer as shall be duly authorized to grant the same. Any violation of this order shall subject the party offending to arrest and punishment.

Until further orders, no person will be permitted to leave the city of Baltimore without a pass, properly signed by the Provost Marshal, and any one attempting to violate this order shall be promptly arrested and brought before the Provost Marshal for examination.

Until further orders, no one will be permitted to pass the barricades, or into or out of the city, between the hours of 10 P. M. and 4 o'clock A. M., without giving the proper countersign to the guard in charge.

Until further orders, no club-house or other place of like resort shall remain open, without a permission given by the General Commanding. Any attempt to violate this order will subject the club-house and property to seizure and occupation by the military, and the frequenters, who engage in or encourage such violation, to arrest.

Until further orders, all bars, coffee-houses, drinking saloons and other places of like resort shall be closed between the hours of 8 P. M. and 8 A. M. Any liquor dealer or keeper of a drinking saloon or other person selling intoxicating drinks who violates this order shall be put under arrest, his premises seized and his liquors confiscated for the benefit of the hospitals.

Until further orders, the General Commanding directs that the stores, shops, manufactories and other places of business other than apothecary shops and printing offices of daily journals, be closed at 5 P. M., for the purpose of giving patriotic citizens an opportunity to drill and make themselves expert in the use of arms.

clared martial law in Cincinnati, Ohio, and the cities, on the opposite bank of the Ohio River, of Covington and Newport, Kentucky. The Order required that all business be suspended, and that the citizens organize for the common defence.¹

(7.) A further and more recent instance is the declaration of martial law at New Orleans by the Department Commander, of July 30, 1866, resorted to on the occasion of a riot.² In another Order, of the next month,³ it is announced that the martial law thus declared will be continued and enforced "so far as may be required for the preservation of the public peace and the protection of life and property."

(8.) A still later occasion was that of a flood in the Tennessee River at Chattanooga in March, 1867, which imperilled life and property and called for unusual precautions for their protection. At the request of the civil authorities, Captain J. Kline, 25th Infantry, commanding the post, placed the city under martial law and directed the seizure and use, by the military, of boats for the purposes of the moving of household goods, &c.⁴ In a communication from the mayor, of March 15th, in which the post commander is formally thanked for his services, it is said:—"Martial law, under ordinary circumstances, is distasteful to a people inclined to the pursuits of civil life; but your action in this case must meet the commendation of all right-thinking people."⁵

(9.) The lawless disturbances caused by the so-called "Kuklux" induced a proclamation of the President, of October 17, 1871, (issued under an authority to be noticed later,) suspending the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, and thus virtually initiating martial law, in certain designated counties of South Carolina.

1. G. O. 114. It is added:—"The Commanding General, convinced that no one whose services are necessary for the defence of these cities would care to leave now, places no restriction upon travel."

2. G. O. 60, Dept. of La., 1866. This Order is in full as follows:—"In consequence of the riotous and unlawful proceedings of to-day, Martial Law is proclaimed in the City of New Orleans. Brevet Major General A. V. Kautz is appointed Military Governor of the City. He will make his Headquarters in the City Hall, and his orders will be minutely obeyed in every particular. All civil functionaries will report at once to General Kautz, and will be instructed by him with regard to such duties as they may be hereafter required to perform."

Similar action was taken at the same period by the State authorities in North Carolina and Tennessee.

These instances illustrate the nature of martial law as declared and exercised in the United States, and show that it has been resorted to not only pending a war and as a war-measure, but also by way of precaution at periods of public emergency and danger when the civil authorities were apparently powerless to afford adequate protection to life and property.

The Exercise of Martial Law, as connected with the Suspension of the Writ of Habeas Corpus. The most considerable and important part of the exercise of martial law is the making of arrests of civilians charged with offences against the laws of war. But to arrest and hold at will, or with a view to trial by a military tribunal, is practically to suspend the citizen's privilege of the writ of habeas corpus. On the other hand the suspending of the writ by military authority is essentially an exercise of the power of martial law. Thus the two powers are closely connected, the one substantially including or involving the other,¹ and it becomes material to inquire whether, under the provision of the Constitution relating to the suspension of the privilege of the writ,² the President, or a military commander representing him, is authorized to order or effect such suspension.

In the early instance of the "Whiskey Insurrection" in Pennsylvania, in 1794-5, no suspension of the writ was resorted to: sundry of the insurgents were indeed arrested by military authority, but they were duly brought to trial before a civil court.³

During the Burr conspiracy of 1806, Brig. Gen. Wilkinson, commanding in Louisiana, without formally suspending the writ, suspended it in fact so far as to disregard writs issued by the local courts, and even to imprison for a brief period a county judge.⁴ But in the case of two of the supposed conspirators whom Wilkinson caused to be arrested under a charge of treason, the Supreme Court of the United States, in passing upon the question of their criminality, expressed incidentally the opinion that the suspension was a power to be exercised by "the legislature."¹ This dictum was long accepted as settling that the Constitution was to be construed as empowering not the President but Congress alone to suspend the privilege of the writ.²

Early in the recent war, however, the question whether the President was not authorized to exercise the power independently of Congress was raised and considerably discussed. Upon this question having been referred by the President to the Attorney General, the latter, in July, 1861, gave it as his opinion that, while Congress alone could repeal the laws authorizing the issue of the writ, or suspend all right to or privilege of the same in general, the President was empowered to suspend the privilege in cases of particular individuals found necessary to be arrested by him during the emergency on account of complicity with the public enemy.³ By proclamation of May 10, 1861, the President had already authorized the commander of the Union forces in Florida "to suspend there the writ of habeas corpus," if he found it necessary. Later, in an order⁴ issued from the War Department on August 13, 1862, he suspended the writ as to persons liable to draft who should absent themselves from their places of residence or from the country in order to avoid it; and subsequently, by his proclamation of Sept. 24, 1862, (heretofore cited as making subject to martial law all insurgent enemies, their aiders and abettors throughout the United States,) he further ordered:—"That the writ of habeas corpus is suspended in respect to all persons arrested, or who are now, or hereafter during the rebellion shall be, imprisoned in any fort, camp, arsenal, military prison, or other place of confinement by any military authority, or by the sentence of any court-martial or military commission."

man,¹ Chief Justice Taney had held, on circuit at Baltimore, that the power to suspend the writ did not subsist in the Executive but was a legislative function pertaining to Congress alone. The dictum of Chief Justice Marshall was thus reasserted as a positive ruling, and this ruling has been concurred in by a series of decisions in the United States and State courts and by other recognized authorities.²

Further, Congress, by an express provision of the Act of March 3, 1863, c. 81, specifically vested in the President the authority, 'whenever in his judgment the public safety might require it, to suspend the privilege of the writ in any case arising in any part of the United States,'—thus impliedly asserting that the power so to authorize rested in itself alone.³ Pursuant to this Act the President issued his proclamation of September 15, 1863, already referred to, in which he suspended the writ throughout the United States and during the existing rebellion, in all cases where, "by the authority of the President of the United States, military, naval, and civil officers of the United States, or any of them, hold persons under their command, or in their custody, either as prisoners of war, spies, or aiders or abettors of the enemy, or officers, soldiers, or seamen enrolled, drafted, or mustered or enlisted in, or belonging to, the land or naval forces of the United States, or as deserters therefrom, or otherwise amenable to military law, or the Rules and Articles of War, or the rules or regulations prescribed for the military or naval service by authority of the President of the United States; or for resisting a draft, or for any other offence against the military or naval service." It is added: "And I do hereby require all magistrates, attorneys, and other civil officers within the United States, and all officers and others in the military and naval services of the Similar legislation was resorted to by the Congress of the Confederate States by Act of Feb. 15, 1864, in which the power of suspension was expressly declared to be "vested solely in Congress." This Act is given in the Appendix, XVI.

United States, to take distinct notice of this suspension, and to give it full effect, and all citizens of the United States to conduct and govern themselves accordingly."

Subsequently, under the authority of the same Act, the President, by proclamation of July 5, 1864, in declaring martial law in the State of Kentucky, suspended also the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus in the classes of cases specified in that proclamation, as hereinbefore set forth.¹

The Act of 1863 expired with the termination of the rebellion in 1866, and no subsequent suspension has been ordered by the President except in the single case of the unlawful combinations of the so-called "Kuklux" in South Carolina in 1871, in which, by proclamations of Oct. 17 and Nov. 10 of that year, issued in accordance with the special authority given by Congress, in the Act of April 20, 1871, c. 22, s. 4,² (and limited as to its exercise to the end of the next regular session of Congress,) he suspended the writ in ten counties of that State.³

Thus, as a general principle of law, it may be deemed to be settled by the rulings of the courts and weight of legal authority, as well as by the action of Congress and practice of the Executive, that the President is not empowered of his own authority to suspend the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus, and that a declaration of martial law made by him or a military commander, in a district not within the theatre of war, will not justify such suspension in the absence of the sanction of Congress. The result must be that martial law proper will in the future rarely be initiated in the United States where Congress has omitted to provide the means for rendering its exercise effectual. But, in the event of a practical exercise of the same in an adequate emergency, and of the consequent arrest and holding by military authority, in good faith and what is believed to be the full and proper performance of duty, of undoubted public enemies or other criminals, in temporary disregard of judicial process sued out for their release, it can scarcely be questioned that Congress, if it does not expressly ratify the act, will at least protect or indemnify the officers and soldiers concerned by legislation corresponding to that of the statute of March 2, 1867, c. 155, enacted at the close of active hostilities in the late civil war.¹

Jurisdiction of Offences committed by Persons under Martial Law. It need hardly be remarked that martial law, lawfully declared, creates an exception to the general rule of exclusive subjection to the civil jurisdiction, and renders offences against the laws of war, as well as those of a civil character, triable, at the discretion of the commander, (as governed by a consideration for the public interests and the due administration of justice,) by military tribunals.² The powers and procedure of such tribunals will be considered in treating of the Military Commission. The criminal jurisdiction, however, of the civil courts is much less subject to be abridged under Martial Law proper than under Military Government.

VI. TRIAL AND PUNISHMENT OF OFFENCES UNDER THE LAW OF WAR—THE MILITARY COMMISSION.

Authority and Occasion for the Military Commission.

The authority for the military commission is the same as the authority for the making and prosecution of war and for the exercise of military government and martial law. The commission is simply an instrumentality for the more efficient execution of the war powers vested in Congress and the power vested in the President as Commander-in-chief in war. In some instances, as

On this subject, Halleck, (p. 380,) expresses himself as follows:—"Even if it were plain that the words of the Constitution were intended to give this power exclusively to Congress, we think that in a case of public danger, at once so imminent and grave as to admit of no other remedy, the maxim salus populi suprema lex should form the rule of action, and that a suspension of this writ, by the executive and military authorities of the United States, would be justified by the pressure of a visible public necessity: if an act of indemnity were required, it would be the duty of Congress to pass it." will presently be noted, Congress has specifically recognized the military commission as the proper war-court, and in terms provided for the trial thereby of certain offences. In general, however, it has left it to the President, and the military commanders representing him, to employ the commission, as occasion may require, for the investigation and punishment of violations of the laws of war and other offences not cognizable by court-martial.¹

The occasion for the military commission arises principally from the fact that the jurisdiction of the court-martial proper, in our law, is restricted by statute almost exclusively to members of the military force and to certain specific offences defined in a written code. It does not extend to many criminal acts, especially of civilians, peculiar to time of war; and for the trial of these a different tribunal is required. A commander indeed, where authorized to constitute a purely war-court, may designate it by any convenient name; he may style it a "court-martial," and, though not a court-martial proper, it will still be a legal body under the laws of war. But to employ the same name for the two kinds of court could scarcely but result in confusion and in questions as to jurisdiction and power of punishment. Hence, in our military law, the distinctive name of military commission has been adopted for the exclusively war-court, which also, as will hereafter be illustrated, is essentially a distinct tribunal from the court-martial of the Articles of war.

Abroad, the court-martial is employed for the cognizance of offences not only of the officers and soldiers of the army but also of non-military persons subjected to military authority in time of war or rebellion. A recent English writer, in approving the distinction established in this country between the court-martial and the military commission, observes:—"In England both descriptions of courts are called courts-martial, and the general public are consequently not able to discriminate between the two."²

In our early wars, indeed, before the distinction between the two

It is nevertheless the fact that the English court-martial under military government or martial law is distinguished in material particulars from the regular court-martial, and mainly in that it is not governed by the same rules as to its composition, or as to its power of sentence, and that it is more summary in its proceeding. See Hough, 383; Id. (P.) 516, 531, 536; Finlason, Coms. on Mar. Law, 9, 16, 44, 127, 142, 243-5; In re Egan, 5 Blatchford, 321.

species of court was inaugurated, cases which would now be referred to a military commission were brought to trial before special courts-martial. Such was the case of Joshua Hett Smith, tried by court-martial in 1780, under a Resolution of Congress, for assisting and combining with Gen. Arnold in his treasonable proceedings. Such too was the case of Louis Louaillier, brought to trial for being a spy, and for other offences, before a General Court-Martial convened by Gen. Jackson in New Orleans, in March, 1815. Such also were the cases of Arbuthnot and Ambrister, tried by court-martial, in Florida, in April, 1818, for inciting and assisting the Creek Indians to make war against the United States, and convicted and executed as noticed in a previous Chapter.¹

History of the Military Commission in our law—Gen. Scott's "Military Commission." It was not till 1847, upon the occupation by our forces of the territory of Mexico in the war with that nation, that the military commission was, as such, initiated. In G. O. 20 of Feb. 19, of that year, issued from the Headquarters of the Army at Tampico, (as slightly added to by G. O. 190 and 287 of the same series,) it was announced that—"Assassination, murder, poisoning, rape, or the attempt to commit either, malicious stabbing or maiming, malicious assault and battery, robbery, theft, the wanton desecration of churches, cemeteries, or other religious edifices and fixtures, the interruption of religious ceremonies, and the destruction, except by order of a superior officer, of public or private property," whether committed by Mexicans or other civilians in Mexico against individuals of the U. S. military forces, or by such individuals against other such individuals or against Mexicans or civilians; as well as the purchase by Mexicans or civilians in Mexico, from soldiers, of horses, arms, ammunition, equipments or clothing,—should be brought to trial before military commissions.

Thus initiated, commissions were repeatedly convened by Gen. Scott, as also by Gens. Wool and Taylor, mostly in 1847.² The offences tried thereby were not always confined to those specified in the Orders as above cited; such charges as "Manslaughter," "Burglary," "Picking pockets," "Carrying a concealed weapon," "Threatening the lives of soldiers," "Riotous conduct," "Attempting to pass counterfeit money," "Obtaining money under false pretences," "Fraud," "Attempt to defraud the United States," "Introducing spirituous liquor into U. S. barracks"—being also found in the G. O. promulgating the proceedings of trials.

Gen. Scott's "Council of war." The acts thus made punishable by military commissions were mainly criminal offences of the class cognizable by the civil courts in time of peace. A further description of offences, viz. those against the laws of war, yet remained to be provided for. For the trial and punishment of these offences there was inaugurated by Gen. Scott a separate tribunal designated as the council of war, not however materially differing from the military commission except in the class of cases referred to it. The principal charges referred to and passed upon by these courts were Guerilla warfare or Violation of the Laws of War by Guerilleros, and Enticing or Attempting to entice soldiers to desert the U. S. service.¹ The trials, however, were few; this branch of jurisdiction not then becoming fully developed.

Military commissions in the late war. The military commission and council of war of the Mexican war were together the originals of the Military Commission as so extensively employed during the recent war, and as recognized in our existing statute law; the two jurisdictions of the earlier commission and council respectively being united in the later war-court, for which the general designation of "military commission" was retained as the preferable one.² Coming down to the period indicated, note, in V Opins. At. Gen., 55, the case of Capt. Foster who, for the alleged murder of another officer, was put upon trial before a military commission convened in Mexico by Gen. Scott, but escaped pending the hearing. As to the occasion for and legality of these commissions, see Halleck, 783.

2. The term "council of war," as a designation for a court, has not since reappeared in our law or practice.

we find several instances of military commissions convened as early as in 1861.¹ In a General Order, (No. 1,) of Jan. 1, 1862, Maj. Gen. Halleck, commanding Department of Missouri, first defined at length to his command their nature and jurisdiction as then understood; similar action was taken by other department commanders;² and these courts, thus introduced, soon came to be generally adopted as authorized and established tribunals for time of war and rebellion.

Statutory recognition and provision. Presently also they were recognized as legal courts, and their jurisdiction in some cases added to, by express statute. Sec. 30 of the Act of March 3, 1863, c. 75, the original of the present Art. 58, provided that murder, manslaughter, robbery, larceny, and certain other specified crimes, when committed by military persons in time of war or rebellion, should be punishable by sentence of court-martial or military commission.³ So, sec. 38 of the same Act, in amending the previously existing statute relating to spies, provided that this class of offenders should be triable by military commission as well as court-martial, and this form is still retained in the military code—Sec. 1343, Rev. Sts. In the following year, by Act of July 2, 1864, c. 215, commanders of departments and armies were authorized to execute sentences imposed by military commissions upon guerillas. Next, by Act of July 4, 1864, c. 253, s. 6, (not now in force,) inspectors and other civil officials and employees of the quartermaster department of the army were made amenable to trial by military commission (or court-martial) for fraud, neglect of duty and accepting bribes. Meanwhile the Act of June 20, 1864, c. 145, s. 5 & 6, in establishing the Bureau of Military Justice, provided for the revision and recording thereby of the proceedings of military commissions equally as of those of other military courts, and this provision was in substance repeated in the sections of the subsequent Acts of July 28, 1866, and June 23, 1874, (Sec. 1199, Rev. Sts.,) relating to the same branch of the service. In the meantime the Act of March 3, 1865, c. 91, establishing an asylum for disabled volunteers, appropriated as one of its means of support all fines adjudged against volunteer officers and soldiers by sentence either of court-martial or military commission—a provision re-enacted in the subsequent statute on the same subject of March 21, 1866, c. 21, and retained in Sec. 4831, Rev. Sts. A further and the latest specific authorization of the employment of the military commission as a court is found in the "Reconstruction Act" of March 2, 1867, c. 153, s. 3 & 4, to be treated of under the next Title. A pointed contemporaneous recognition of such tribunal is that of the provision of March 2, 1867, c. 155, legalizing proceedings under martial law, trials by military commission, &c., had during the war. A later instance occurs in s. 1 of the Act of March 3, 1873, c. 249, (now Sec. 1344, Rev. Sts.,) establishing a general military prison, (that now at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas,) for the confinement, &c., of offenders convicted before "any court-martial or military commission in the United States." Further statutory recognitions of the commission as a tribunal known to our law are contained in the series of Army Appropriation Acts from that of June 15, 1864, to the most recent of March 3, 1885, in all of which, (with exceptions between 1872 and 1876,) are items of appropriation for the "expenses of courts-martial, military commissions, and courts of inquiry," or for the "compensation of witnesses" or "clerks and witnesses" at or before the same.

Executive and judicial, &c., recognition. The military commission has also been recognized as an authorized provisional tribunal in proclamations and orders of the President and in rulings and opinions of the courts and law officers of the government. It was referred to in the proclamation of Sept. 24, 1862, as an authorized court for the trial of the offences of persons under martial law, and its proceedings and sentences have been approved and executed in and by numerous General Orders issued through the War Department, of which some of the principal will hereafter be cited.¹ The Supreme Court of the United States has acknowledged the validity of its judgments in leading cases,¹ and other courts of the United States and of the States have equally accepted it as a legal body.² In an important adjudication the Supreme Court of Tennessee refers to it as "a tribunal now (1870) as well known and recognized in the laws of the United States as a court-martial."³ Further the Attorneys (and Solicitors) General have repeatedly had occasion to acknowledge its authority and support its jurisdiction; as, for example, in such cases as those of the conspirators concerned in the assassination of President Lincoln,⁴ of Weaver, convicted of murder by military commission in the Reconstruction period,⁵ of the Modoc Indians concerned in the killing of Gen. Canby and Rev. E. Thomas,⁶ and other less marked instances.⁷

Frequency in the late war. Thus sanctioned, these tribunals, pending the civil war, and down to the termination of the operation of the Reconstruction Laws, must have tried and given judgment in upwards of two thousand cases, promulgated in G. O. of the War Department and of the various military departments and armies. Of these cases the principal historically, as well as the more material in a legal point of view, have been, or will be, referred to in the course of the present PART of this work.

Constitution of the Military Commission. In the absence of any statute prescribing by whom military commissions shall be constituted, they have been constituted in practice by the same commanders as are empowered by Arts. 72 and 73 to order general courts-martial, to wit commanders of departments, armies, divisions, and separate brigades.⁸ The President, as

8. As to the general rule, that military commissions are constituted and composed, and their proceedings are conducted, similarly to gen-

Commander-in-chief, may of course assemble military commissions as he may assemble courts-martial. Commanders of "districts" have sometimes, and legally under the general law of war and military government, convened these tribunals, though their commands have been less than a brigade; but such instances have been rare. The provisions of the Articles of war indicating by whom the court is to be constituted where the commander who would regularly order it is in fact the prosecutor or accuser, apply in terms only to general courts-martial, and are not required to be observed in the convening of the more summary tribunals under consideration. Where, however, an unreasonable delay will not thereby be caused, or the interests of the service or of the public otherwise prejudiced, such provisions may well, as a measure of justice or expediency, be observed.¹

Composition. Following the analogy of courts-martial, military commissions in this country have invariably been composed of commissioned officers of the army. Strictly legally they might indeed be composed otherwise should the commander will it—as, for example, in part of civilians or of enlisted men. The court-martial convened under martial law by Gov. Eyre, in Jamaica in 1865, for the trial of Geo. W. Gordon, was a mixed court of one military and two naval officers, and it was in regard to this court that D'Israeli observed in Parliament that—"in the state of martial law there can be no irregularity in the composition of the court, as the best court that can be got must be assembled."²

The rank of the members of a military commission is legally immaterial. In a case indeed, (which must be rare,) of a trial of an officer of the army by such a tribunal, the provision of Art. 79 as to the relative rank of the members will, if practicable, properly be regarded.

In the absence of any law fixing the number of members of a eral courts-martial—see G. O. 20 of 1847, (Gen. Scott;) Do. 1, 7, 33, Dept. of the Mo., 1862; Do. 150, Dept. of the Ohio, 1863; Do. 27, Dept. of the N. West, 1864; 1 Bishop, C. L. § 45, 52; DIGEST, 326. As to the procedure of military courts under martial law, the English writer Pratt observes, (p. 216,)—"The forms of military law should, as far as practicable, be adhered to."

military commission, the same may legally be composed of any number in the discretion of the convening authority. A commission of a single member would be as strictly legal as would be one of thirteen members. In his General Orders already cited,¹ Gen. Scott directed that military commissions should be governed as to their composition, &c., by the provisions of the Articles of war prescribing the number of members, &c., for courts-martial: as to councils of war, it was specified that they should consist of "not less than three nor more than thirteen officers." In Gen. Halleck's Order of Jan. 1, 1862, heretofore noticed,² it was declared:—"They" (military commissions) "will be composed of not less than three members, one of whom will act as judge advocate or recorder where no officer is designated for that duty. A larger number will be detailed where the public service will permit." In practice during the late war, while commissions were most commonly constituted with five members, three was a not unusual number, and was regarded as the proper minimum.³ The court in Vallandigham's case was convened with nine members of whom seven acted on the trial. In practice also a separate officer has been almost invariably detailed as judge advocate.⁴

Jurisdiction—As to place. (1.) A military commission, (except where otherwise authorized by statute,) can legally assume jurisdiction only of offences committed within the field of the command of the convening commander. Thus a commission ordered upon the composition of this court as unauthorized—as of course it was by the law governing courts-martial proper. It appears from the report of the Commissioners on the Jamaica Case, (Finlason, Hist., p. 110,) that this court had been preceded, during the same exigency, by one "consisting partly of members of the legislature." In the Demerara Case, in 1823, a militia officer, (really the head of the colonial judiciary, commissioned pro hac vice in the militia,) was associated with officers of the army on the court-martial which tried missionary Smith, a civilian. 2 Hansard, XI, 972.

2. G. O. 1, Dept. of the Mo., 1862.

4. The ruling, however, in G. C. M. O. 267 of 1865, that the proceedings of a military commission for which no judge advocate had been detailed were on that account "illegal," was erroneous, since whether such a tribunal shall or not be supplied with a judge advocate, is, in the absence of law on the subject, a matter in the discretion of the commander.

by a commander exercising military government, by virtue of his occupation, by his army, of territory of the enemy, cannot take cognizance of an offence committed without such territory.¹ (2.) The place must be the theatre of war or a place where military government or martial law may legally be exercised; otherwise a military commission, (unless specially empowered by statute,) will have no jurisdiction of offences committed there.² The ruling in the leading case of Ex parte Milligan,³ that a military commission, which had assumed jurisdiction of offences committed in 1862 in Indiana,—a locality not involved in war nor subject to any form of military dominion,—had exceeded its powers, has been referred to under the previous Titles, where also the fields of military government and martial law have been defined. (3.) It has further been held by English authorities that, to give jurisdiction to the war-court, the trial must be had within the theatre of war, military government, or martial law; that, if held elsewhere, and where the civil courts are open and available, the proceedings and sentence will be coram non judice.⁴ Thus it is considered by Finlason that the trial, by a military court, of Wolf Tone in 1798, was illegal because he was tried in Dublin outside of the region of law and martial law.⁵

In the Jamaica Case, it was held by Chief Justice Cockburn, in Queen v. Nelson & Brand, that Governor Eyre acted illegally in arresting Gordon at Kingston, outside the "proclaimed district," (the district placed by the Governor's proclamation under martial law,) where he would have been entitled to a jury trial in a civil court, and removing him within that district for trial and punishment before a martial court. These rules which have their origin in the fact that war, being an exceptional status, can authorize the exercise of military power and jurisdiction only within the limits—as to place, time, and subjects—of its actual existence and operation, have not always been strictly regarded in our practice. A singular instance of their disregard during the late war is presented by the case of T. E. Hogg and his six associates, who, for the alleged offence of taking passage upon a U. S. merchant vessel at Panama, (a foreign country,) in November, 1864, with the secret purpose of subsequently seizing by force and arms the ship and cargo in the interest of the Southern confederacy, were, upon apprehension, transported to, and tried by military commission at, San Francisco, a place quite without the theatre of the war.¹

As to time. An offence, to be brought within the cognizance of a military commission, must have been committed within the period of the war or of the exercise of military government or martial law. As in the ordinary criminal law one cannot legally be punished for what is not an offence at the time of the sentence,² so a military commission cannot, (in the absence of specific statutory authority,) legally assume jurisdiction of, or impose a punishment for, an offence committed either before or after the war or other exigency authorizing the exercise of military power.³ Thus, a military commander, in the exercise of military government over enemy's territory occupied by his army, cannot, with whatever good intention, legally bring to trial before military commissions ordered by him offenders whose crimes were committed prior to the occupation. So, while the jurisdiction may be continued after active hostilities have ceased, it cannot be maintained after the date of a peace or other form of absolute discontinuance, by the competent authority, of the war status. Thus, in the case, already referred to, of Capt. Foster, of the Georgia volunteers, charged with the murder of Lieut. Goff, Pa. vols., in Mexico, pending the Mexican war, it was held by Atty. Gen. Toucey that, the temporary military government "having ceased by the restoration of the Mexican authorities, neither the offence nor any prosecution for it can any longer, in contemplation of law, have existence."¹ So, where the status has been that of martial law proper, the jurisdiction expires with the formal revocation of the declaration of the same, or, in the absence of a formal revocation, with the complete passing off of the exigency.² Where trials, or proceedings for trials, founded on martial law, are pending, the status should be preserved for the purposes of such trials, and till the findings, and sentences if any, are finally acted upon.

As to persons. From what has heretofore been said in regard to the application of the laws of war to enemies in arms, and their operation under a state of military government or martial law, it will have been seen that the classes of persons who in our law may become subject to the jurisdiction of military commissions are the following: (1.) Individuals of the enemy's army who have been guilty of illegitimate warfare or other offences in violation of the laws of war; (2.) Inhabitants of enemy's country occupied and held by the right of conquest; (3.) Inhabitants of places or districts under martial law; (4.) Officers and soldiers of our own army, or persons serving with it in the field, who, in time of war, become chargeable with crimes or offences not cognizable by the criminal courts or under the Articles of war.

Of the first class are persons in the military service of the enemy who have been guilty of any of the descriptions of offences specified under a previous Title¹ as violations of the laws of war;—as those, for example, who have assumed the rôle of the spy, or have taken part in guerilla raids, or the killing, robbery, &c., of defenceless persons or prisoners of war, or have come within our lines to recruit soldiers or for other unauthorized purpose, or have violated a flag of truce or committed other act of treachery or perfidy, or, as paroled prisoners of war, have violated their parole.

1. V Opins., 55. The case of the Modoc Indians, tried, in July, 1873, by military commission after hostilities had been finally concluded, may seem to have been an exception to the general rule laid down under this head. The jurisdiction assumed by the government in this instance is defended as follows by Atty. Gen. Williams:—"Doubtless the war with the Modocs is practically ended, unless some of them should escape and renew hostilities. But it is the right of the United States, as there is no agreement for peace, to determine for themselves whether or not anything more ought to be done for the protection of the country or the punishment of crimes growing out of the war." XIV Opins., 253.

The second and third classes embrace much the greater number of individuals who, in our late war and the war with Mexico, were brought to trial before the tribunal under consideration. Among the numerous cases of persons so tried were included upwards of one hundred cases of women. The number of these offenders is illustrated by the great variety of offences and phases of offence of which they were convicted, as specified in the General Orders of the period and noticed under the next head.

The greater part of the offenders embraced in the fourth class have been military persons tried under sec. 30, Act of March 3, 1863, or who became amenable to military commission because of criminal offences committed in places where, by reason of war and military occupation, or of martial law, the ordinary criminal courts were closed. The others of this class were parties who became so amenable by reason of violations of the laws of war or offences of a military character, not included among the acts made punishable by the code of Articles of war. Besides officers and soldiers, there are comprised in this category camp-followers and other civilians employed by the government in connection with the army in war. Thus, in the G. O. of the period of the late war, there are found, (as tried by military commission,) sutlers, officers' servants, teamsters, persons employed on government steamers and transports, or otherwise in the quartermaster, provost marshal and other staff corps, as also individuals serving in such capacities as veterinary surgeon,² government detective,³

As to offences. In the war with Mexico, as has heretofore been noticed, the tribunal known as the "military commission" was employed for the trial and punishment of the ordinary crimes such as in a state of peace would have been taken cognizance of by the criminal courts, while violations of the laws of war were referred to another tribunal designated as "council of war." In the simpler system matured in our recent war both jurisdictions were, as has been seen, united in one court for which was preferably retained the name of military commission. The offences cognizable by military commissions may thus be classed as follows: (1.) Crimes and statutory offences cognizable by State or U. S. courts, and which would properly be tried by such courts if open and acting; (2.) Violations of the laws and usages of war cognizable by military tribunals only; (3.) Breaches of military orders or regulations for which offenders are not legally triable by court-martial under the Articles of war.

Of the offences of the first class, those most frequently brought to trial before military commissions during the late war, as shown by the General Orders, were murder, manslaughter, robbery, larceny, burglary, rape, arson, assault and battery, and attempts to commit the same; criminal conspiracies,⁵ riot, perjury, bribery,

5. Among the conspiracies of this class, or of the first and second classes combined, may here be noted the following:—that of Bowles, Milligan and Horsey, convicted of conspiring together, and with other members of the so-called "Order of American Knights" or "Sons of Liberty," against the U. S. Government, and in the interest of the Rebellion, (G. C. M. O. 214, of 1865;)—that of Herold, Payne and others, convicted of conspiring with John Wilkes Booth, Jefferson Davis and sundry other persons in the assassination of President Lincoln and the attempted assassination of the Secretary of State, Mr. Seward, (G. C. M. O. 356 of 1865;)—that of Capt. Henry Wirz of the confederate army, convicted of conspiring with Jefferson Davis, James A. Seddon, Howell Cobb, John H. Winder, Richard B. Winder and others, against the lives and health of Union soldiers held as prisoners of war at Andersonville, Ga., (G. C. M. O. 607 of 1865;)—that of William Murphy, convicted of conspiring with Davis, Seddon, Judah P. Benjamin and others, to burn and destroy boats on the western rivers, (G. C. M. O. 107 of accepting bribes, forgery, fraud,¹ embezzlement, misappropriation or other illegal disposition of public property, receiving stolen goods, obtaining money or property under false pretences, making or uttering counterfeit money, uttering false Treasury notes, breaches of the peace and disorderly conduct, keeping a disorderly house, selling obscene books, &c., malicious mischief or trespass, carrying concealed weapons, abuse of official authority by civil officials, resisting or evading the draft, discouraging enlistments, purchasing arms, clothing, &c., from soldiers, in violation of Sec. 5438, Rev. Sts., aiding desertion, &c., in violation of Sec. 5455, Rev. Sts. "Treason"—it may be added—was not unfrequently charged, but mostly as a name for some violation of the class next to be mentioned.

Of the second class, of offences in violation of the laws and usages of war, those principally, in the experience of our wars, made the subject of charges and trial, have been—breaches of the law of non-intercourse with the enemy, such as running or attempting to run a blockade;² unauthorized contracting, trading or dealing with, enemies, or furnishing them with money, arms, provisions, medicines, &c.;³ conveying to or from them dispatches, letters, or other communications, passing the lines for any purpose without a permit, or coming back after being sent through the lines and ordered not to return; aiding the enemy by harbor-

T. Semmes and others,) convicted of an attempt to release the confederate prisoners of war at Camp Douglass, near Chicago, and to lay waste and destroy that city, (G. O. 30, Northern Dept., 1865;—that of T. E. Hogg and others convicted of being concerned in the attempt to seize the steamer Salvador at Panama, in 1864, (G. O. 27, Dept. of the Pacific, 1865.)

1. Among the various forms of fraud charged is that of defacing or altering the "U. S." brand on public animals, with fraudulent intent. See cases in G. C. M. O. 488 of 1865; G. O. 111, Dept. of the Mo., 1863; Do. 72, Dept. of Ark., 1864.

2. See cases of running the blockade and conveying munitions to the enemy, in G. C. M. O. 254, 338, 344, of 1864.

3. In this class is included the offence, several times brought to trial, of selling contraband goods, with a view to their being carried secretly through the lines to the enemy, by other persons. See convictions in G. C. M. O. 398 of 1864; Do. 55, 57, 58, 74, of 1865.

persons to slavery in disregard of the President's proclamation of freedom to the slaves, of Jan. 1, 1863.¹

Of the third class are acts prohibited by express order, or in breach of military discipline, such as selling to soldiers citizens' clothing, furnishing them with liquor, introducing liquor or other forbidden articles into the camps, &c., dealing in articles likely to reach and relieve the enemy, violating police, sanitary, or quarantine regulations, &c.²

Offences not cognizable. The subject of the jurisdiction of military commissions is further illustrated by a reference to the classes of cases of which these tribunals cannot legally take cognizance.

Thus they have no jurisdiction of the purely military offences specified in the Articles of war and made punishable by sentence of court-martial; and in repeated cases where they have assumed such jurisdiction their proceedings have been declared invalid in General Orders.³

So, being properly criminal courts, they have no jurisdiction of private controversies between individuals relating to pecuniary obligations, the title to property, &c.⁴ Such matters pertain to the province of the local courts, or to tribunals erected in their stead, and expressly invested with a civil jurisdiction, by the military commander.⁵

sion should be restricted to cases of offence consisting in overt acts, i. e. in unlawful commissions or actual attempts to commit, and not in intentions merely.¹ Thus what would justify in war a precautionary arrest might not always justify a trial as for a specific offence.

Procedure. In the absence of any statute or regulation governing the proceedings of military commissions, the same are commonly conducted according to the rules and forms governing courts-martial.² These war-courts are indeed more summary in their action than are the courts held under the Articles of war,³ and, as their powers are not defined by law, their proceedings—as heretofore indicated—will not be rendered illegal by the omission of details required upon trials by courts-martial, such, for example, as the administering of a specific oath to the members,⁴ or the affording the accused an opportunity of challenge.⁵ So, the record of a military commission will be legally sufficient though much more succinct than the form adopted by courts-martial, as—for example—where it omits to set forth the testimony, or states it only in substance. But, as a general rule, and as the only quite safe and satisfactory course for the rendering of justice to both parties, a military commission will—like a court-martial—permit and pass upon objections interposed to members, as indicated in the 88th Article of war, will formally arraign the prisoner, allow the attendance of counsel, entertain special pleas if any are offered,⁶ receive all the material evidence desired to be introduced,⁷ hear argument, find and sentence after adequate delibera-

4. In some cases indeed proceedings and sentence have been declared inoperative because of this omission. See G. O. 91, 95, 101, 162, of 1863. They were in fact subject to disapproval but not inoperative.

5. See case in G. O. 257 of 1863, where the omission, as indicated by the record, of this and sundry other formalities was deemed sufficient to invalidate the sentence in a capital case. It would more properly have been disapproved.

tion,¹ render to the convening authority a full authenticated record of its proceedings, and, while in general even less technical than a court-martial, will ordinarily and properly be governed, upon all important questions, by the established rules and principles of law and evidence.² Where essential, indeed, to a full investigation or to the doing of justice, these rules and principles will be liberally construed and applied.

The Charge. In some cases the Charge has consisted merely of a designation of the offence unaccompanied by any specification: this, however, is a rare form.³ In general a detailed specification is added precisely as in the court-martial practice. The offence, where a civil crime, is commonly designated in the charge by its legal name, as Murder, Manslaughter, Robbery, Larceny, &c.;⁴ where a violation of the laws of war, by simple terms of description—as Being a guerilla, Unauthorized Trading or Intercourse with the enemy, Recruiting for the enemy within the U. S. lines, Violating a parole by a prisoner of war, &c., or simply Violation of the Laws of War, the specification indicating the species of the violation. Where the offence is both a crime against society and a violation of the laws of war, the charge,

1. A military commission may also, in a proper case, punish as for contempt. See instances in G. O. 58, Dept. of Va. & No. Ca., 1864; G. C. M. O. 37, Fourth Mil. Dist., 1868. This, not by virtue of any statutory authority but under its general province as a court administering the law of war.

3. See case in G. O. 28, Dept. of the Gulf, 1865.

A peculiar form of charge and procedure, in a case in G. O. 49, Sixteenth Army Corps, 1863, may be noticed here. The prosecution is in the nature of a proceeding in rem, the accused being the "Steamboat W. W. Crawford, her officers and cargo," and the specification setting forth a trading from Memphis to places within the enemy's lines, without authority and contrary to military orders. To this charge a person named pleads, in behalf of the steamboat, &c., 'not guilty,' and the commission, after a hearing, finds that the boat, her officers and cargo, are not guilty, and directs that the said parties "be discharged, and released from all liabilities under their bonds."

4. "Treason" has sometimes been employed as a general form of charge, the specification indicating some treasonable act not necessarily constituting technical treason. See G. O. 1, 38, Dept. of the Mo., 1862; Do. 150, Dept. of the Ohio, 1863; Do. 27, Dept. of N. West, 1864.

in its form, has not unfrequently represented both elements, as "Murder, in violation of the laws of war," "Conspiracy, in violation," &c.

The specification should properly set forth, not only the details of the act charged, but the circumstances conferring jurisdiction—as that a state of war existed, military government was exercised, or martial law prevailed, at the time and place of the offence: the status of the offender should also appear—as that he was an officer or soldier of the enemy's army or otherwise a public enemy, or a prisoner of war, or an inhabitant of a place or district under military government or martial law or person there serving. It is not however essential to aver facts of which the court will take judicial notice.

The Sentence. Except in the case of spies,¹ the existing law makes no provision whatever in regard to the quality or quantity of the punishment to be adjudged by the military commission. The power of such a court to award sentence is thus practically without restriction. It is not limited to the penalties known to the practice of courts-martial, nor indeed are the strictly military penalties, such as dismissal, dishonorable discharge, suspension, &c., in general appropriate to it.² The punishments more usually employed have been death, imprisonment and fine. Death has commonly been by hanging. Imprisonment, (ordinarily with hard labor,) has been imposed for a term of months or years,³ (sometimes, and properly, assimilated to the term prescribed for similar offences by the local law,¹) for life, or during the war. In cases of men, the place designated for the imprisonment has usually been a penitentiary or a fort;² in cases of women, during the late war, the place selected was, in the majority of instances, the "Female Prison," at Fitchburg, Mass.:³ the labor required of women under sentence of imprisonment was not unfrequently—'working for the benefit of Union-soldiers or prisoners.'⁴

Sentences of discharge or dismissal from office have, however, been adjudged in some cases; as in G. O. 308 of 1864, (a case of a lieutenant in the revenue service;) Do. 19, Dept. of N. Mex., 1862, (a citizen holding an office in the militia;) Do. 13, Dept. of Va. & No. Ca., 1864, (a case of a medical cadet.) In a case in G. 3. In G. O. 39, Northern Dept., 1864, is a case of imprisonment for thirty years at hard labor. In a case of homicide in G. C. M. O. 276 of 1865, the sentence reads—"To be taken in chains to the military prison at Camp Chase, near Columbus, Ohio, and be kept at hard labor with ball and chain during the war."

Of the finés adjudged by military commissions during the late war, the largest were amounts of $90,000⁵ and $250,000,⁶ imposed respectively upon two agents of the Treasury Department, on conviction of a charge of conspiring to defraud the United States out of the value of captured cotton. In a few cases the fines have been directed in the sentence to be paid to individuals, by way of indemnification for money or property stolen or injuries suffered.⁷ In some other cases the accused has been required by the sentence to restore the specific money, or property, stolen;⁸ in others the amount of a fine, adjudged in favor of the injured party, is directed by the sentence to remain as a lien upon the

2. In a few cases the commission imposes a confinement and then suspends it to enable the accused to enlist. See G. O. 88, Dept. of the Mo., 1863; Do. 98, Id., 1864.

3. A "female prison" at Salem, Mass., was sometimes designated. G. O. 43, Middle Dept., 1864. In cases tried in New Orleans, hard labor in the "City workhouse," or "House of detention for females," was in some cases resorted to, (G. O. 55, Div. W. Miss., 1864; Do. 68, Dept. of the Gulf, 1865;—in Norfolk, the Norfolk Jail, (Do. 102, Dept. of Va. & No. Ca., 1864; G. C. M. O. 17, Dept. of Va. & No. Ca., 1865.) In the case in the Order last cited, (where the conviction was for "manslaughter,") the reviewing authority, (Gen. Butler,) in designating this jail, adds—"If there is no female department there, she will begin one."

4. G. C. M. O. 206, 240, of 1864. In a case of a woman convicted of mail carrying through the lines and other offences, "proper labor, such as working or sewing for the (other) prisoners" at her place of confinement, was ordered. G. O. 102, Dept. of Va. & No. Ca., 1864.

real estate of the offender till paid;¹ in others, again, it is required to be levied on the real and personal property generally, or on certain particular property of the offender;² or it is directed that certain of his property be seized and held as security for the payment of the fine and till the same is paid,³ or that the offender forfeit property to the amount of the fine.⁴

In a few instances the accused, besides being fined, is adjudged to pay the "costs" of the prosecution;⁵ in one case, with the fine, there is added a further sum to cover both the costs of the trial and the "damages" sustained by the government.⁶

In this connection may also be noticed sentences imposing forfeitures of rights—as the forfeiture of a license to sell liquor,⁷ or the forfeiture or prohibition of the exercise of the right to sell fire-arms and ammunition,⁸—penalties generally inflicted in combination with terms of imprisonment.

A further distinct penalty not unfrequently adjudged by military commissions was confiscation of property. Thus, upon conviction of illegally selling liquor to soldiers, there was sometimes imposed, (with other punishment—as confinement,) a confiscation to the United States of all the liquor in possession of the accused.⁹ A similar penalty was often awarded upon a conviction of attempting to smuggle through the lines, or of unlawfully trading in, medicines or other contraband articles.¹⁰ In this class of cases the team, wagon, or boat by which the supplies were transported, was commonly also confiscated.¹ In some instances the sentence was general, confiscating all the property, or all the real or all the personal property, of the offender.² A further peculiar sentence of this class was that adjudged the proprietor of a newspaper by which information and encouragement had been conveyed to the enemy, viz.—‘that the press, types, furniture and material of the printing office, be confiscated and sold for the use of the United States.’³

Another species of punishment often imposed was banishment or expulsion beyond the military lines and within the lines of the enemy,⁴ or outside of the military department,⁵ or from or without the State,⁶ or to a particular locality—as to a “free State,”⁷ or “north of Philadelphia,”⁸ or “north of the Ohio River,”⁹ or to a place “not south of New Jersey.”¹⁰ An offender claiming to be a British subject was sentenced to be banished from the United States.¹¹ Parties were also sentenced to remain during the war within the limits of a certain county.¹ In some cases they were required to remain in the place to which they were condemned to be sent, under penalty of being shot,² or imprisoned,³ if they left it or returned. In others the sentence required that they be paroled to remain within the limits fixed;⁴ and in others also to give bond to keep such parole.⁵

A further and frequent sentence was to furnish a bond with approved security in a certain penal sum for the future good behaviour or loyal conduct of the offender. This penalty was usually required as a condition to release from military custody, either after a term of imprisonment adjudged by the same sentence, or in connection with fine, or as a sole punishment.⁶

With the requirement of the bond is often combined one to the effect that the accused take an oath of allegiance to the United States; the form of the sentence generally being that he be confined, or not released, till he take the oath and give the bond.⁷

Again, where bond and oath are both enjoined, the bond is sometimes required to be given for the faithful performance of the oath.⁸

A sentence to take an oath of allegiance merely, i. e. without the condition that the accused be not released, or be confined, till he take it, has been disapproved as an inadvisable sentence, because, if he refuses, he cannot be forced to take it, or, if he be forced, the oath will not be obligatory.¹

Action by the Reviewing Authority. The action authorized to be taken by reviewing officers upon the proceedings and sentences of military commissions is distinguished from that which may legally be taken upon the records of courts-martial, in the wider and more varied exercise of authority permitted in the former case. Thus, in disapproving, remitting, &c., findings or sentences of military commissions, the commander has frequently directed the release of the accused upon his entering into a bond with sufficient sureties for his good behaviour or loyal conduct in the future, and in some cases also taking an oath of allegiance; or the accused has been required to take the oath and give bond for its faithful performance.² Bonds, oaths, or bond and oath, have even been ordered where the accused has been acquitted.³

In passing upon convictions, or even acquittals, it has also sometimes been ordered by the commander, in remitting the sentences or disapproving, (or even approving,) the proceedings that the accused, on being released, be sent 'beyond the lines, south,' or to some particular locality at the north, under penalty—it is occasionally added—of imprisonment, &c., if he returns, or leaves the appointed place, during the war. In some instances, his release bond is required for the faithful performance both of the oath and of a parole, also required of the accused, to remain at his residence during the continuance of the war. Oath and parole are sometimes required without any bond. Do. 23, Id.

is made conditional upon his residing or remaining at the place indicated. In other cases the deportation is ordered in the event of his failing to take an oath or give a bond—either or both—required by the sentence.¹ Again a remission is granted on condition of the payment by the accused of a certain sum;² or, (where he may properly be enlisted and desires to enlist,) upon his enlisting as a soldier in our army.³

Action by Judicial Authority. In conclusion it may be remarked that, as in the case of the judgment of a court-martial,⁴ and as held by the Supreme Court in Ex parte Vallandigham,⁵ the proceedings or sentences of military commissions are not subject as such to be appealed from to, or to be directly revised by, any civil tribunal.

VII. MILITARY AUTHORITY AND JURISDICTION UNDER THE RECONSTRUCTION ACTS OF 1867.

To complete the general subject under consideration, it will be proper to give some account of the military government administered during the Reconstruction period of 1867–1870.

The legal Situation. The active hostilities incident upon the war of the rebellion having substantially ceased, the Presi-

O. 68, Dept. of the Ohio, 1863,) the sentence of confinement in a fortress during the war was commuted by his being put beyond our military lines, under penalty of being arrested and confined according to his sentence in case of his return within the lines. In a case in G. O. 4, Dept. of the Mo., 1865, the accused is ordered to be released on taking the oath of allegiance, and on condition that he 'reside in the free States north of the Ohio river, and east of the Illinois Central Railroad, not to return to Missouri during the war under pain of being imprisoned at hard labor.' dent, in the spring and summer of 1865, appointed, (as has heretofore been noticed,¹) provisional governors for the insurrectionary States, and in 1866 proclaimed the war to be at an end. Congress was at that time in political antagonism to the President, and the question whether the proclamations of 1866 were constitutionally authorized; whether Congress rather than the President was not the power to declare the status belli to be terminated—was considerably disputed. The position that the action of the President was not competent to and did not put an end to such status was ably sustained in an opinion of Attorney General Hoar,² (hereafter to be referred to as relating to the legality of a certain trial by military commission under the Reconstruction Acts,) in which it was well argued that Congress, being invested by the Constitution with the power to declare war and suppress insurrection, was alone empowered to determine when the rebellion should be considered as finally suppressed, and the pre-existing normal condition restored.³ This argument applied with special force to an insurrection of such magnitude as to have amounted to a civil war and in which the insurgents had come to be treated as belligerents.

But a further claim, and one subsequently supported by the Supreme Court was, that, under the injunction of the Constitution, (Art. IV, Sec. 4,) that—“The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government,” Congress was both authorized and required to provide, by appropriate legislation, for the restoration of the States to their normal political relations, and by such action to terminate, in law and in fact, the status of insurrection.

The ruling referred to of the Supreme Court was that made in 1868, in the leading case of Texas v. White.⁴ It was there held that “the power to carry into effect the clause of guaranty is primarily a legislative power and resides in Congress;” that while the President was authorized, during the continuance of the war, to institute temporary governments in the insurgent States, such governments could be but provisional only; and that it devolved upon Congress, after having provided for the suppression of active rebellion, to take measures for the substitution of republican governments in harmony with the Union in the place of the revolutionary ones which had been imposed upon the States.

3. And it was urged that the Act of March 2, 1867, (presently to be cited,) was a legislative declaration by Congress that the war status was not terminated. Compare Perkins v. Rogers, 35 Ind. 124.

The Legislation Resorted to. Proceeding upon such or like views of its constitutional powers,¹ Congress, on March 2, 1867, enacted the first of the Reconstruction Laws, entitled "An Act to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States," and expressed as follows:—

"Whereas no legal State governments or adequate protection for life or property now exists in the rebel States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Florida, Texas, and Arkansas; and whereas it is necessary that peace and good order should be enforced in said States until loyal and republican State governments can be legally established: Therefore—

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That said rebel States shall be divided into military districts and made subject to the military authority of the United States as hereinafter prescribed; and for that purpose Virginia shall constitute the first district; North Carolina and South Carolina the second district; Georgia, Alabama and Florida the third district; Mississippi and Arkansas the fourth district; and Louisiana and Texas the fifth district.

"SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of the President to assign to the command of each of said districts an officer of the army not below the rank of brigadier general, and to detail a sufficient military force to enable such officer to perform his duties and enforce his authority within the district to which he is assigned.

"SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That it shall be the duty of each officer assigned as aforesaid to protect all persons in their rights of person and property, to suppress insurrection, disorder, and violence, and to punish, or cause to be punished, all disturbers of the public peace and criminals, and to this end he may allow local civil tribunals to take jurisdiction of and to try offenders, or, when in his judgment it may be necessary for the trial of offenders, he shall have power to organize military commissions or tribunals for that purpose, and all interference, under color of State authority, with the exercise of military authority under this act, shall be null and void.

"SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That all persons put under military arrest by virtue of this act shall be tried without unnecessary delay, and no cruel or unusual punishment shall be inflicted; and no sentence of any military commission or tribunal hereby authorized, affecting the life or liberty of any person, shall be executed until it is approved by the officer in command of the district, and the laws and regulations for the government of the army shall not be affected by this act, except in so far as they conflict with its provisions: Provided, That no sentence of death, under the provisions of this act, shall be carried into effect without the approval of the President.

"SEC. 5. And be it further enacted, That when the people of any one of said rebel States shall have formed a constitution of government in conformity with the Constitution of the United States in all respects, framed by a convention of delegates elected by the male citizens of said State twenty-one years old and upward, of whatever race, color, or previous condition, who have been resident in said State for one year previous to the day of such election, except such as may be disfranchised for participation in the rebellion, or for felony at common law; and when such constitution shall provide that the elective franchise shall be enjoyed by all such persons as have the qualifications herein stated for electors of delegates; and when such constitution shall be ratified by a majority of the persons voting on the question of ratification who are qualified as electors for delegates; and when such constitution shall have been submitted to Congress for examination and approval, and Congress shall have approved the same; and when said State, by a vote of its legislature elected under said constitution, shall have adopted the amendment to the Constitution of the United States proposed by the Thirty-ninth Congress, and known as article fourteen;¹ and when said article shall have become a part of the Constitution of the United States, said State shall be declared entitled to representation in Congress, and senators and representatives shall be admitted therefrom on their taking the oath prescribed by law; and then and thereafter the preceding sections of this act shall be inoperative in said State: Provided, That no person excluded from the privilege of holding office by said proposed amendment to the Constitution of the United States shall be eligible to election as a member of the convention to frame a constitution for any of said rebel States, nor shall any such person vote for members of such convention.

1. The Fifteenth Amendment, proposed to the legislatures of the several States by Congress in February, 1869, was also required to be ratified by the insurgent States not admitted prior to that date, to wit by Virginia, Georgia, Mississippi and Texas, as a condition to their admission to representation.

"SEC. 6. And be it further enacted, That until the people of said rebel States shall be by law admitted to representation in the Congress of the United States, any civil government which may exist therein shall be deemed provisional only, and in all respects subject to the paramount authority of the United States at any time to abolish, modify, control, or supersede the same; and in all elections to any office under such provisional governments all persons shall be entitled to vote, and none others, who are entitled to vote under the fifth section of this act; and no person shall be eligible to any office under any such provisional governments who would be disqualified from holding office under the provisions of the third article of said constitutional amendment."

A second Act followed, on March 23, 1867, which related merely to the registration of voters, election of delegates to the constitutional conventions, procedure of the conventions, submission of the constitutions to the popular vote, action by Congress upon the result, &c.,—and need not be cited in this connection.

Upon the passage of the first Act, assignments were forthwith made, by the President,¹ of general officers as commanders of the five military districts, and these officers at once entered upon the exercise of their commands.

Some of these commanders having proceeded to exercise powers deemed by the President to be of questionable legality, the Attorney General, (Stanbery,) was called upon for an opinion as to the extent of their authority. In his opinion, (of June 12, 1867,²) he held in substance that, hostilities having ceased, an Act conferring military authority over civilians was to be strictly construed; that the authority of the district commanders under the Act was restricted to measures for the suppression of violence and disorder and the protection of life and property, in other words was a police power merely, and did not extend to the exercise of civil government; that the commanders were not empowered to remove or appoint civil officers, abrogate or modify civil laws or ordinances, or interfere with the course of civil justice except in criminal cases; and that in such cases they could properly supersede the civil jurisdiction by the institution of military tribunals only in extreme emergencies. To the jurisdiction of these tribunals limitations were indicated which will be adverted to hereafter.

In view mainly of this opinion,¹ Congress, on July 19th following, proceeded to enact a third "supplementary" statute,² by which full power and discretion to remove and appoint civil offi-

1. Chief Justice Chase, in his Address to the Bar at Raleigh, in June, 1867, had meanwhile remarked, in reference to the Reconstruction legislation of March, that, under it, military authority existed 'only to prevent illegal violence to persons and property, and facilitate the restoration of the States.'

2. The only portions of the Act which are material in this connection, (the rest relating to qualifications of voters, boards of registration, &c.,) are Secs. 1, 2, 3, 4, 10, and 11, as follows:—

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That it is hereby declared to have been the true intent and meaning of the act of the second day of March, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, entitled 'An act to provide for the more efficient government of the rebel States,' and of the act supplementary thereto, passed on the twenty-third day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, that the governments then existing in the rebel States of Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama, Louisiana, Florida, Texas, and Arkansas, were not legal State governments; and that thereafter said governments, if continued, were to be continued subject in all respects to the military commanders of the respective districts, and to the paramount authority of Congress.

"SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That the commander of any district named in said act shall have power, subject to the disapproval of the General of the army of the United States, and to have effect till disapproved, whenever in the opinion of such commander the proper administration of said act shall require it, to suspend or remove from office, or from the performance of official duties and the exercise of official powers, any officer or person holding or exercising, or professing to hold or exercise, any civil or military office or duty in such district under any power, election, appointment, or authority derived from, or granted by, or claimed under, any so-called State or the government thereof, or any municipal or other division thereof; and upon such suspension or removal such commander, subject to the disapproval of the General as aforesaid, shall have power to provide from time to time for the performance of the said duties of such officer or person so suspended or removed, by the detail of some competent officer or soldier of the army, or cers in the insurrectionary States within their commands were expressly vested in the district commanders, (and in the General of the Army,) and it was declared that the existing State governments should, during their continuance, remain "subject in all respects" to the authority of such commanders and of Congress.

The Acts as passed upon by the Courts. The "Reconstruction Laws," thus enacted,² continued to be executed to the date—July, 1870—of the admission to representation in Congress by the appointment of some other person, to perform the same, and to fill vacancies occasioned by death, resignation, or otherwise.

"SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the General of the army of the United States shall be invested with all the powers of suspension, removal, appointment, and detail granted in the preceding section to district commanders.

"SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the acts of the officers of the army already done in removing, in said districts, persons exercising the functions of civil officers, and appointing others in their stead, are hereby confirmed: Provided, That any person heretofore or hereafter appointed by any district commander to exercise the functions of any civil office, may be removed either by the military officer in command of the district, or by the General of the army. And it shall be the duty of such commander to remove from office as aforesaid all persons who are disloyal to the government of the United States, or who use their official influence in any manner to hinder, delay, prevent, or obstruct the due and proper administration of this act and the acts to which it is supplementary.

"SEC. 10. And be it further enacted, That no district commander or member of the board of registration, or any of the officers or appointees acting under them, shall be bound in his action by any opinion of any civil officer of the United States.

"SEC. 11. And be it further enacted, That all the provisions of this act and of the acts to which this is supplementary shall be construed liberally, to the end that all the intents thereof may be fully and perfectly carried out."

1. Of this body of legislation it is remarked by the Supreme Court of Texas, in Johnson v. State, 33 Texas, 570, as follows:—"The national legislature used its legitimate powers with moderation and magnanimity; endeavoring to encourage the formation of republican governments in these States, and bring the people back to a due appreciation of law, and of the liberty which is secured to the free enjoyment of every citizen under the Constitution of the United States."

2. They were all passed over the veto of the President. Vol. 14, Stats. at Large, 429, 430; Do. 15, Id., 4, 5, 16. And see Cooley, note to 2 Story, 649-653.

The later supplementary enactments, of which the principal was that of March 11, 1868, relating to elections, were of inferior importance and need not be quoted.

of the last of the insurrectionary States, being in general sustained as valid legislation by the judiciary. In Texas v. White,¹ above cited, it was held, by the Supreme Court, of these laws generally, that they were enacted by Congress in the exercise of a constitutional power; and in Mississippi v. Johnson,² and Georgia v. Stanton,³ the same court refused to enjoin the President and Secretary of War respectively from carrying such laws into effect, on the ground that the power and duty conferred and imposed thereby were purely executive and political in their nature.

In a few cases a strict construction was given to the powers of the district commanders. Thus in one case in a U. S. District Court, it was held that such a commander was not empowered to place a person in possession of a plantation held under a claim of title by another, in other words that he could not "assume to administer remedial justice between citizens."⁴ So, in a case in a State court,⁵ it was held that the district commander exceeded his authority in setting aside the decision of a board of arbitrators by which a colored man was believed to have been unjustly deprived of his property. In the majority, however, of the cases of this general class adjudicated in the States affected by the Acts in question, a most liberal view was taken of the authority thereby conveyed. Thus, in a case in Louisiana, the court say of these statutes that they "seem to clothe the commanders of districts with a paramount supervisory power over the civil jurisdiction of these States, and a controlling influence over all the administrative functions and powers of State officials." In a case in Texas, the Supreme Court, in recognizing the "binding force" of the Reconstruction Acts, observe: "The orders from time to time issued by the military commander had the force and validity of law." In Arkansas, the court, in sustaining the authority of the district commander to arrest and imprison a citizen, declare that his "imprisonment had the same force and effect as if he had been confined upon a proper warrant from a civil judicial tribunal." In a further case in Texas,⁴ it is remarked of the district commanders that "they exercised legislative power, and this power was as full, ample and complete as if exercised by a senate and house of representatives."

4. Whalen v. Sheridan, 17 Blatchford, 9. But this ruling, (which is very briefly reported,) was made with reference to the provisions of the Act of March 2, 1867, only; those of the Act of July 19 not being taken into consideration.

5. Welborn v. Mayrant, 48 Miss. 652. In the report no reasons are given for this ruling, but the counter opinion of the minority of the court is set forth at length. See post. In a further case, State v. McLane, 31 Texas, 260, it was held that "a lieutenant of a subdivision of the fifth military district had no right to order a judge to dismiss a prosecution for felony pending in court." This conclusion may have been determined by the fact that the order was given not by the district commander but by a subordinate: it is not however placed in terms on this ground. The case arose prior to the enactment of July 19, 1867.

Military Commissions under the Reconstruction Acts—Their legal authority and province. The statutory provisions relating to military commissions, as authorized during the period of reconstruction, were those contained in secs. 3 and 4 of the Act of March 2, 1867, above set forth, empowering the district commanders, when necessary to justice, to order such commissions for the trial of criminals and offenders against public peace and order; and requiring that trials be had without unnecessary delay, that cruel or unusual punishments be not inflicted, and that death sentences be not executed without the approval of the President.

From these provisions the province of military commissions at this juncture is seen to have been mainly to serve as substitutes

1. State v. Heath, 20 La. An. 518. In the minority opinion in Welborn v. Mayrant, above noticed, it is forcibly remarked, that under the Reconstruction Acts "the military commander was the source of power, authority and law. * * * He could annul the constitution or code in whole or in part, or he could make law by his military fiat, as he did. * * * This military authority reached to every corner and hamlet in the State. * * * There was in fact, in Mississippi, from 1865 to 1870, a pure, undisguised, absolute military government."

2. Gates v. Johnson Co., 36 Texas, 145-6. So, in Ex parte Warren, 31 Texas, 143, it was held that, under the Act of July 19, 1867, making the State governments "subject in all respects" to the district commanders, the commander of the 5th district was legally empowered to order that no distinction of color be made by the courts in the admission of witnesses.

for the local courts,¹ in cases where, in the opinion of the commander,—for the statute invested him with the sole discretion in the matter,²—a resort to the military jurisdiction was essential to the due administration of justice. In a few instances offences were passed upon by military commissions which would regularly have been tried by U. S. courts had there been any in operation;³ but no violations of the laws of war, such as are brought to trial before commissions in time of war, were referred to these tribunals at this period. In the majority of cases indeed crimes and disorders, where without political significance, were allowed to be disposed of by the State judiciary.⁴ The trials by military commission under the Reconstruction Laws were in all not much over two hundred in number.⁵

Their jurisdiction. This, while impugned in general terms by the opinion of Atty. Gen. Stanbery above cited,⁶ was sustained by the later opinion of Atty. Gen. Hoar in the case of Weaver

1. See DIGEST, 332. In this view it was ordered in the Second District, (G. O. 18 of 1868,) that the military courts convened therein be "governed by the rules of evidence prescribed by the laws of the State in which the case is tried."

2. In the case of Weaver, the district commander was moved to the exercise of such discretion by a State judge, by whom he was requested to have the accused tried by a military court on the ground that justice could not "probably" be administered by the courts of the State. XIII Opins. At. Gen., 60-1.

3. But offences against the laws of the U. S. were not triable by military commission in districts in which the U. S. courts were exercising their usual functions. DIGEST, 332; G. O. 164, Second Mil. Dist., 1867; Do. 12, Fourth Id., 1867. And see address of Chase C. J. to the bar of Raleigh, June 6, 1867.

4. Thus it was announced in the First District, (G. O. 24 of 1868,) that it was the purpose of the Commanding General—"not to interfere with the operation of the State laws as administered by the civil tribunals, except where the remedies thereby afforded are inadequate to secure to individuals substantial justice." So, in G. O. 10, Third Mil. Dist., 1868, it is said—"The Commanding General desires it to be understood that the trial and punishment of criminals is to be left to the civil authorities, so long as the said authorities are energetic, active, and do justice to the rights of person and property without distinction of race or color." And see Do. 1, 40, Fifth Id., 1867.

5. At some of these trials, however, a considerable number of accused were joined in the same charge and proceedings. Thus 23 were joined in the case published in G. O. 175, Fifth Mil. Dist., 1869.

6. XII Opins., 198, 199.

sentenced to death for murder,¹ as well as, in effect, by the rulings of the courts above cited which upheld the authority exercised by the district commanders as a form of legitimate military government. In the first indeed of the opinions indicated the extent of such jurisdiction was properly held to be limited to offences committed after the passage of the original Act;² and in a case in the Second District, of a citizen brought to trial and sentenced by a military commission convened under such Act, for a crime committed in 1864, the proceedings were disapproved as illegal, and the prisoner was committed to the civil authorities.³ On the other hand, as it was also properly held, such a commission could not be resorted to for the trial of offences after the State in which the same were committed had been admitted to representation in Congress.⁴ The time and scope of the jurisdiction were thus contemporaneous with the period of the operation of the Reconstruction Acts.

As to persons, the jurisdiction of the commission, while mainly exercised over civilians,⁵ was sometimes extended to cases of soldiers where their offences were such as would have been triable by the State (or U. S.) courts if in operation.

As to offences, those taken cognizance of by military commissions at this period were:—first and principally, crimes and disorders made punishable by the local or common law, such as

Sentence. The punishments imposed by the sentences of these commissions were in general of the same nature as those assigned by the laws of the State, (or United States,) in similar cases, viz. death, imprisonment for life or for a term of years or months, and fine. The imprisonment was executed in a penitentiary, a county jail, or at a military post such as the Dry Tortugas, Ship Island, or Fort Macon. In one case¹—of assault and battery on a colored girl—a fine imposed by the sentence was directed by the same to be paid to the injured party. In another case a justice of the peace was sentenced to be removed from office for taking part in the whipping of a colored person.² In cases of soldiers, convicted of criminal offences, punishments of a strictly military character, such as dishonorable discharge and forfeiture of pay, were in general disapproved.³

Other Tribunals. The first of the reconstruction laws authorized district commanders in proper cases "to organize military commissions or tribunals, and the commissions above described were not in fact the only courts instituted under the laws; others also being employed for the disposition of petty offences and the regulation of the internal economy of the commands.

Thus, the District Commanders, especially in the Second and Fifth Districts, resorted also to courts designated as "Post Courts," ordered by the post commanders, or consisting of the post commanders themselves as police magistrates.⁴

In the First, Second and Fifth Districts, the district commanders, either directly or through the post commanders, appointed officers of their commands as Military Commissioners, who were clothed, severally, with the powers of justices of the peace and police judges, and directed to act where the similar civil Exercise of Civil Authority under the Reconstruction Acts. The Act of March 2, 1867, as has been seen, authorized the district commanders "to protect all persons in their rights of person and property," and, in declaring that the existing governments of the insurgent States were not legal, added that "all interference under color of State authority with the exercise of military authority under this Act shall be null and void." The Supplemental Act of July 19, 1867, specifically empowered the district commanders to suspend or remove any civil officials and appoint other persons in their stead, (making it a special duty to remove those obstructing the execution of these Acts,) and confirmed removals and appointments made before its date. It also, as has been remarked, declared that the provisional State governments were, while they subsisted, "to be continued subject in all respects to the military commanders of the respective districts and to the paramount authority of Congress." It further provided that "all the provisions" of the several Reconstruction Acts "shall be construed liberally to the end that all the intents thereof may be fully and perfectly carried out."

Under the broad authority thus expressly and by implication conveyed, (the scope of which was recognized in the rulings of the courts heretofore cited,) many radical acts of civil government, both executive and legislative in their nature, were initiated by the military orders of the district commanders. Among these may be noted the following:—

The removal and appointment of civil officers. This power was exercised in sundry cases of important officials; as, for example, those of Governor,² Secretary of State,³ and Auditor,⁴ of Virginia; of Governor, Treasurer, Secretary of State and Comptroller of Georgia;⁵ of Governor and Attorney General of

Supervision of the police and maintenance of law and order. The police and constabulary of cities, towns and counties were placed under the immediate direction of the post commanders or military commissioners,⁸ and in the Second District were also required to report to and obey the orders of the Provost Marshal General of the District.⁹ Post commanders (and commissioners) were authorized to summon civil officials and citizens generally to aid them in the execution of their orders, and a neglect or refusal to render the required assistance was made a misdemeanor punishable by fine and imprisonment to be adjudged by a military court.¹ Assemblages of armed organizations were forbidden,² masked and disguised persons were directed to be arrested,³ and the carrying of deadly weapons was prohibited.⁴ On special occasions such as that of a riot at Mobile in 1867, and of the assassination, at Columbus, Georgia, in 1868, of a member of the Constitutional Convention, orders were issued for the more effectual suppression of disorder and violence, newspapers and public speakers were enjoined not to indulge in inflammatory language, the writing of threatening letters was denounced, &c.⁵ In such and other⁶ cases the civil authorities were required to co-operate with the military in the keeping of the peace and the arrest of offenders. On the other hand the military were ordered to assist the civil authorities where necessary—as in the suppression of vagrancy,⁷ and in the collection of taxes when resisted by violence.⁸ Such precautions were further taken as to provide that a sheriff's posse should not be limited to persons of his own political party,⁹ and that, where freed persons were to be arrested, the posse should in general be composed of persons of the same race or color.¹⁰

In an Order of the Second District,⁷—the most remarkable instance in our history of the exercise of legislative authority by a military commander,—“imprisonment for debt is prohibited” except in cases of fraud; certain money judgments are forbidden to be “enforced by execution against the property or the person of the defendant;”⁸ the sale of property on execution or foreclosure is suspended for one year; “all proceedings for the recovery of money under contracts, whether under seal or by parol, the consideration for which was the purchase of negroes, are suspended;” wages for labor performed in the production of

7. G. O. 10 of 1867.

8. These are judgments on causes of action arising between Dec. 19, 1860, and May 15, 1865. It is added:—“Proceedings in such causes of action, now pending, shall be stayed; and no suit or process shall be hereafter instituted or commenced, for any such causes of action.”

a crop is made a lien on the crop; a "homestead exemption" is created; bail is ~~done~~ away with in actions ex contractu; "the punishment of crimes and offences by whipping, maiming, branding, stocks, pillory, or other corporal punishment,"¹ is discontinued; the punishment of death in cases of burglary and larceny, as authorized by State laws, is abolished, and graded penalties of fine and imprisonment are prescribed for such offences; the power of reprieve, pardon and remission is given to the Governors of North and South Carolina; and imprisonment for overdue taxes is inhibited. The Order concludes as follows:—"Any law or ordinance, heretofore in force in North or South Carolina, inconsistent with the provisions of this General Order, is hereby suspended and declared inoperative."² In an Order of the next month,³ made by the same commander, "the remedy by distress for rent is abolished."

As another instance of legislative action may be noted the fact that, in approving and ordering into effect, as they repeatedly did, the ordinances of the constitutional conventions, the district commanders in some cases excepted certain provisions, and in others substituted or added provisions of their own.⁴

1. See the prior act of Congress, of March 2, 1867, c. 170, s. 5, in which it is made the duty of officers of the army, &c., "to prohibit and prevent whipping or maiming of the person, as a punishment for any crime, misdemeanor, or offence," in "any State lately in rebellion," and not yet readmitted to representation in Congress.

It was held in State v. Kent, 65 No. Ca. 311, that this Order could have no further effect than to suspend the existing law as to corporal punishment; the law reviving as soon as, with the discontinuance of the military government, the Order ceased to have effect.

2. It was mainly with reference to this Order that Atty. Gen. Stanbery, in his opinion heretofore cited, said—"He," (the Dist. Commander,) "assumes, directly or indirectly, all the authority of the State, legislative, executive and judicial, and in effect declares—'I am the State.'" The Order was in fact an anticipation of the enactment of the following July, which completed the powers of the military government, and, in doing so, added the injunction that "no district commander shall be bound in his action by any opinion of any civil officer of the United States."

G. O. 10 was materially modified as to some of its provisions by G. O. 164 of the same year, issued by a subsequent commander of the district.

Appropriations from the State treasuries. In lieu of legislatures, the district commanders not unfrequently exercised the power of appropriating moneys for the support of the civil governments of the States within their commands,¹ as also for the repairs and maintenance of asylums, penitentiaries, and other public institutions.²

Quarantine and sanitary regulations. Careful and detailed quarantine regulations were issued by the different commanders,³ and, in the Fourth District, sanitary regulations for the season of epidemics of 1867.⁴

Miscellaneous matters. To the acts and orders of the district commanders above enumerated may be added the following:—The prohibition of “the distillation or manufacture of whiskey or other spirits from grain;”⁵ The invalidating of contracts for the manufacture, sale, &c., of intoxicating liquor;⁶ The suspension of elections of officers of railroad companies in which any of the States constituting the district possessed an interest;⁷ the making special provision for the arrest and trial of persons guilty of horse-stealing;⁸ The making provision for the enrolment of the inhabitants of the State, (Texas,) as a force for defence against hostile Indians.⁹

Duties as to Elections, Registration, &c. The remaining orders of the district commanders were chiefly those issued in the performance of the duties devolved upon them by the Acts of March 23 and July 19, 1867, March 11, 1868, and April 10, 1869, with reference to the elections and proceedings thereby prescribed. These orders constituted and appointed boards of registration and superintendents or commissioners of election, and instructed them as to their duties; provided for due registrations of the qualified voters and revisions of the registry lists; directed elections of delegates to the constitutional conventions, and notified those elected to assemble and act; submitted the constitutions when framed to the popular vote, and at the same time ordered the elections for State officers and members of Congress; regulated by precise and detailed directions the conduct of such elections, so as to secure a full expression and ensure a fair ballot;¹ announced the results of the votings;² determined the eligibility, in case of question, of persons elected; directed the administering, to civil officers elect, of the oath of office prescribed by Congress; turned over to the new governments the appropriate records, public property and powers, and otherwise facilitated their organization. These orders, many of which involved in their preparation a most careful consideration and great labor, well illustrate the value of the services of the district commanders in

1. To instance some of these regulations,—bar-rooms and the like were required to be closed on the day of election and for some time before and after; the use or exhibition of fire-arms or dangerous weapons at or near the voting places was prohibited; facilities were afforded for challenging votes; the intimidation, directly or indirectly, of voters was guarded against; military interference, ‘unless necessary to repel the armed enemies of the United States or to keep the peace at the polls,’ (in accordance with the provision of the Act of Congress of Feb. 25, 1865,) was strictly forbidden; and other precautions were taken against possible fraud or violence. See G. O. 61, First Mil. Dist., 1869; Do. 164, Second Id., 1867; Do. 40, 45, 61, Id., 1868; Circ., Id., March 24, 1868; G. O. 74, Third Id., 1867; Do. 57, 58, Id., 1868; Do. 19, Fourth Id., 1868; Do. 55, Id., 1869; S. O. 40, Fifth Id., 1869. In one order, it was directed that no voter should be compelled to work on the public roads, or to attend court as a suitor, juror, or witness on the day of election, or be subject to arrest on civil process, &c. Do. 61, First Id., 1869. It was further ordered that where a fair vote was prevented by violence, a new election should be held. Do. 61, Second Id., 1868. And it was enjoined that where injuries were inflicted upon persons registering in good faith, the damages should be assessed upon the town or county. Do. 65, Second Id., 1867.

coöperating to bring about the political rehabilitation of the insurgent States.

Such were some of the more salient features of the procedure of Reconstruction. So far as concerns the military government exercised during these three critical years,—its efforts to secure an impartial and faithful administration of justice, repress violence and disorder, maintain an efficient police, conserve the public health, relieve the burdens of the unfortunate, protect the humble classes against unequal laws and oppressive usages, and, while earnestly promoting the restoration of the States, to worthily assert the “paramount authority” of the United States, should, it is believed, fairly outweigh, in the estimate of history, the unfrequent manifestations of arbitrary power on the part of individual officials.

PART III.

CIVIL FUNCTIONS AND RELATIONS OF THE MILITARY.

In PART I have been considered the law and discipline governing the military in the military state; in PART II has been reviewed the special authority exercised by them, in time of war or like emergency, towards enemies and persons under military government or control. In this third and last division of this treatise will be examined the subject of their civil relations and duties as officers and soldiers, and the liabilities, as well as rights, attaching to them as citizens.

PART III will be presented under the following Titles:—

- I. Employment of the military in a civil or quasi civil capacity.
- II. Liability of the military to civil suit or prosecution.
- III. Other civil relations of the military.

I. EMPLOYMENT OF THE MILITARY IN A CIVIL OR QUASI CIVIL CAPACITY.

I. FOR THE PROTECTION OF A STATE FROM DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

Sec. 4 of Art. IV of the Constitution declares that:—“*The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a republican form of government, and shall protect each of them, * * * on the application of the legislature, or of the executive when the legislature cannot be convened, against domestic violence.*” As observed by the U. S. Supreme Court in Luther v. Borden, “it rested with Congress to determine the means proper to be adopted to fulfill this guarantee." So, presently after the adoption of the Constitution, by the Act of Feb. 28, 1795, the President was empowered to call forth the militia, and later, by that of March 3, 1807, to employ the land and naval forces, for the purposes signified.¹ In PART II it has been seen how the Supreme Court, in Texas v. White,² justified the action of Congress in providing, in view of this constitutional guarantee, for the "reconstruction" of the insurrectionary States by the legislation of 1867. Under the section cited, the protection of the United States has, in practice, commonly been invoked by governors of States,³ in emergencies arising when the legislatures are not in session or cannot be assembled soon enough to take the requisite action.⁴ The protection sought is afforded by the President, by ordering a sufficient military force to the disturbed locality with the proper instructions for the repression of the existing violence. No military commander or authority inferior to the President can assume to initiate such orders. The troops are not furnished to the governor as a posse, nor can they legally be placed under his command or that of any other State official, civil or military. Though employed in a quasi civil capacity and for a local and temporary object, they are still U. S. troops, representing the sovereignty of the United States, and can duly act only under the command and direction of the President and their own officers. As their purpose, however, is to aid in the execution of the laws and the restoration of the peace of the State, their action should in general, as far as practicable, be in concert with the action or views of the State authorities.⁵ While they should of course move and operate with promptitude and efficiency, no more military power than is reasonably required should be resorted to, nor the disorderly element be treated like an enemy in war unless the emergency is such as to demand extreme measures: often a demonstration in force will be sufficient without a resort to arms.⁶

2. FOR THE SUPPRESSION OF INSURRECTION.

By Secs. 5298, 5299, Title LXIX, Rev. Sts., the President is further authorized to employ the army, (as also the militia and the navy,) for the suppression of insurrection or rebellion against the Government and the execution of the laws of the United States; as also, specially, for the purpose of maintaining the civil rights of people of the States, when divested by violent combinations or conspiracies against the laws of the State or of the United States. Under these Sections, the assistance of the military may be resorted to in any instance of such insurrection or lawless combination, from an isolated case of riotous obstruction to a rebellion of the magnitude of the recent civil war. In the instance of a rebellion of this character the army would assume a purely military and hostile attitude as against an enemy, and the law applicable to the situation would be the law of war or martial law treated of in PART II. In cases of lesser disorders the army would be employed more in a quasi civil capacity, as a force to keep the public peace, and similarly as when used to suppress "domestic violence" under the provision of the Constitution heretofore considered; its operations being conducted exclusively under the orders and directions of the President and its immediate commanders.

The active interposition of the military under these two Sections, (as also under Sec. 5297 previously noticed,) is required by Sec. 5300 to be preceded by a proclamation of the President commanding "the insurgents to disperse and retire peaceably to their respective abodes within a limited time." In most cases the (VIII Opins., 8,) held that a mere obstruction of law was not enough to base a requisition upon the President for troops, but that a state of war should practically exist to authorize it. This is a strained view with which the practice has not accorded. "Domestic violence" is not necessarily war or even such a condition as to call for the exercise of martial law. Domestic violence considerably less pronounced than that of the Dorr rebellion, for example, will, it is considered, justify an appeal for military aid, by the authorities of a State, under the Constitution.

1. Recent instances of the proceeding required by Sec. 5300 are those of the proclamations of May 22, 1873, (as to disorders in Louisiana;) of May 15, 1874, (as to Arkansas;) of Sept. 15, 1874, (Louisiana;) of Dec. 21, 1874, (Mississippi;) of Oct. 17, 1876, (South Carolina;) of Oct. 7, 1878, (New Mexico;) of May 3, 1882, (Arizona;) of July 31, 1884, (as to the irruption of persons into the Oklahoma lands in the Indian Territory;)

publication of the proclamation in connection with an array or mobilization of troops will do away with the necessity of a resort to force.

3. AS A POSSE COMITATUS.

Practice under Act of 1789. It was provided in s. 27 of the Judiciary Act of Sept. 24, 1789,¹ that the marshal appointed for a judicial district "shall have power to command all necessary assistance in the execution of his duty." This provision was at an early period construed as vesting, by implication, in U. S. marshals and their deputies an authority to call upon the military forces of the United States as a posse to assist them in the execution of the process of the U. S. courts,² and this authority was resorted to in numerous cases where without it the laws would have failed to be effectually or promptly enforced. Instructions were repeatedly issued from the Attorney General's Office and the War Department, and by military commanders, as to the right of marshals to require the assistance of the military in cases of necessity, as to the duty of the military to obey their requisitions, and as to the behaviour of the latter when serving on a posse. It was enjoined that officers and soldiers so serving should act in subordination to and as directed by the marshal in making arrests, &c., but should use only such force as was necessary and apposite to the object, and should confine themselves strictly to the duties attaching to the special service, initiating no proceeding and assuming no authority beyond the same. But while thus coöperating with and acting under the civil official, the inferiors of the detachment were to observe the principle of military subordination and obey the orders of their immediate military superiors as on occasions of purely military duty.³

2. XVI Opins. At. Gen., 162; DIGEST, 113, 380.

3. See the law and instructions as laid down and communicated in the following papers, opinions and orders: Instructions from Atty. Gen. Evarts to the Marshal of the No. Dist. of Fla., of Aug. 20, 1868; VI Opins. At. Gen., 471; XIII Id., 451; XVI Id., 162; G. O. 96 of 1876; Communication from Headquarters of the Army to Maj. Gen. Meade, Comdg. Dept. of the South, Aug. 25, 1868; G. O. 65, Dept. of the Cumberland, 1868; Circ., Id., Oct. 5, 1868; Circ. Id., March 11, 1870; Do.,

Limitation of power to summon. The power to summon the military on a posse comitatus, under the Act of 1789, was limited to the marshal or his deputy. No other U. S. civil functionary,—as an officer of the customs or internal revenue officer, for example,—has been empowered to exercise a like authority.

The power is also one that cannot legally be exercised by sheriffs or other State officials, who, though they might be authorized to summon members of the army as citizens, could not legally call upon them in their armed and military capacity as officers and soldiers of the United States land forces.¹ The army as such can constitutionally take no part in quelling disorders and preserving the peace in States, or in executing the laws of the States, otherwise than as it may be employed to protect the States against domestic violence under the provision of the Constitution above considered,² or to suppress insurrection under Title LXIX, Rev. Sts.

Effect of the Legislation of 1878. But the power derived from the Act of 1789 has been abruptly divested by a recent statute and practically exists no longer. This statute is a provision of the Act of June 18, 1878, c. 263, which, in s. 15, declares that—“From and after the passage of this Act it shall not be lawful to employ any part of the Army of the United States as a posse comitatus, or otherwise, for the purpose of executing the laws, except in such cases and under such circumstances as such employment of said

Dept. of Va., March 4, 1870; G. O. 29, Dept. of the Mo., 1870; Do. 3 Id., 1874; Do. 2, Dept. of Texas, 1870; Do. 54, 75, Dept. of the South, 1874; Do. 29, Dept. of the Gulf, 1874; DIGEST, 380, 381. The only substantial point of difference between the instructions of the Attorney General and those of the military authorities appears to be that the former indicate that the marshal is authorized absolutely to require the assistance of the military when and in such force as may in his opinion be necessary, (see Instructions of Atty. Gen. Evarts;) while the latter in effect declare that it is for the officer commanding the troops summoned to decide whether the service required is lawful or necessary. (Communication to Maj. Gen. Meade, ante; G. O. 29, Dept. of the Mo., 1870.) The former is the correct view.

1. The armed force for them to summon, if any, is the militia. See instances in Raush v. Ward, 44 Pa. St. 389; Curtis v. Allegheny Co., 1 Philad. 237.

2. See Instructions of Atty. Gen. Evarts, above noted; also DIGEST, 112, 114, 381.

force may be expressly authorized by the Constitution or by Act of Congress."¹

This legislation, evolved as it was out of a temporary political antagonism on the question of the extent of the authority of the President to employ the military to preserve order at elections in the States,² remains, now that the occasion for its enactment has passed, a mere impediment to the constitutional exercise of the executive power of the nation.³ In the remoter West especially it has proved a serious embarrassment to the efficient execution of the process of the U. S. courts. Where, indeed, there exists a combination to resist the enforcement of the laws, the President may proceed to avail himself of the army, as authorized and prescribed in Secs. 5298-5300, heretofore considered. But for making arrests in individual cases, of persons charged with offences against the United States, the U. S. marshal, although the military stationed in the vicinity may be the only force adequate to effectuate such arrests, is not empowered to avail himself of their assistance under the existing law.⁴

Excepted cases—Express statutory authority for employment of military for civil purposes. The Act of 1878 excepts, as has been seen, from its operation, those cases in which the employment of a military force "as a posse comitatus, or otherwise, for the purpose of executing the laws," may be "expressly authorized" by the Constitution or by statute. While in the Constitution such express authority is nowhere vested in terms, the same is conveyed in sundry sections of the Revised Statutes, as follows:—Sec. 1984, authorizing a resort to the land forces for aid in arresting persons offending against the laws for the protection of civil rights; Sec. 1989, further authorizing the President to employ the land forces in the execution of the provisions of Title XXIV, relating to civil rights; Sec. 1991, requiring military persons to aid in enforcing the law abolishing peonage in New Mexico; Sec. 2002 authorizing the use of the military to keep the peace at elections; Sec. 2062, authorizing the President to assign army officers as Indian agents; Secs. 2118 and 2147, authorizing him to employ the military to remove persons from Indian lands or the Indian country who are there contrary to law; Secs. 2150, 2151 and 2152, authorizing him to employ the army to prevent the introduction of unauthorized persons or things into the Indian country, to destroy distilleries set up therein, to apprehend persons being illegally in such country as well as criminal Indians, to put an end to hostilities between Indian tribes, &c.; Sec. 2190, authorizing the Secretary of War to direct officers of the army to aid in taking the census; Sec. 2460, authorizing the President to employ the military to aid in preserving the timber belonging to the United States in Florida; Secs. 4684 and 4685, authorizing him to employ officers of the army on the topographical work, &c., of the coast survey; Sec. 4792, requiring military officers commanding on the coast to aid in the execution of the quarantine laws; Sec. 5275, authorizing the President to employ the army for the custody of extradited persons; Secs. 5287 and 5288, authorizing him to employ them in executing the neutrality laws; Secs. 5297, 5298, and 5299, authorizing him to employ them in suppressing insurrection, (considered under a previous head;) Sec. 5316, authorizing him to employ them to prevent the removal of vessels or cargoes seized for condemnation as contraband; Sec. 5577, authorizing him to employ them to protect the rights of discoverers of guano.¹ In all such excepted cases the military may still be employed for the execution of the particular law, notwithstanding the general prohibition of 1878.

1. Compare, as in pari materia, the Acts of June 23, 1879, c. 35, s. 6; and May 4, 1880, c. 81, s. 2.

2. It is singular that the Act of 1878 did not in terms repeal the provision of the Act of Feb. 25, 1865, incorporated in Sec. 2002, Rev. Sts., which in effect expressly authorizes the employment of the U. S. military "to keep the peace at the polls" at elections in the States. On the contrary, it left such provision in full force. See text post.

4. FOR THE EXECUTION OF THE LAWS RELATING TO INDIANS AND THE INDIAN COUNTRY.

(1.) As to Indians not on Reservations. It is the policy of the government to assemble all the Indian tribes and bands

1. With the Secs. here cited, see also Secs. 1959, 2001, 2136, 2149; also G. O. 71 of 1878. And note the Act of June 23, 1879, c. 35, s. 7, by which the Secretary of War is empowered to detail and employ an upon lands reserved for the purpose, and, with a view to their location and maintenance upon such lands, treaties have been from time to time entered into with them, and appropriations are annually made by Congress. Indians omitting or refusing to enter into treaties or to locate upon reservations, and remaining at large, are in general to be regarded as in a state of actual or quasi hostility, and may be treated by the military authorities, under the orders of the President, either as hostile or merely not friendly, as circumstances may dictate. In the latter relation, the attitude of the military toward them is to be one of watchfulness and precaution; in the former they are public enemies, and the laws of war, so far as practicably or reasonably applicable, will govern the army in its operations and proceedings against or with regard to them.¹

(2.) As to Reservation Indians and the Indian country in general—The law applicable. It is to such Indians and their country that the statutes heretofore indicated specially apply; viz. Secs. 2118, 2140, 2147, 2150, 2151, 2152, Rev. Sts., which authorize the employment of the military in the civil duty of removing trespassers from the Indian country, in apprehending persons found there in violation of law and conveying them to the civil authorities, in preventing the introduction of spirituous liquors therein, in making arrests of criminals, &c.

What is Indian country. What is to be regarded as Indian country is now well established by the decisions of the courts and rulings of the law officers, as consisting of—“(1) Indian Reservations occupied by Indian tribes; and (2) Other districts so occupied to which the Indian title has not been extinguished.”*

2. G. O. 97 of 1877. Or, as it has been more recently defined by the Supreme Court in Ex parte Crow Dog, 109 U. S., 556,—“All the country to which the Indian title has not been extinguished within the limits of the United States, whether within a reservation or not.” And see further, on this subject, Am. Fur Co. v. U. S., 2 Peters, 358; U. S. v. Forty-three Gals. of Whiskey, 93 U. S., 188; Bates v. Clark, 95 U. S.,

The question whether Indian title has or not been extinguished as to any district will of course mainly depend upon the treaty or treaties entered into with the tribe.¹ Before making arrests of persons or seizures of property, as being illegally within Indian country, (not included in a reservation,) officers of the army will properly inform themselves as to whether the district is Indian country in fact; otherwise they may become subject, as in the case of Bates v. Clark,² to a civil suit and judgment for damages.

Removal of trespassers under Secs. 2118, 2147. Authority to remove intruders from a public reservation when necessary for the protection of property of the United States is a measure of public self-defence which would exist in the absence of statutory provision. Under the above Sections relating to the removal of persons who are in the Indian country in violation of law, the military may be employed summarily to remove therefrom persons who are there for the purpose of making settlements on the land, or carrying on traffic in violation of the laws regulating intercourse with the Indians, or for any other illegal or unauthorized purpose, or who, as speculators, outlaws, vagabonds, &c., are simply commorant there contrary to the provisions of an existing treaty with the tribe or without the permission of the agent or officer in charge.³ The above statutes, considered in connection with Secs. 2150 and 2151, are regarded as contemplating the mere removal of persons as intruders, and the apprehending of persons with a view to action by the civil authorities, as distinct proceedings,—so that the military may be employed simply to remove without apprehending. Whether persons are or not in the Indian country in violation of law is a question to be determined by the executive authorities charged with the custody and protection of the Indians and the execution of Indian treaties. "The courts will not review their decision in these matters."¹

Apprehension of persons under Secs. 2150 and 2151.

The authority and duty of officers of the army under these Sections, and the necessity for observing strictly their terms, are pointedly illustrated by the rulings of the U. S. Circuit Court for the Ninth Circuit in the cases of *In re Carr*² and Waters v. Campbell,³ and of the same Court for the Eighth Circuit in U. S. v. Crook.⁴

In the two former of these cases, it was held, in regard to the action of such officers under Sec. 2151—(1) that as the officer, in making the arrests authorized, acts in a civil capacity, his proceeding should be justified by affidavit or affidavits, (made by himself or other person or persons,) in accordance with the provision of Art. IV of the Amendments of the Constitution which declares that "no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause supported by oath or affirmation and particularly describing the place to be searched and the person or things to be seized;" (2) that the officer is in no event empowered to detain a person arrested longer than five days before commencing to remove him to the custody of the civil authorities, and that, if he has no means of removing or commencing to remove his prisoner within that period, he must discharge him; (3) that during the five days, or during the process of removal, he can confine or restrain the prisoner only so far as may be necessary to his safe-keeping, and cannot put him to labor or subject him to military discipline. In the case of In re Carr, a proceeding upon habeas corpus, the prisoner was held entitled to be discharged from the custody of the officer because he had been held more than five days—in fact "nearly ninety days"—before an attempt was made to remove him. In Waters v. Campbell, an action for false imprisonment, the officer was held liable in $2000 damages, for the reason that, in the absence of facilities for removing his prisoner, he had detained him fifty-six days before removal, and, in detaining him, had required him to do "fatigue duty" of the same character as that performed by the soldiers at the post. The court held that while the party, for the purposes of custody, could legally be placed in the guard-house, he "ought not, being a non-military person—a citizen merely under arrest upon the charge of having committed a non-military crime—to have been compelled to work during his confinement or to perform any duty unless it was to take care of his person."

In the case of U. S. v. Crook,—a proceeding instituted for the release on habeas corpus of certain Ponca Indians, apprehended by the military under Sec. 2150,—the provision of this Section, requiring the removal of apprehended persons "by the nearest convenient and safe route to the civil authorities of the judicial district, &c., to be proceeded against in due course of law," was ably interpreted by Dillon J. These Indians had left without authority the Indian Territory in which they had been placed, and betaken themselves to the Omaha Indian Reservation. It was held that, upon their apprehension by the military under Sec. 2150, they 'should have been brought to Omaha and turned over to the U. S. Marshal and Attorney,' and that, as this course was not pursued, but it was attempted to remove them back to the Indian Territory against their consent, they were entitled to be discharged from military custody as illegally restrained of their liberty.¹

1. To quote from the opinion of the court :—When troops are employed under Sec. 2150, "they must exercise the authority in the manner provided by the section. * * * The duty of the military authorities is here very clearly and sharply defined, and no one can be justified in departing therefrom especially in time of peace. * * * In time of peace no authority civil or military exists for transporting Indians from one section of the country to another without the consent of the Indians, nor to confine them to any public reservation against their will ; and where officers of the government attempt to do this, and arrest and hold Indians who are at peace with the government, for the purpose of removing them to and confining them on a reservation in the Indian Territory, they will be released on habeas corpus." The Court add, (p. 467,)—"In what Gen. Crook has done in the premises, no fault can be imputed to him. He was simply obeying the orders of his superior officers." And see the further reference to Gen. Crook's position in the case, on page 454.

(3.) Relations of the Military to Indian Agents. The military, as employed in the Indian country, under the special orders or general instructions of the President, are employed in great part as a force auxiliary to the Indian Agents, detachments of the army being frequently stationed upon or near Indian reservations, in order to render to such Agents the needful coöperation and assistance when required and legally authorized to be rendered. Where they make arrests or seizures under the statutes above specified, or act—as in general they may—as a police for the protection of public property or the keeping of order on a reservation, they will often and properly do so at the instance of an Agent who has first become apprized of the occasion for action; the commanding officer not usually taking the initiative where there is an Agent present.¹ It need hardly be added that the military cannot legally be employed in aid of the authority of an Indian Agent, where such employment would be within the prohibition of the Act of 1878 above considered.

(4.) Special Authority of Officers of the Army when acting as Indian Agents. Where a military officer who is also a commander of troops has been appointed by the President as an Indian Agent under Sec. 2062, Rev. Sts.,² he may at the same time exercise both the function of Agent and that of military commander. As Agent he acts, like any other Indian Agent, by the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, and is under his exclusive authority. As commander he may be empowered to employ his force for the arrests, seizures, &c., of the class already considered. He will be careful not to confound his two capacities, and, in time of peace, not to use his command against persons or their effects except where its use may be expressly authorized by statute, or where its aid is required to prevent trespassing upon public property or as a police for the keeping of order. And in employing his force for purposes of arrests, &c., under Secs. 2150 and 2151, Rev. Sts., he will remember that he does so not exclusively in a military but in a quasi civil character, and must proceed strictly as the law prescribes.¹ An army officer appointed and acting as Indian Agent, who has no military command, will be authorized, in a proper case, to call upon the Department or other proper commander for the assistance of troops.

Jurisdiction of criminals. An officer of the army serving as Indian Agent may sometimes be called upon to take action with reference to the disposition of persons charged with homicide or other crime committed upon the reservation. Where the alleged criminal, or the individual killed or injured, is a white man, the case will in general properly be disposed of by the U. S. District Court, or by the Territorial or State Court, according as either may have jurisdiction,² and it will devolve upon the Agent to facilitate the arrest, by the proper official of such court, of the offender. Where both the supposed criminal and the party killed or injured are Indians, the jurisdiction of the case will in general, in the absence of any treaty provision to the contrary, properly belong to the tribal court, as indicated in Sec. 2146, Rev. Sts., and it will be the duty of the Agent to facilitate the trial and punishment of the offender according to the laws and usages of the tribe.³

(5.) Exceptional cases of Officers in charge of Indians. Where an officer of the army—not as an Indian agent but in his military capacity—is placed in charge of captured or surrendered Indians held upon a reservation as prisoners of war, he exercises an exceptional authority not strictly within the scope of the general statute law above considered. This authority is a modified form of military government under the laws of war, and is, strictly, without limitation except in so far as it may be restricted by those laws or the orders of military superiors. In his government, however, the officer will properly not resort to the summary proceedings peculiar to a war status except in extreme cases, and where a difficulty can be disposed of under the existing statute law applicable to reservation Indians, he will dispose of it accordingly rather than by a resort to the discipline of camps. The discipline which he will exercise will in general consist in preserving peace and good order, in bringing offenders to trial and punishment by their own tribunals or the proper civil court, in preventing Indians from leaving the reservation without authority, in enforcing such health regulations as circumstances may require, and in seeing that the provision made by Congress for the care and maintenance of the Indians is efficiently and equitably executed.¹

(6.) Relation in general of the Military toward peaceable Indians. It remains to remark that the relations of the military with the friendly Indians should be distinguished by a particular and scrupulous justice, humanity and discretion, for the reason that the former specially represent to the latter the power of the United States. For an officer or soldier to fail in his duty toward such Indians is a peculiarly serious offence, since it materially compromises the government and sensibly impairs its authority over this class of its subjects, and moreover tends to induce them to lapse into hostility. In a case, in the Department of the Columbia,² of an aggravated injury inflicted by a soldier upon an Indian, the offence was characterized by the Department Commander, (Gen. Canby,) as a graver one than if committed by a civilian, because—as it was expressed—“the Army has been made, under the direction of the President, an important agent in the execution of the laws regulating intercourse with the Indian tribes, and such acts by soldiers are not only violations of the statute but gross breaches of discipline and of trust.”

5. FOR THE REMOVAL OF INTRUDERS FROM MILITARY RESERVATIONS.¹

The enactment of 1878 above cited restricted the employment of the military "for the purpose of executing the laws," but not otherwise. It did not therefore affect the general authority of the President as Commander-in-chief to use the army for the removal of trespassers and intruders from the military reservations or posts under his command, this not being properly an execution of a law but a form of protecting the public property in his charge and exercising an ordinary and reasonable police power over the same. The authority of the President to employ the military forces for this purpose exists as fully as does the authority, expressly—as we have seen—conferred by statute for the removal of intruders from the Indian lands or country. Its existence and exercise from an early period have been repeatedly recognized and sanctioned in legal opinions and General Orders.²

Such authority extends to the expulsion of squatters or other persons entering upon and occupying the land whether or not under a claim of title, as well as of all persons coming within the reservation for illegal traffic or other unauthorized and improper purpose, to the prejudice of military discipline or the detriment of the public interests. In removing the person his property may be removed with him. But no unnecessary force should be employed in the process, nor should the use of force be continued after the removal has been effectually accomplished.³ And where convenient and practicable, a reasonable notice to quit will properly be given before force is resorted to.⁴

3. "Due caution should be observed, however, that, in executing this duty, there be no unnecessary or wanton harm done to persons or property." IX Opins. At. Gen., 476.

4. As to the authority to grant to a civilian a license to enter upon and occupy, subject to the will of the Government, the soil of a military reservation, in contradistinction to a usufructuary interest in the land as property, (which can be granted only by the authority of Congress,)

Attitude of the Military toward the Civil community when not authorized to be employed as heretofore indicated. Except as and when employed and ordered under the statutes and authority above specified, the U. S. military are not empowered to intervene or act as such on any occasion of violation of local law or civil disorder, or in the arrest of civil criminals. While officers or soldiers of the army may individually, in their capacity of citizens, use force to prevent a breach of the peace or the commission of a crime in their presence,¹ they cannot, (except as above,) legally take part, in their military capacity, in the administration of civil justice or law. Their attitude, therefore, toward the civil community and the civil authorities, at a period of riot or lawless disturbance should in general be a strictly neutral one: whatever the temptation or occasion, they should remain simply passive until required by the President, through their immediate commanders, to act. A zealous officer is sometimes induced, especially when serving on a western frontier, to intervene at least for the arrest of a criminal whom the civil authorities are apparently powerless to reach, and who, in the absence of any interposition on the part of the military, will probably escape legal punishment. Such intervention, however, will almost invariably be unauthorized by law, and will subject the officer and the members concerned of his command to actions for false arrest and imprisonment.²

II. LIABILITY OF THE MILITARY TO CIVIL SUIT OR PROSECUTION.

General principles of Amenability—Subordination of military to civil. It is not unfrequently enunciated as a general principle that the military authority is subordinate to the civil.³ This, however, is not to be understood as implying that the military state as such is not fully governed by its own code, or that the army, in time and on the theatre of war, is liable to be controlled by other than military orders. What is chiefly meant by the proposition is that officers and soldiers of the army do not become relieved of their civil obligations by assuming the military character, but, as citizens or civilian inhabitants of the country, remain liable, equally with other civilians, to the jurisdiction of the civil courts for offences against the local laws, as well as for wrongs done or responsibilities incurred toward individuals.¹ On the other hand, the soldier is equally entitled, in a proper case, to the benefit of the civil law—has, as it is expressed by Samuel,² “a property” in the same. Thus the military law does not ‘abrogate, or derogate from’ the general law of the land,³ but is in fact in harmony with it.⁴

Exemption from arrest. By Sec. 1237, Rev. Sts.,⁵ enlisted men are expressly exempted from arrest on civil process, except for certain debts contracted before enlistment. The statute law does not extend this exemption to officers.⁶ The general principle, however, of public policy, that public officers shall not be subject to such arrest when engaged in the performance of their official duties, extends to and protects officers of the army equally with other officials.⁷ But neither the statutory exemption nor principle indicated extends to arrest on criminal process.⁸

act, is a further principle which has heretofore been remarked upon with reference especially to conduct of a criminal character. We have seen that where the acts constituting a military offence involve also an offence against the laws of the United States or of the State, the officer or soldier may be brought to trial both by a court-martial for the offence against the Articles of war and by a civil tribunal for the civil crime; the court which first assumes jurisdiction, by the arrest of the offender or otherwise, being the one to be permitted first to pass upon the case.¹ In the same manner a military person may be liable to a civil suit on account of a trespass, &c., for which he has been tried or may be triable by a court-martial as a breach of military discipline. Thus an officer liable to military trial for an illegal punishment or other unauthorized treatment of a soldier, or for the unauthorized seizure of the property of a citizen, may, either before or after such trial, be sued in damages for the injury or loss to the individual.

Official and discretionary acts. It is also a general principle, applicable to officers of the army equally with other public officers, that such officials are not to be made civilly responsible for the consequences of the ordinary and regular discharge of their official duties.² Were it otherwise, "no man," as was observed by the court in a leading English case,³ "would accept office on these terms." It is a further principle, similarly applicable, that where such officers are invested with discretion as to the matter of the performing of an official act, they cannot be held to account for such performance in the same manner as if their function were ministerial only, but their acts, though mistaken, are in general to be presumed to be authorized and legal.⁴

Madison*, 1 Cranch, 137; U. S. v. Seaman, 17

Forms of Civil Amenability. The above general principles having been adverted to, we proceed to consider the subject of the amenability of military persons to civil suit or prosecution under the following heads—1. Amenability to the United States; 2. Amenability to other military persons; 3. Amenability to civilians.

1. Amenability to the United States—Criminal Liability. This is incurred where the party becomes chargeable—(1) either with the commission of a crime of one of the classes known as crimes against the operations of the government, crimes against justice, acts of official misconduct, &c.,¹ made punishable in Title LXX of the Revised Statutes or otherwise; (2) or with the commission of one of the more familiar crimes, such as murder, manslaughter, larceny, arson, &c., similarly made punishable when committed in a place over which the United States has exclusive jurisdiction,² or in respect to public property;³ (3) or with the commission of treason.

Civil Liability. As a general rule of law, all public officers are liable to the United States for any pecuniary loss to the same which may be incurred by them in the course of the discharge of their public duties.⁴ This principle is especially applied in practice to cases of disbursing officers who have become chargeable with deficits of public money or failure to account for public property entrusted to them for a public purpose. officers, they may in general be sued either with their bondsmen or separately.¹

As has been noticed in treating of the Sixtieth Article of War,² the laws enacted for the safe-keeping and proper disposition of the public moneys³ are especially strict and specific, making officers personally liable for amounts lost in their charge, and constituting their acts legal embezzlement when perhaps the loss may have resulted from no fault of their own but from some incident, (such as the failure of a bank in which their funds had been regularly deposited,) which could not have been foreseen or guarded against.⁴ In some extreme cases indeed,—as where money has been taken from disbursing officers, (when acting in the line of their duty and without fault or negligence on their part,) by capture, robbery, theft, or otherwise,—provision is made by statute for relieving them from liability by application to the Court of Claims:⁵ in other cases they have in general no other recourse except to apply to Congress for a special act for their relief.

Whether an officer can be made personally responsible for losses of public money incurred by his subordinates will depend upon the official relation which, under the existing law, they bear to him or to the United States. If they are his own appointees or employees, or merely clerks, &c., acting as his assistants, he will in general legally be liable for their deficits: if they are, equally with himself, distinctive officers of the United States, appointed or commissioned by a common superior, the mere fact that they may exercise their functions under his direction will not, (in the absence of any law or regulation to the contrary,) render him pecuniarily responsible for their shortcomings, but they will themselves, on their bonds or otherwise, be personally holden for their respective losses.⁶

funds may sometimes be conveniently enforced by way of a counterclaim or offset interposed on the part of the government in a case in which he has himself instituted suit in the Court of Claims for moneys claimed to be due him as pay, allowances, &c. Marked cases of such counterclaims adjudged against officers of the army are to be found in the recent decisions of that court.¹

2. Amenability to other Military persons—For acts as members of courts-martial. It is a general principle of law that a judicial officer cannot be made liable in an action for damages for any judgment, however erroneous, that he may have rendered, provided he had jurisdiction of the case.² So, while the members of a court-martial may be made thus liable to an officer or soldier tried thereby, where the court was without jurisdiction, or its proceedings or sentence were otherwise unauthorized and illegal,³—for error merely in their rulings or judgment they are not subject to a civil action.⁴ Suits against members of courts-martial have not been frequent. In the old and often-cited English case of Frye v. Ogle,—a suit by a naval officer against the president of a naval court-martial by which he had been tried,—the plaintiff recovered £1000 damages, the court being adjudged to have exceeded and abused its authority in a most arbitrary manner.⁵ In the later case, however, of Mann v. Owen,⁶ in which an officer of the British army sued the president of a court-martial, (which had sentenced him to be dismissed,) on the ground that it had no jurisdiction,—having tried him, under the Article corresponding to our present Art. 62, for an act which he claimed was not within the purview of such

Article,¹—the civil court held otherwise and gave judgment for the defendant. In the case of Jekyll v. Moore,² the officer who preferred the charges sued the president of the court-martial by which they were tried, the ground of action being that the court, in "fully and honorably" acquitting the accused, had reflected upon the charges as "malicious." But this was held by the civil court to be not an abuse of power on the part of the court-martial but an exercise of an authority sanctioned by military law, and the action was not sustained. In the further English case of Home v. Bentinck,³ it was held that an alleged injurious statement in the opinion of a court of inquiry furnished no ground for an action of libel, by the officer claiming to be injured, against the president of the court; the opinion, rendered as it was to the proper military superior, being a privileged communication.

In this country, the principle of the liability to damages of the members of a court-martial acting without jurisdiction was recognized in a few early cases.⁴ In the later and more important case of *Milligan v. Hovey*⁵ and others, where the action was brought by a civilian who had been sentenced to death against the members of the military commission which tried him, (and the officers who caused his arrest, &c.,) judgment was given for the plaintiff on the ground that the proceedings of the commission had previously been held void for want of jurisdiction by the U. S. Supreme Court.⁶ In view, however, of the fact that the defendants had acted in good faith under the orders of the President and that their proceedings had been approved by him, (evidence of which was admitted in mitigation of damages,) the actual damages awarded by the jury were merely nominal.

It has been noticed by Griffiths⁷ that the fact that the court, in taking the action which has given rise to the suit, consulted and proceeded upon the opinion of its judge advocate, cannot affect the question of its legal liability. This is a fact, however, which it is entitled to have considered, as showing good faith, upon the question of the quantum of damages.

For executing an illegal sentence of a military court.

That an officer who executes the sentence of a military tribunal which was without jurisdiction, or whose proceedings or judgment were otherwise illegal so that the sentence is invalidated, is a trespasser, and liable to an action for damages on the part of the person sentenced, has been asserted by the courts in several cases.¹ Suits of this kind, however, have been rare. To render the officer liable it is not indeed necessary that he should have acted with any personal animus against the accused. But in the absence of such animus, and where it appears that the defendant, though acting illegally, simply discharged what he believed to be an official duty, "vindictive" damages will not be awarded.²

For wrongs and injuries in general. Actions have not unfrequently been instituted, (more frequently, however, in England than in this country,) by officers or soldiers against superior officers for wrongs alleged to have been done them by such acts as—unauthorized arrest and imprisonment, malicious prosecution before a military court, preferring of false charges, libel in an official report, and illegal punishment or unjustifiable violence.

In cases of alleged unauthorized arrest and confinement, the civil courts have in general refused to afford relief except where the act was absolutely illegal,³ or where absence of probable cause, (in making the arrest, initiating the proceeding, &c.,) and the existence of malice, on the part of the defendant, have been established by the evidence.⁴ Where the plaintiff has failed to show these elements, the case has been regarded as one of purely military right or liability which could properly be disposed of only by a court-martial, and the civil action has not been sustained. As remarked by the court in Dawkins v. Ld. Rokeby,¹ "cases involving questions of military discipline and military duty alone are cognizable only by a military tribunal and not by a court of law." Or, as it is more briefly expressed in another report of the same case,² "military matters between military men are for military tribunals to determine." Civil courts indeed have always evinced a disinclination to enter upon controversies of this nature.³

In cases of this class arising in time of war stricter proof of absence of probable cause or malice will in general be required than in cases occurring in time of peace.⁴

Malice may sometimes be inferable from a protracted arrest. In certain cases, however, of this class in which the ground of action was an arrest and confinement for an unreasonable period (several months) without trial, judgment was given for defendant where it appeared that the act was not "wanton or oppressive;"—as where the defendant had himself no power to convene a court;⁵ or where the delay was caused by the absence of witnesses or an exigency of the service.⁶ So, the defendant was held not liable where a delay of two months to discharge a prisoner, after he had been acquitted, was occasioned by the failure of a

R., 105, (an action of slander brought by a militia soldier against his commanding officer for charging him with stealing an article of military property,) the court say: "All matters of complaint of a purely military character are to be confined to the military authorities. superior to take final action upon the proceedings.' In other cases, however, where malice clearly appeared, the plaintiff recovered damages for an unreasonably protracted arrest without trial. Thus in Hannaford v. Hun,² where the plaintiff, when finally tried by court-martial, received only a reprimand, he recovered £300 damages. In Wall v. Macnamara,³ a case of aggravated treatment under a protracted confinement, indicating a specially evil animus, the plaintiff was awarded £1000.

As to the act of preferring false and malicious charges, or engaging in a malicious prosecution,—this, in Cobbett's case, was held to constitute a valid cause of action.⁴ But charges against an officer or soldier, made to a superior, not maliciously and causelessly but in good faith and the discharge of an official duty, are privileged communications for which the preferring officer cannot be held legally amenable though the charges themselves be not finally sustained. It is not enough that they are not true; they must be wilfully untrue.⁵

So, a complaint against an officer, addressed to a competent superior, for the purpose of obtaining proper redress for a wrong done, constitutes no ground for a civil action. Thus where a creditor of an army officer made an application to the Secretary of War, with the view of enlisting his influence toward requiring the officer to pay his just debts, and stated therein facts derogatory to the officer, not however for the purpose of slandering him but of securing reparation, such complaint was held to be, not a libel, but a privileged communication.⁶

So of any official report made by an inferior to a superior officer, in which the acts of a third are injuriously reflected upon:—such a report, when made in good faith and in the execution of a duty, is held to be a privileged communication and one upon which an action for damages cannot be based.¹ On the other hand, in a case² where a statement in regard to the misconduct and incapacity of a master of a transport ship was made by an officer of the navy, not by a report addressed to the Government, but by an informal and unofficial publication, this mode of communication was held not privileged but ground for an action for libel. In the leading American case of Maurice v. Worden, where the Superintendent of the Naval Academy was sued for an alleged libel in officially reporting to the Navy Department the gross misconduct of a subordinate, and judgment was given for the defendant, it was held by the Supreme Court of Maryland³ that such a communication was "privileged to the extent that the occasion of making it rebuts the presumption of malice, and throws upon the plaintiff the onus of proving that it was not made from duty but from actual malice and without reasonable and probable cause."

Illegal punishment or unjustifiable violence. An action will not lie against an officer for an exercise of discipline severe in itself, provided it be sanctioned by military usage; otherwise where the severity is not thus sanctioned. Thus a naval commander was held not liable to damages for ordering a midshipman to the mast-head, this being a disciplinary punishment justified by the usage of the service.⁴

In several English cases, however, heavy damages have been awarded for illegal or excessive flogging inflicted upon inferiors by the command of superior officers.⁵ In Barwis v. Keppel,⁶ where a regimental commander disapproved the sentence adjudged by a court-martial upon a sergeant as not being in his opinion sufficiently severe, and thereupon imposed a more severe one of his own, it was held that from such illegal act malice was to be presumed which would have rendered the defendant liable in damages, except that for another reason the court was without jurisdiction of the offence. In the most marked English case of this class, that of Joseph Wall, commandant of the garrison and governor of Goree, in Africa, this official, for causing the death of a sergeant by inflicting upon him summarily without trial, and without reasonable cause, eight hundred lashes, was, twenty years afterwards, brought to trial in England, sentenced to death and executed.¹

In the American service, while officers of the army have not unfrequently been brought to trial by court-martial for inflicting illegal punishment, or using unnecessary violence toward inferiors,² the instances of civil suits based upon such causes of action have been rare. In the leading case of Dinsman v. Wilkes,³ in which an officer of the navy was sued by a marine upon whom he had imposed a corporal punishment, it was held by the Supreme Court that where in such a case the officer, (as the defendant in this case was found to have done,) acts within his discretionary powers and without malice, he is not amenable to civil proceedings.⁴ In a case of another naval officer alleged to have exceeded his disciplinary authority in assaulting and imprisoning a subordinate at sea, an action of trespass was held to be maintainable in a State Court.⁵

legal liability, belong rather to the province of the military tribunal.

Cause of action resulting from negligence. Where, in the performance of duty, an officer or soldier, unintentionally but through negligence, does any considerable injury to another officer or soldier, or to his property, the latter has his action for damages against the former in the same manner as would a civilian. Thus where a soldier, on skirmish drill, so negligently discharged his musket as to wound another soldier, he was adjudged liable for damages in a suit instituted on account of the injury.¹

3. Amenability to Suits by Civilians—Liability for abuse or excess of authority. While, as we have seen, a military officer, when exercising a discretionary authority, is not liable to an action at law on account of an error of judgment, he becomes clearly so liable where he exceeds or abuses his authority, and thus commits an illegal act, to the injury of a civilian.² And the absence of an intent to violate law cannot affect the question of liability, though it may be material to the question of the quantum of damages. The often-cited English cases of Mostyn v. Fabrigas and Comyn v. Sabine, and Capt. Gambier's and Admiral Palliser's cases, were early instances in which military or naval commanders were held liable in damages to civilians for personal injury or the seizure of private property, although the transcending of authority was apparently the result of zeal in the discharge of a supposed duty.³ The later cases of Cooke v.

Pomeroy*, 8 Allen, 485.

3. Cowper, 161-181. Mostyn and Sabine were military governors of Minorca and Gibraltar. The former was adjudged to pay £3000 to a native Minorquin whom he had imprisoned without due cause and banished from the island; the latter £500 for executing an illegal sentence of flogging against a civil employee. Capt. Gambier had £1000 damages awarded against him for exceeding his authority in pulling down the buildings of certain sutlers who sold liquor to the navy in Nova Maxwell¹ and Glynn v. Houston² were of a similar character. An early and leading American case of the same class is that of Smith v. Shaw,³ in which a military commander, who had caused to be arrested and held for trial by court-martial a civilian who was not in fact subject to the military jurisdiction, was adjudged to be amenable to damages for the tort. Here are also to be classed the suits instituted against military commanders, provost marshals, or other officers who during the late war made arrests with a view to trial by military commission, or executed the sentences of such commissions, in cases of persons held not to be subject to the jurisdiction of these tribunals.⁴ A more recent case of damages awarded against an officer of our army who had acted in entire good faith though illegally, is that of Bates v. Clark,⁵ in which a captain of infantry was adjudged a trespasser for seizing liquor in a region supposed by him to be Indian country which was not so in fact. In another late case,—Waters v. Campbell,⁶—heretofore remarked upon, damages were recovered by a civilian against a captain of the army, who, when acting in good faith in the line of duty, had held the plaintiff in arrest for a longer period than was authorized by the existing statute law.

Scotia. The representatives, however, of Admiral Boscawen, under whose orders he acted, assumed the defence of the suit and paid the damages adjudged. The cause of action against Admiral Palliser was the unauthorized destroying of fishing boats on the coast of Labrador. With these cases see Sutherland v. Murray, 1 Term, 538, in which a colonial judge of Minorca recovered £5000 damages against the military governor for improperly suspending him from office.

Liability of inferior when acting under orders—Relative amenability of superior and inferior. The material question has not unfrequently been raised as to how far an inferior officer or soldier, sued or prosecuted on account of an act done by him in his military capacity, may justify under an order given him by a military superior. Of course where the authority of the superior is complete it shields all who duly act under him.¹ An inferior in executing a valid authority or order is protected much as is a sheriff by his precept, and if he proceeds upon probable cause and without malice, will in general be justified though he commit error.² But where the order of the superior is illegal, how far, if at all, can it serve as a defence to the subordinate who, ignorant of its illegality, executes it in good faith? At military law, indeed, the inferior, bound as he is at his peril to obey all orders not palpably illegal upon their face, may, if brought to trial for an act committed in obedience to an order, apparently legal but illegal in fact, plead in defence his obligation to obey, and such defence will in general be accepted as a sufficient answer to the charge.³ In some civil cases a similar view has been taken; the order of the superior when apparently regular and valid being held to protect the inferior because he was bound to obey it.⁴ In some other civil cases the inferior is considered to be justified on the ground that he is, under the circumstances, acting under duress or a quasi compulsion, much as a wife is supposed to act by the compulsion of her husband.⁵ But in the great majority of the adjudications it has been held that an order which is in fact illegal—which commands the doing of an act which is unlawful or legally unauthorized—can, however regular, proper, or just it may appear on its face, protect no one concerned in the performance; that the superior who gives it and causes its execution, and the inferior who actually executes it as ordered, will both, or either, be liable in damages as for a trespass to any person aggrieved.¹ That the illegal order may have proceeded from the highest authority of the government—may have been in fact given directly by the President as Commander-in-chief, cannot render it of any greater efficacy in protecting the subordinate who acts upon it.²

In this class of cases, however, the inferior, if he has acted in good faith, will ordinarily be charged with but slight or nominal damages.³ On the other hand the superior, if sued, will, as the principal offender, be held to a stricter accountability⁴ and made liable for all such acts of the inferior or inferiors of the command, by whom his orders were executed, as were within the scope of such orders.⁵ A superior, however, cannot be made responsible for the personal negligence of a subordinate in executing an order,⁶ or for acts done by the latter on his own responsibility.⁷ If, indeed, he expressly ratifies the same by his own action, he will be liable.⁸

In justifying himself by the order of a superior, in a civil suit instituted against him, the inferior need not show that the order was a written one: a verbal order if explicit will be of equal effect.¹ Nor need he exhibit the commission of his superior or prove his appointment as such: it will be sufficient to show that the superior publicly acted and was recognized in the capacity ascribed.²

Liability for mode of executing an order. An order may be legal, but its mode of execution the reverse. Thus, in the case of an arrest, only the proper degree of force should be employed; otherwise the officer or soldier executing it becomes civilly amenable.³ So an unduly severe or inappropriate confinement may, of itself or with other circumstances, constitute ground of action. Thus a civil prisoner is not in general to be subjected to the same restraint or exactions as a soldier,⁴ nor a political prisoner to the same as a criminal.⁵ So, holding a prisoner confined for an unreasonable or illegal period will render the responsible official liable to suit.⁶

Measure of damages. Upon this point, already noticed, it need only be added that where, in a suit by a civilian against an officer or soldier, damages are awarded to the plaintiff, the quantum of the same will depend mainly upon the animus of the defendant as developed by the testimony.⁷ Where it appears that, though under a mistake as to the law or facts of the case, he acted in the honest discharge of what he reasonably believed to be his duty, the damages should in general be no more than compensatory, i. e. enough to cover the actual loss or injury to the plaintiff.

Soldiers in many cases are placed under the command of officers of whom they know nothing; they are continually being changed from one command to another; and should they be required to produce the commissions of their commanding officers, or even to prove that they had ever been commissioned, they could rarely indeed sustain a plea of justification for any act done in obedience to orders." Where it is shown that the defendant acted maliciously, i. e. with an intent to injure or other malevolent motive, or wantonly, the damages may properly be exemplary or punitive.¹ Courts will indeed set aside verdicts awarding excessive damages. Thus, in the early case of McConnell v. Hampton,² (1815,) where the jury awarded $9000 as damages to a civilian, against a military commander by whom he had been unjustifiably arrested, confined, and brought to trial by court-martial, for alleged giving information to the enemy, &c., the court set aside the verdict as unreasonable and excessive. In the more recent case of Waters v. Campbell,³ referred to under a previous head, it was ruled by the court that the damages given, $3500, were excessive, and that there must be a new trial on this ground unless the plaintiff consented to a reduction of the same to $2000, which he thereupon did.

The relative proportion of damages properly adjudged where a superior who issued an order, (held to be illegal or unauthorized,) and an inferior who executed it, are sued together, has been indicated above.

Liability for injuries in time of war. For an act done jure belli, or for the exercise of a belligerent right, an officer or soldier cannot be called to account in a civil proceeding.⁴ Thus an officer is not liable to a suit for the seizure or destruction, in an adequate emergency of war, of the private property of individual citizens.⁵ So it has been held that a soldier was not liable to prosecution for shooting and killing, under proper orders, a "bushwhacker" or guerilla, in the late war, in Tennessee.⁶ The existence, however, of war will not,—as heretofore indicated under PART II—justify wanton trespasses upon the persons or property of civilians, or other injuries not sanctioned by the laws or usages of war;¹ nor will it justify wrongs done by irresponsible unauthorized parties.² For such acts the offending officer or soldier may be made liable in damages. But in general, in time of war, a greater discretion is conceded to commanders, and to military persons executing orders.³ Obligated as they are to act promptly upon emergencies,⁴ it would not be fair to hold them to the same strict accountability before the courts as for acts in disregard of private right in time of peace.

Liability on public contracts. An action will not lie against an officer of the army on a contract made by him for the United States in an official capacity.⁵ He is not personally bound upon such a contract, but the United States only, and recourse can be had thereon to the United States alone; a suit in the Court of Claims being the usual form of proceeding. Nor can an officer be sued upon a contract of the Government which it is simply his part to execute. Thus a paymaster whose business it is to pay certain troops or employees cannot be sued by an individual for his pay or wages.⁶ An officer is liable to an individual who is a party to or is interested in a public contract, only where he has acted without authority or exceeded his authority under or in regard to the same, thus making himself personally responsible:¹ here, as in other cases of tortious acts of public officers, the government cannot be made liable, but resort must be had by proceedings against the officer.²

Liability of officer as garnishee. Nor can an officer of the army, (or other public officer,) be sued as garnishee or trustee, for or on account of public money in his official possession. Money in the hands of a disbursing officer remains public funds till actually paid over to the person or persons entitled to receive it as due them. To allow it to be attached would be to divert the moneys of the United States from the specific purposes for for which they have been appropriated by Act of Congress, and, while a violation of law, would also seriously embarrass, and so far suspend, the operations of the Government. A government cannot properly be placed in the position of a stakeholder between the parties to whom it owes money and their assignees or creditors. Thus, upon a principle of public policy as well as law, proceedings against public officers by way of garnishment, trustee process, or foreign attachment, as the form is variously designated, are not legitimate and will not be sustained by the courts.³

Liability under writ of habeas corpus—Form of return. Military officers are not unfrequently made respondents in civil proceedings by the service upon them of writs of habeas corpus, sued out by or in behalf of enlisted men or military prisoners claiming to be discharged from the military service or from military custody, on the ground of illegal enlistment or absence of jurisdiction or authority over them on the part of the military authorities. State courts, as it was finally adjudged and settled, in 1871, by the Supreme Court of the United States,⁴ have no power whatever to discharge such persons when duly held by the authority of the United States. Should any State or municipal tribunal issue the writ in such a case, while the officer in charge of the petitioner and upon whom service is made is not, strictly, required to make any return or response to the same, he will yet, as a matter of comity, always properly do so, so far as to advise the court that he holds the petitioner by the authority of the United States, as an enlisted soldier, military convict, &c.,—setting forth in brief the status of the individual. He will decline, however, in respectful terms to produce the body of the petitioner before the court, on the ground stated of its want of jurisdiction over the subject-matter.¹ On the return day of the writ, he will properly appear and present his return, whereupon the court will in general as a matter of course dismiss the proceeding. Should the State court assume jurisdiction and commit the officer for contempt, he will forthwith sue out a writ of habeas corpus for his own release in the U. S. Circuit or District Court. If the State authorities attempt to take the soldier from military custody, they should be prevented by the use of such military force as may be necessary for the purpose.

Where, on the other hand, an officer of the army is served with a writ of habeas corpus issuing from a court of the United States, he will make full return to the same, setting forth all the facts of the case and the authority under which the petitioner is held, and on the return day will appear with the body of the petitioner before the court to abide by its order thereupon.²

Defence and indemnification by the government of officer sued, &c. As has been already remarked, an action will not in general properly lie against a public officer in his representative capacity,³ and where he is sued in such capacity, or as a nominal defendant in a case in which the United States is the party in interest, it will properly devolve upon the Government to assume the defence of the case and bear the expenses of the proceeding.¹

Where a public officer is sued on account of an alleged wrong or injury committed in the discharge of his official duty, the general rule is that he must provide for his own defence,² the question of indemnification for his expenses, or for damages recovered against him, being left to be determined by the law and facts as developed in the investigation.

Where military persons have been or are about to be sued or prosecuted on account of acts done in the performance of their duties, their proper course, if believing and desiring that their defence should be assumed by the United States, is to apply for counsel, (reporting the facts,) as prescribed by par. 845 of the Army Regulations, to the Secretary of War, who, if deeming the application reasonable, will, under the existing law, refer the question, whether counsel can legally or properly be employed in the case by the United States, to the Department of Justice. Upon the Attorney General as the head of that Department, on its establishment by the Act of June 22, 1870, c. 150,³ was exclusively devolved the authority to provide for the defence of public officers in civil proceedings. Whether he will decide to do so in any particular case will in general mainly be determined by the amount of 'interest,' pecuniary or otherwise, which the United States may have in the case or the questions involved therein,⁴ considerations of justice to the individual being also taken into account.⁵

5. Attorney General Black, in IX Opins. At. Gen., 52, observes as follows:—"When an officer of the United States is sued for doing what he was required to do by law, or by the special orders of the Government, he ought to be defended by the Government. This is required by the plain principles of justice as well as by sound policy." It has therefore "been the uniform practice of the Federal Government, ever since its foundation, to take upon itself the defence of its officers who are sued or prosecuted for executing its laws." And he cites many instances of such practice. He further holds, (p. 53,) that where such an officer carries on his own defence without appealing to the government pending the cause, he has a just claim for the sum that he may be "out

For indemnification for any damages other than nominal that he may be required to pay, as also for the expenses of his defence where not assumed by the United States, the officer will in general have no recourse except to Congress.¹ That body has from time to time passed special Acts for the relief of officers of the army or navy, who have been subjected to pecuniary losses on account of suits for acts done in the honest discharge of duty.²

Amenability to Criminal Prosecution in State Courts.

Except where the act was committed upon a reservation or other premises within the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States, an officer or soldier is liable, for a criminal offence against the local law, to prosecution in the courts of the State or Territory, in the same manner as is a civilian. His being in the military service of the United States affects in no degree his amenability to such prosecution; nor is it affected by the fact that he was at the time of the offence engaged in the performance of military duty, if in such performance he exceeded his authority or was culpably negligent.³

The principal occasions and acts upon or for which a military person may render himself liable to indictment in the local criminal courts have already been noticed in Chapter XXV, of PART I, (in reviewing the separate Articles of war,) and elsewhere, and need not be repeated. Prosecutions of officers and soldiers for crimes in State courts are not indeed of frequent occurrence. Even in time of peace, when the criminal jurisdiction of military Circuit Ct., 5 Sawyer, 17, hereinbefore referred to,) "said judgment"—it is added—"having been obtained against him, and costs incurred by him, while acting in the line of his duty as Captain, &c."

Later, by the Act of August 5, 1882, c. 390, making appropriations for the Navy Department, &c., the sum of seven hundred and fifty dollars was appropriated "for legal expenses incurred by Rear Admiral John L. Worden, in defending the suit of Bernard Maurice against him for alleged damages caused by the official acts of said Admiral Worden in the discharge of his duty while Superintendent of the Naval Academy in 1872."

tribunals is comparatively limited, much the greater part of the criminal offences committed within the army are cognizable and are disposed of by general courts-martial, under Art. 62 or otherwise.

III. OTHER CIVIL RELATIONS OF THE MILITARY.

Effect in General of the Military Status. Not only in time of war, but frequently also in time of peace, the officers and soldiers of the army are so isolated by the exigencies and obligations of the military service that they are not in a position to exercise the common rights of the citizen and do not become subject to his burdens.

Restriction of Civil Rights by U. S. Statute. They are also debarred from exercising certain of such rights by express legislation of Congress. Thus, by Sec. 1222, Rev. Sts., officers of the army on the active list are precluded from holding "any civil office." By Sec. 1223, all officers of the army, whether active or retired, are specially precluded from holding diplomatic or consular office. By Sec. 1860, as amended by the Act of March 3, 1883, all military persons, except retired officers, are prohibited from holding civil offices in Territories. By the same Section it is declared that no military person "shall be allowed to vote in any Territory by reason of being on service therein, unless such Territory is, and has been for six months, his permanent domicile." And by Secs. 1996, 1998, Rev. Sts., deserters are placed under a disability to hold office under the United States, or exercise other rights of citizenship."

1. As to the construction and effect of this statute, see, in full, DIGEST, 157-160, tit. "Civil Office;" also Opin. of At. Gen., of May 9, 1884, as to the acceptance, by an engineer officer of the army, of a certain municipal office in Philadelphia. Exceptions from the operation of the Section can of course be authorized only by Congress. See an instance of such an exception, in a case of an engineer officer, authorized by Joint Res. of Feb. 28, 1883. The Act of June 11, 1878, requiring that one of the three Commissioners, who constitute the local government of the District of Columbia, shall be an officer of the Engineer Corps of the Army, has engrafted a permanent exception upon the original statute.

2. That proof of a conviction of desertion is necessary to debar a deserter from exercising the right of suffrage, see ante, Vol. I, p. 925-6.

Restriction by State Laws. So, the constitutions or laws of some of the States disqualify military officers in whole or in part from holding office under the State;¹ or restrict their right to vote by declaring in effect that they shall not gain a residence or habitation, for that purpose, merely by being stationed therein. In the absence of such provisions, a retired officer or soldier may hold such office; and any officer or soldier may vote if only he has resided in, or inhabited, the State, county, &c., for the requisite period. The fact that he is in the military service does not disqualify a person from obtaining a residence;² but being, while on the active list, always subject to orders as to the period of his stay at any post or station, he cannot in general exercise the volition or entertain the intention necessary to the selection and acquisition of a legal residence.³ By the laws, however, of some of the States a mere habitation for a certain period is all that is necessary to entitle the person to exercise the right of suffrage.

Liability to Taxation. An officer or soldier of the army is of course liable to be taxed for such real estate as he may possess, in the State, &c., in which it may be situate. As to personal property, he is in general liable to be taxed therefor whenever his habitation is apart from a military post. It is not essential that he should have a permanent residence to subject him to local taxation, personal property taxes being legally imposable upon mere inhabitants, or upon property held at the place irrespective of the status of the owner.

Whether an officer, &c., stationed at a military post is legally liable to be taxed for his personalty, will depend upon the question whether the State is empowered to exercise jurisdiction over the locality.⁴

his rank and office, or required or intended to be employed by him in the military service. This, upon the fundamental principle that no lesser sovereignty or authority can restrict or interfere with the means or instruments by or through which the Government of the United States is administered. "The authorities of a State," as the law is declared by Atty. Gen. Black,¹ "cannot impose a tax upon the salary of a federal officer, or upon the compensation paid by the United States to any person engaged in their service." Or, as it is held by the Supreme Court,— "Taxation by a State cannot act upon the instruments, emoluments, &c., which the United States may use and employ as necessary and proper means to execute their sovereign powers."²

Effect of being stationed at a place over which the United States exercises exclusive jurisdiction. Where exclusive jurisdiction over a military reservation or post situated within a State is vested in the United States, either by its having expressly reserved the same upon the admission of the State, or by means of the subsequent cession of its own jurisdiction by the State, (or—what is equivalent—the consent of the State to the purchase of the land by the United States,³) the persons stationed or commorant upon the premises become isolated, both territorially and as respects their civil relations. In a political sense, the land is no longer a part of the soil of the State nor are the occupants inhabitants of the State. They are severed from the enjoyment of the rights, and from subjection to the liabilities, of the citizens of the State as entirely as if they were residents of a foreign country. They have no more right to vote in the State, to send their children to the public schools, to use the public libraries, to be protected by the police or fire department, &c., than have the citizens of another State. On the other hand, they cannot legally be taxed by the State or municipality for their personal property held on the premises, or be required to per-

3. That the mere fact that the United States is owner of the land, or the fact that the same has been duly reserved for military purposes, does not invest the United States with exclusive jurisdiction over it, has been repeatedly held. See U. S. v. Stahl, 1 Woolworth, 192; Do. McCahon, 206; Ex parte Sloan, 4 Sawyer, 331; Clay v. State, 4 Kans. 49; U. S. v. Penn., 4 Hughes, 491.

form militia duty, or to serve on juries, or to furnish labor on the roads, &c., in the State, nor are they subject to the civil or criminal process of the local courts except in so far as the right to execute the same may have been reserved to the State.¹ This is the status not only of the officers and soldiers stationed at the post but of the civil employees and persons permitted to reside upon the reservation.²

Otherwise within a Territory. This peculiar status, however—it need hardly be added—cannot exist where the region in which the post or reservation is situated is still a Territory. The authority of the civil officials of a Territory emanates, either immediately or mediately, from Congress; and, in the absence of any provision in the legislation of Congress relating to the organization and government of a Territory, (or in the general statute law,) by which officers or soldiers of the army stationed therein are specially exempted from the jurisdiction of the Territorial courts or authorities, they will be amenable thereto in the same manner and to the same extent as civilians,³ except in so far as their liability may be affected by an existing state of war.

1. The State, in ceding its jurisdiction, generally reserves the right to execute within the reservation process issued by its courts on account of criminal offences committed or causes of action initiated without the same,—in order that the place may not serve as an asylum for criminals, debtors, &c.

2. On the general subject of this exclusive jurisdiction—how it is acquired and what is its effect—see, in addition to the authorities cited in note 3, page 146, the following: *U. S. v. O. 30 of 1878, publishing an opinion of Judge Advocate General Dunn, approved by the Secretary of War, to the effect that a Territorial Justice of the Peace may exercise jurisdiction in cases of military persons stationed on a military reservation in the Territory. An opinion contra, of Hoyt J., of the District Court of Washington Territory, published in Circular No. 21, Dept. of the Columbia, 1885, is deemed to proceed upon a misconception of the legal status and powers of officials of Territories and not to be sound law.

ORDINANCE OF RICHARD I—A. D. 1190.

[“Chiefly meant to prevent disputes between the soldiers and sailors, in their voyage to the holy land.” Grose, Hist. Eng. Army, vol. 2, p. 63.]

“Richard, by the grace of God, King of England, Duke of Normandy and Aquitaine, and Earl of Anjou, to all his subjects about to proceed by sea to Jerusalem, greeting. Know ye, that we, with the common consent of fit and proper men, have made the enactments under-written. Whoever shall slay a man on ship-board, he shall be bound to the dead man and thrown into the sea. If he shall slay him on land, he shall be bound to the dead man and buried in the earth. If any one shall be convicted, by means of lawful witnesses, of having drawn out a knife with which to strike another, or shall strike another so as to draw blood, he shall lose his hand. If, also, he shall give a blow with his hand, without shedding blood, he shall be plunged in the sea three times. If any man shall utter disgraceful language or abuse, or shall curse his companion, he shall pay him an ounce of silver for every time he has so abused him. A robber who shall be convicted of theft shall have his head cropped after the manner of a champion,* and boiling pitch shall be poured thereon, and then the feathers of a cushion shall be shaken out upon him, so that he may be known, and at the first land at which the ships shall touch, he shall be set on shore. Witness myself, at Chinon.”

* Champions hired to fight legal duels, in cases of murder and homicide, had their hair clipped close to their heads. (Note by Samuel.)

ARTICLES OF WAR OF RICHARD II—A. D. 1385.

These are the Statutes, Ordonnances, and Customs, to be observed in the Army, ordained and made by good consultation and deliberation of our most Excellent Lord the King Richard, John Duke of Lancaster, Seneschall of England, Thomas Earl of Essex and Buckingham, Constable of England, and Thomas de Mowbray, Earl of Nottingham, Mareschall of England, and other Lords, Earls, Barons, Banneretts, and experienced Knights, whom they have thought proper to call unto them; then being at Durham the 17th Day of the Month of July, in the ninth Year of the Reign of our Lord the King Richard II.

I. FIRSTLY. That all manner of persons, of what nation, state, or condition they may be, shall be obedient to our lord the King, to his constable and mareschall, under penalty of everything they can forfeit in body and goods.

II. ITEM, that none be so hardy as to touch the body of our lord, nor the vessel in which it is contained, under pain of being drawn, hanged, and beheaded.

III. ITEM, that none be so hardy as to rob and pillage the church, nor to destroy any man belonging to holy church, religious or otherwise, nor any woman, nor to take them prisoners, if not bearing arms; nor to force any woman, upon pain of being hanged.

IV. ITEM, that no one be so hardy to go before, or otherwise than in the battail to which he belongs, under the banner or pennon of his lord or master, except the herbergers, whose names shall be given in by their lords or masters to our constable and mareschall, upon pain of losing their horses.

V. ITEM, that no one take quarters, otherwise than by the assignment of the constable and mareschall and the herbergers; and that, after the quarters are assigned and delivered, let no one be so hardy as to remove himself, or quit his quarters, on any account whatsoever, under pain of forfeiture of horse and armour, and his body to be in arrest, and at the King's will.

VI. ITEM, that every one be obedient to his captain, and perform watch and ward, forrage, and all other things belonging to his duty, under penalty of losing his horse and armour, and his body being in arrest to the mareschall, till he shall have made his peace with his lord or master, according to the award of the court.

VII. ITEM, that no one be so hardy as to rob or pillage another of money, victuals, provisions, forage, or any other thing, on pain of losing his head; nor shall any one take any victuals, merchandise, or any other thing whatsoever, brought for the refreshment of the army, under the same penalty; and any one who shall give the names of such robbers and pillagers to the constable and mareschall, shall have twenty nobles for his labor.

VIII. ITEM, no one shall make a riot or contention in the army for debate of arms, prisoners, lodgings, or any other thing whatsoever, nor cause any party or assembly of persons, under pain (the principals as well as the parties) of losing their horses and armour, and having their bodies in arrest at the King's will, and if it be a boy or page he shall lose his left ear. Any person conceiving himself aggrieved shall make known his grievance to the constable and mareschall, and right shall be done him.

IX. ITEM, that no one be so hardy as to make a contention or debate in the army on account of any grudge respecting time past, or for any thing to come; if in such contest or debate any one shall be slain, those who were the occasion shall be hanged; and if any one shall proclaim his own name, or that of his lord or master, so as to cause a rising of the people, whereby an affray might happen in the army, he who made the proclamation shall be drawn and hanged.

X. ITEM, that no one be so hardy as to cry "havok,"¹ under pain of losing his head, and that he or they that shall be the beginners of the said cry shall likewise be beheaded, and their bodies afterwards be hanged up by the arms.

XI. ITEM, that no one make the cry called mounté,² or any other whatsoever in the army, on account of the great danger that may thereby happen to the whole army; which God forbid! and that on pain, if he be a man at arms, or archer on horseback, of losing his best horse; and if he be an archer on foot or boy, he shall have his left ear cut off.

XII. 12. For the explaining of this Article formerly exprest : If there bee none to complaine of these abuses, then shall the Minister himself give notice thereof unto the Colonell or Captain, and if he shall suffer such abuses to goe unpunished, then shall he give the Generall notice thereof, who shall doe him right.

13. All Priests and Ministers that are to be in our Camp or Leaguer, shall be appointed by the Bishop of the same Diocesse or Land from whence the Souldiers come whom he is to be among : no Colonell nor Captain shall take what Minister he shall think good, but shall be content with whom the Bishop shall appoint him.

16. If any Minister be found ill inclined to drunkenness or otherwise; then may his Colonell or Captain of Horse or Foot complain of him in the Consistory; and if his fellow-Ministers find him guilty, then may they discharge him of his place. In such complaints, shall the whole Consistory and the President severely also reprehend him, that others of the same calling may take example thereby, and be warned of such grosse errors, and give good example unto others.

17. For that no government can stand firmly, unlesse it be first rightly grounded; and that the Lawes be rightly observed; We, the King of, &c., doe hereby make known unto all our Souldiers and Subjects, as well Nobles as others; that in our presence they presume not to doe any unseemly thing: but that every one give us our due honour, as we ought

No souldier shall abuse any Churches, Colledges, Schooles or Hospitalls; or offer any kind of violence to Ecclesiasticall persons, nor in any way be troublesome with pitching or inquartering upon them, or with exacting of contribution from them; no souldier shall give disturbance or offence to any person exercising his sacred function or Ministry, upon paine of death.

99. Let the billet and lodgings in every City be assigned to the Souldiers, by the Burge-masters or chiefe Head-borroughes; and let no Commander presume to meddle with that office; no Commander or common souldier shall either exact or receive of the Townesmen or Citizens anything, besides what the King or his Generall in his absence hath appointed to be received.

100. No Citizen nor Countryman shall be bound to allow unto either Souldier or Officer any thing but what is contained in the King's Orders, for contributions and enquarterings; (viz.) nothing besides house-rooms, fire-wood, candle, vineger and salt, which is yet to be understood that the inferiour Officers, as Serjeants and Corporalls, and those under them, as also all common Souldiers, shall make shift with the common fire and candle of the house where they lie, and do their businesse by them.

101. If so be that Colonels and other Commanders have any servants or attendants, they shall not be maintained by the Citizens or Yeomandry, but by their own Masters.

102. No Commander shall take any house or lodging in his protection, or at his owne pleasure give a ticket of freedome, when such tickets are not expresly desired of him, nor shall he receive any bribe or present to mend his owne commons withall, under any colour or pretext whatsoever. If any man desire a personall safeguard, let him be contented with that which is appointed in the King's Orders.

103. To Commanders and Souldiers present, let the usuall allowance be offered by the Citizens, but let no care be taken for such as are away.

104. New-levied Souldiers are to have no allowance before they be entertained at the Muster.

106. If either Officer, Souldier, or Sutler be to travell through any Country, the people are not to furnish them with Waggon, Post-horse, or victuals but for their ready money, unless they bring a Warrant either from the King or the Generall.

107. No Souldier is to forsake his Colours, and to put himself under the entertainment of any other Colonell or Garrison, or to ramble about the Countrey, without he hath his Colonel's Passe, or his that is in his stead : who so doth, it shall bee lawfull for any man to apprehend him, and send him prisoner to the next Garrison of the King's, where he shall be examined, and punished accordingly.

108. Whosoever have any lawfull Passes, ought by no means to abuse the benefit of them, or practise any cheats under the pretence of them. If any be found with any pilfery, or to have taken any man's cattell or goods; it shall be lawfull for the Countrey-people to lay hands upon them, and to bring them to the next Garrison; speciall care being had, that if the prisoner hath any letters of moment about him, they be speedily and safely delivered.

109. Our Carriers or Posts, though they have lawfull Passes to travell withall, yet shall they not ride their Post-horses, which they hire, beyond the next Stage. And if they shall take away any horse from one or other, to tire out with hard riding, and beyond reason; they shall be bound to return the horse again, or to make satisfaction for him. The same order shall take place too, when any Regiment or Troops of ours shall remove from one Quarter to another; namely, when they shall hire Postillions or baggage-Waggons for the carriage of their Valises, Armes or Ammunition.

110. The houses of the Princes or Nobility which have no need to borrow our Guard to defend them from our enemy, shall not be pressed with souldiers.

111. Moreover, under a great penaltie, it is provided, that neither Officers nor Souldiers shall make stay of, or arrest the Princes Commissaries or Officers, or any Gentlemen, Councillors of State, Senators or Burgers of any Cities, or other countrey-people; nor by any fact of violence shall offend them.

112. Travellers, or other passengers going about their businesse into any Garrisons or places of Muster, shall by no means bee stayed, injured, or have contribution laid upon them.

113. Our Commanders shall defend the countrey-people and Ploughmen that follow their husbandry, and shall suffer none to hinder them in it.

114. No Commander or common souldier whatsoever, either in Town of Garrison, or place of Muster, shall exact anything upon Passengers, nor shall lay any Custome or Toll upon any Merchandize imported or exported; nor shall any bee a hindrance to the Lord of the place, in receiving his due Customes or Toll-gathering; but to further them.

115. If any of our Officers having power of Command, shall give the Word for any Remove or March to some other Quarter; those souldiers either of Horse or Foot that privily lurk behind their fellows shall have no power to exact part of the contributions formerly allotted for their maintenance in that place; but shall severally be punished rather for their lingering behind the Army.

116. Whatsoever is not contained in these Articles, and is repugnant to Military Discipline, or whereby the miserable and innocent country may against all right and reason be burdened withall, whatsoever offence finally shall be committed against these orders, that shall the severall Commanders make good, or see severally punished unlessse themselves will stand bound to give further satisfaction for it.

117. According to these Articles, let every man governe his businesse and actions, and learne by them to take heed in comming into lurch or danger.

118. If any Souldier happens to get free-booty in any Castle, City, Towne, Fort Strength, or Leaguer; and moreover whatsoever Ordnance, Munitiō for Warre, and victuals is found there, shall be left for our use, the rest shall be the Souldiers, only the tenth part thereof shall they give to the sicke and inaimed Souldiers in the Hospitalls. All prisoners shall first be presented to us, amongst which if there bee any man of note, whom we desire to have unto our selves, wee promise in lieu thereof honestly to recompence the taker of him, according to the quality of the person; other prisoners of inferiour ranke may the takers keep unto themselves, whom by our leave or our Generalls they may put to their ransome and take it to themselves, but without leave they may not ransome them upon paine of death.

119. If any bee found drunken in the enemies Leaguer Castle, or Towne, before the enemy hath yielded himself wholly up to our mercy, and laid downe his Armes; whosoever shall kill the said drunken Souldier, shall be free for it; alwayes provided that good prooffe be brought that hee was drunken; and if that Souldier escape for that time with his life, and that it can appeare that some dammage or hindrance hath come unto our service by his drunkennesse, then wheresoever he be apprehended he shall die for it; but if no hurt ensued thereof, yet shall be put in irons for the space of one month, living upon his pittance of Bread and Water.

120. All our Souldiers shall duely repaire unto the generall musters upon the day and houre appointed; nor shall any Colonell or Captaine either of Horse or Foot, keepe backe his Souldiers from being mustered at the time when our Muster-masters shall desire to view them; if any refuse, he shall be taken for a Mutiner.

121. No Colonell nor Captaine shall lend any of their Souldiers to another upon the Muster-dayes for the making up of their numbers compleat; he that thus makes a false Muster, shall answer it at the Marshalls Court, where being found guilty he shall be proclaimed Traitor; after which being put out of the Quarter, his Colours shall flie no more.

122. If any Souldier hires out himselfe for money to runne the Gate-lope* three severall times, he shall be beheaded, and if any Captaine shall so permit or counsell his Souldier to doe the same, he shall be actually cashiered.

123. If any Horseman borrowes either Horse, Armour, Pistols, Saddle, Sword, or Harnesse to passe Muster withall, so much as is borrowed shall be escheated, and himselfe after that turned out of the Leaguer, as likewise he shall that lent it him; the one halfe of the Armes forfeited shall goe to the Captaine, and the other halfe unto the Parforce.

124. If it can be proved that any Horseman hath wilfully spoyled his Horse; hee shall bee made Traitor, lose his Horse and bee turned out the Quarter.

* Running the Gate-lope or Purgatory, is, when he that hath done the fault, is to run between the Regiment standing halfe on one side, and halfe on the other, with whips or bastinadoes in their hands, to lash and cudgel the offender, which punishment many a shameless souldier will be hired to undergo for drinke or money. (Note by Ward.)

125. All Souldiers both of Horse and Foot shall be taken on at a free Muster, but not by any private Captaine; neither shall their pay goe on before they be mustered by our Muster-masters.

126. No Souldier either of Horse or Foot shall be cashiered by his Colonell, Captaine, or other inferiour officer; nor shall they who being taken on at a free Muster, have their men sworne to serve (if it please God) untill the next Muster, except it be upon a free Muster, at which time the Muster-masters, and his Colonell may freely give him his Passe.

127. If any forreine Souldiere shall desire his passe in any Towne of Garrison after the enemy be retired he may have it; but by no means whilst there is any service to be done against the enemy.

128. If any Souldier or Native subject, desires to bee discharged from the warres, he shall give notice thereof unto the Muster-masters; who if they finde him to bee sicke, or maimed, or that hee served twenty yeares in our warres, or hath bene ten severall times before the enemy, and can bring good witness thereof, he shall be discharged.

129. If any Colonell or Captaine, either of Horse or Foot, does give any Passe otherwise than is before mentioned, he shall be punished as for other Felonies; and he who hath obtained the same Passe, shall lose three moneths pay, and be put in prison for one moneth, upon bread and water.

130. No Colonell or Captaine either of Horse or Foot shall give leave to his Souldiers to goe home out of the Field, without leave of our Generall, or chiefe Commander; whosoever does the contrary, shall lose three moneths pay, and be put in prison for one moneth, upon Bread and Water.

131. No Captaine either of Horse or Foote shall presume to goe out of any Leaguer or place or Strength to demand his pay, without leave of the Generall or Governour; who so doth, shall be cashired from his place, and put out of the quarters.

132. No Captaine either of Horse or Foot shall hold backe any of his souldiers, meanes from him; of which if any complaine, the Captaine shall answer it before the Court, where being found guilty, he shall be punished as for other Felony; also if any mischance ensue thereupon, as that the Souldiers mutine, be sicke, or endure hunger, or give up any Strength; then shall he answer for all those inconveniences, that hereupon can or may ensue.

133. If any Captaine lends money unto his souldiers which he desires should be paid againe; that must be done in the presence of the Muster-masters, that our service be no way hindred or neglected.

134. If upon necessity the case sometimes so falls out in the Leaguer, that pay bee not always made at the due time mentioned in the Commissions, yet shall every man in the meane time be willing to further our service, seeing they have victuals sufficient for the present, and that they shall so soone as may bee receive the rest of their means, as is mentioned in their Commission.

135. Very requisite it is, that good justice be holden amongst our Souldiers, as well as amongst other our Subjects.

136. For the same reason was a King ordained by God to be the Sovereigne Judge in the field as well as at home.

137. Now therefore in respect of many occasions which may fall out, his single judgment alone may bee too weak to discern every particular circumstance; therefore it is requisite that in the Leaguer, as well as elsewhere, there be some Court of Justice erected for the deciding of all controversies; and to be carefull in like manner, that our Articles of warre be of all persons observed and obeyed so farre forth as is possible.

138. We ordained therefore that there be two Courts in our Leaguer: a high Court and a lower Court.

139. The lower Court shall be amongst the Regiments both of Horse and Foot, whereof every Regiment shall have one among themselves.

140. In the Horse-Regiments the Colonell shall be President, and in his absence the Captaine of our owne Life-guards; with them are three Captains to be joyned, three Lieutenants, three Cornets, and three Quarter-masters, that so together with the President they may be to the number of thirteene at the leaste.

141. In a Regiment of Foot the Colonell also shall be President, and his Lieutenant Colonell in his absence; with them are two Captains to be joyned, two Lieutenants, two Ensignes, foure Serjeants, and two Quarter-masters; that together with the President they may be thirteene in number also.

142. In our highest Marshall Court, shall our General be President; in his absence our Field Marshall; when our Generall is present, his associates shall be our Field Marshall first, next him our General of the Ordnance, Serjeant Major Generall, Generall of the Horse, Quarter-Master-General; next to them shall sit our Muster-Masters and all our Colonells, and in their absence their Lieutenant Colonells, and these shall sit together when there is any matter of great importance in controversie.

143. Whensoever this highest Court is to be holden they shall observe this order; our great Generall as President, shall sit alone at the head of the Table, on his right hand our Field-Marshall, on his left hand the Generall of the Ordnance, on the right hand next our Serjeant-Major-General, on the left hand againe the Generall of the Horse, and then the Quarter-Master-General on one hand, and the Muster-Master-General on the other; after them shall every Colonell sit according to his place as here followes; first, the Colonell of our Life Regiment, or of the Guards of our owne person; then every Colonell according to their places of antiquity. If there happen to be any great men in the Army of our subjects, that be of good understanding, they shall cause them to sit next these Officers; after these shall sit all the Colonells of strange Nations, every one according to his antiquity of service.

144. All these Judges both of higher and lower Courts, shall under the blue Skies thus sweare before Almighty God, that they will inviolably keep this following oath unto us: I. R. W. doe here promise before God upon his holy Gospell, that I both will and shall Judge uprightly in all things according to the Lawes of God, of our Nation, and these Articles of Warre, so farre forth as it pleaseth Almighty God to give me understanding; neither will I for favour nor for hatred, for good will, feare, ill will, anger, or any gift or bribe whatsoever, judge wrongfully; but judge him free that ought to be free, and doom him guilty, that I finde guilty; as the Lord of Heaven and Earth shall help my soule and body at the last day, I shall hold this oath truly.

145. The Judges of our highest Court shall take this their oath in the first Leaguer, where our Campe shall be pitched; our Generall, and the rest appointed to set with him shall repaire to the place where we shall appoint, before his Tent, or elsewhere; where an officer appointed by us shall first take his oath, and then the others oathes also.

146. When the President of our lower Courts shall heare this foresaid oath read before them, then shall they hold up their hands, and sweare to keep it; in like manner, so often as any Court is to be holden in any Regiment, the aforesaid oath shall be read before all them that sit in judgment with him, who shall also hold up their hands and promise to keep the oath aforesaid.

147. In our highest Court, there shall be one Sworne Secretary appointed, who shall make a diligent record of all the proceedings that shall fall out, either in any pitcht Battell, Skirmish, Leaguer, or any other peece of service whatsoever; he shall take the note, both of the day, place, and houre, with all other circumstances that shall happen; he shall also set his hand unto all sentences signed by our Generall; he shall have also two Clerkes or Notaries under him, who shall ingrosse all these passages, and keepe a true Register of all enterprises that our Generall with his Counsell of Warre shall give order to have done; and likewise of what letters be either written or received.

148. In our highest Court there shall be one Vice-president, who shall command the Serjeant at Armes, whose office is to warne in all the Judges of the Court, that they may there appeare at the time and place appointed, and also to give the same notice both unto the Plaintife and Defendant.

149. In all lower Courts also, there shall be one sworne Clerke or Secretary who shall likewise hold the same order that is mentioned in our highest Court.

150. Our highest Court shall be carefull also to heare and judge all criminall actions, and especially cases of conspiracy or treason practised or plotted against us, or our Generall either in word or deed; secondly, if any gives out dishonourable speeches against our Majesty; thirdly, or consulteth with the enemy to betray our Leaguer, Castle, Towne, Souldiers, or Fleet any way whatsoever; fourthly, if any there be partakers of such treason or treachery, and reveale it not; fifthly, or any that hath held correspondency and intelligence with the enemy; sixthly, if any hath a spite or malice against us or our Country; seventhly, if any speake disgracefully, either of our owne Generalls person or endeavours; eighthly, or that intendeth treachery against our Generall or his Under-Officers; or that speaketh disgracefully of them.

151. All questions in like manner happening betwixt Officers and their Souldiers, if they suspect our lower Court to be partiall any way, then may they appeale unto our highest Court, who shall decide the matter.

152. If a Gentleman or any Officer be summoned to appeare before the lower Court, for any matter of importance that may touch his life, or honour; then shall the same be decided by our higher Court.

153. All civill questions shall be in controversie in our lower Court, if the debt or fine extends unto five hundred Dollars or seventy-five pounds or above; if the party complaines of injustice, they may thence appeale unto the higher Court, if so be they can first prove the injustice.

154. All other occasions that may fall out, be they civill, or be they criminall; shall first come before the lower Court where they shall be heard and what is there by good evidence proved, shall be recorded.

155. Any criminall action, that is adjudged in our lower Court, we command that the sentence be presented unto our Generall; we will not have it presently put in execution, untill he gives command for it in our absence. But our selves being in person there present, will first take notice of it, and dispose afterwards of it, as we shall think expedient.

156. In our higher Court, the Generall Parforce, or his Lieutenant shall be the Plaintife, who shall be bound to follow the complaint diligently, to the end he may the better informe our Counsellors who are to doe Justice: if it be a matter against ourselves, then shall our owne Advocate defend our action before our Court.

157. The same power the Parforce of every Regiment shall have in our lower Court, which Parforce shall be bound, also to give notice of every breach of these Articles of warre, that the infringer may be punished.

158. Whatsoever fine is by the aforesaid Judges determined according to our Articles of warre, and escheated thereupon, shall be divided into three parts. Our owne parte of the fine we freely bestow upon the severall Captains either of Horse or Foot, which is forfeited by their Officers and Souldiers; and the forfeiture of every Captain, we bestow upon their Colonell; and the forfeiture of every Colonell we give unto our Generall. The other two parts, belonging either to the party to whom it is adjudged, or to the Court, those leave we undisposed, the point of Treason onely excepted: and this gift of ours unto our Officers, is to be understood to indure so long as the Army be in the field, upon any strength or worke, and till they come home againe, after which time, they shall come under the law of the land like the other inhabitants.

159. Whensoever our highest Court is to sit, it shal be two houres before proclaimed through the Leaguer, that there is such an action criminall to be there tried, which is to be decided under the blue skies: but if it be an action civill, then may the court be holden within some tent, or elsewhere; then shall the souldiers come together, about the place where the Court is to be holden, no man presuming to come too neere the table where the Judges are to sit; then shall our Generall come foremost of all, and the other his associates, two and two together, in which order, they all comming out of the Generalls tent, shall set themselves down in the Court, in the order before appointed; the Secretaries place shall be at the lower end of the table, where he shall take diligent notice in writing of all things declared before the Court; then shall the Generall Parforce begin to open his complaint before them, and the contrary party shall have liberty to answer for himselfe, untill the Judges be thoroughly informed of the truth of all things.

160. If the Court be to be holden in any house or tent, they shall observe the same order in following the Generall in their degrees, where they shall also sit as is afore mentioned.

161. The matter being thoroughly opened and considered upon, according to the importance of it, and our whole Court agreeing in one opinion; they shall command their sentence concerning the same action, to be publicly there read in the hearing of all men, alwayes reserving his Majesties further will and pleasure.

162. In our lower Court they shall also hold the same order; saving that the particular Court of every Regiment, shall be holden in their owne quarters.

163. In this lower Court, they shall alwayes observe this order; namely, that the President sits at the bords end alone, the Captaines, Lieutenants, and Ensignes on either side; so many inferior Officers also upon each side, that so they may the better reason upon the matter amongst themselves; Last of all, shall the Clerke or Secretary sit at the lower end of the Table; the one party standing upon one hand, and the other upon the other.

164. So soon as the sentence is given the President shall rise up and all that sit with him, but doom being given by our Generall, that one of the parties must lose his head, hand, or the like; then shall they command the Parforce to take him away to Prison, which done, the Parforce shall send unto the Minister, to desire him to visit the Party, and to give him the Communion; but if the doom be passed in any lower Court, it shall be signified up unto the Generall in our absence, who shall either pardon the fact, or execute the sentence.

165. No superiour Officer, Colonel or Captain, either of Horse or Foot, shall sollicite for any man that is lawfully convicted by the Court, either for any crime, or for not observing of these Articles of Warre; unless it be for his very neere kinsman, for whom nature compells him to intercede; otherwise the soliciter shall be held as odious as the delinquent and cashiered from his charge.

166. Whosoever is minded to serve us in these Warres, shall be obliged to the keepin of these Articles. If any out of presumption, upon any Strength, in any Leaguer, in the field, or upon any worke, shall doe the contrary, be he Native or be he Stranger, Gentleman or other, Processe shall be made out against him for every time, so-long as he serves us in these warres in the quality of a Souldier.

167. These Articles of warre we have made and ordained for the welfare of our Native Countrey, and doe command that they be read every moneth publickly before every Regiment, to the end that no man shall pretend ignorance. We further will and command all, whatsoever Officers higher or lower, and all our common souldiers, and all others that come into our Leaguer amongst the souldiers, that none presume to doe the contrary hereof upon paine of rebellion, and the incurring of our highest displeasure; For the firmer confirmation whereof, we have hereunto set our hand and seale.

SIGNED IN THE LEAGUER ROYALL.

EXTRACT FROM THE "ENGLISH MILITARY DISCIPLINE" OF JAMES II. (1686.)

OF COUNCELS OF WAR OR COURTS MARTIAL.

In an Army the Council of War is always to Meet at the Generals Quarters or Tent, and none are called to it but the Lieutenant-Generals, the Major-Generals, the Brigadiers, and the Colonels or Commanders of Bodies when the Matters concern their Regiments.

Private Councils of War or Courts Martial in a Garison are either Held at the Governours House, at the Main Guard, or where the Governour orders. In a Camp, At the Colonels Tent, who causes Notice to be given to the Captains to be present.

When all are met, The Governour or Colonel, or he who is to Sit as President, takes his place at the head of the Table, the Captains Sit about according to their Seniority (that is to say) The First Captain on the Right Hand of him that Presides, The Second on the Left, and so of the rest. And the Town-Major or the Aid-Major or Quarter-Master of the Regiment, who in the absence of the Judge-Advocate discharges his Office, is to Sit in his Place at the lower end of the Table.

The Lieutenants, Sub-Lieutenants and Ensigns have right to enter into the Room where the Council of War (or Court Martial) is held, But they are to stand at the Captains backs with their Hats off, and have no Vote.

If the Council be Called to Deliberate on some Matter of Consequence, The President having Opened it to the Court, Asks their Opinions.

The youngest Officer gives his Opinion first, and the rest in order till it come to the President who speaks last. The Opinions of every one being set down in Writing, the Result is drawn conformable to the Plurality of Votes which is Signed by the President onely.

If the Council of War, or Court-martial be held to judge a Criminal, the President and Captains having taken their places, and the Prisoner being brought before them, And the Informations read, The President Interrogates the Prisoner about all the Facts whereof he is accused, and having heard his Defence, and the Proof made or alleged against him, He is ordered to withdraw, being remitted to the Care of the Marshal or Jaylor. Then every one judges according to his Conscience, and the Ordinances or Articles of War. The Sentence is framed according to the Plurality of Votes, and the Criminal being brought in again, The Sentence is Pronounced to him in the name of the Council of War, or Court Martial.

When a Criminal is Condemned to any Punishment, the Provost Martial causes the Sentence to be put in Execution; And if it be a publick Punishment, the Regiment ought to be drawn together to see it, that thereby the Soldiers may be deterred from offending. Before a Soldier be punished for any infamous Crime, he is to be publicly Degraded from his Arms, and his coat stript over his ears.

A Council of War or Court Martial is to consist of Seven at least with the President, when so many Officers can be brought together ; And if it so happen that there be not Captains enough to make up that Number, the inferiour Officers may be called in.

VIII.

THE MASSACHUSETTS ARTICLES OF WAR.

ADOPTED BY THE PROVISIONAL CONGRESS OF MASSACHUSETTS BAY, APRIL 5, 1775.

Whereas the lust of power which of old oppressed, persecuted and exiled our pious and virtuous ancestors from their fair possessions in Britain, now pursues with ten-fold severity us, their guileless children, who are unjustly and wickedly charged with licentiousness, sedition, treason and rebellion; and being deeply impressed with a sense of the almost incredible fatigues and hardships our venerable progenitors encountered, who fled from oppression for the sake of civil and religious liberty for themselves and their offspring, and began a settlement here on bare creation at their own expense; and having seriously considered the duty we owe to God, to the memory of such invincible worthies, to the King, to Great Britain, our country, ourselves, and posterity, do think it our indispensable duty, by all lawful ways and means in our power, to recover, maintain, defend, and preserve the free exercise of all those civil and religious rights and liberties, for which many of our forefathers fought bled and died, and to hand them down entire for the free enjoyment of the latest posterity. And whereas the keeping of a Standing Army in any of these Colonies in times of peace, without the consent of the Legislature of that Colony in which such Army is kept, is against law. And whereas such an Army, with a large Naval force, is now placed in the Town and Harbour of Boston, for the purpose of subjecting us to the power of the British Parliament. And whereas we are frequently told by the tools of the Administration, dupes to Ministerial usurpation, that Great Britain will not in any degree relax in her measures until we acknowledge her "right of making laws binding upon us in all cases whatever," and that if we persist in our denial of her claim, the dispute must be decided by Arms, in which it is said by our enemies "we shall have no chance, being undisciplined, cowards, disobedient, impatient of command, and possessed of that spirit of revelling which admits of no order, subordination, rule, or government."

And whereas the Ministerial Army and Fleet now at Boston, the large reinforcement of Troops expected, the late Circular Letter to the Governours upon the Continent, the general tenour of intelligence from Great Britain and the hostile preparations making here, as also from the threats and repeated insults of our enemies in the Capital Town, we have reason to apprehend that the sudden destruction of this Province is in contemplation if not determined upon.

And whereas the great law of self-preservation may suddenly require our raising and keeping an Army of observation and defence, in order to prevent or repel any further attempt to force the late cruel and oppressive Acts of the British Parliament, which are evidently designed to subject us and the whole Continent to the most ignominious slavery. And whereas, in case of raising and keeping such an Army, it will be necessary that the Officers and Soldiers in the same be fully acquainted with their duty, and that the Articles, Rules and Regulations thereof be made as plain as possible; and having great confidence in the honour and public virtue of the inhabitants of this Colony that they will readily obey the Officers chosen by themselves, and will cheerfully do their duty when known, without any such severe Articles and Rules, (except in capital cases,) and cruel punishments as are usually practised in Standing Armies, and will submit to all such Rules and Regulations as are founded in reason, honour and virtue. It is, therefore,

Resolved, That the following Articles, Rules and Regulations for the Army, that may be raised for the defence and security of our lives, liberties, and estates, be, and are hereby earnestly recommended to be, strictly adhered to, by all Officers, Soldiers, and others concerned, as they regard their own honour and the publick good.

Article 12th. If any Officer should think himself to be wronged by his Colonel, or the Commanding Officer of the Regiment, and shall, upon due application made to him, be refused to be redressed, he may complain to the General or Commander-in-Chief of the Massachusetts Forces, in order to obtain justice, who is hereby required to examine into the complaint and see that justice be done.

a Regimental Court Martial for the doing justice to the complaint, from which Regimental Court Martial either party may, if he thinks himself still aggrieved, appeal to a General Court Martial; but if upon a second hearing the appeal shall appear to be vexatious and groundless, the person so appealing shall be punished at the discretion of a General Court Martial.

Article 14th. Whatsoever Non-Commissioned Officer or Soldier shall be convicted at a Regimental Court Martial of having sold, or designedly or through neglect wasted the Ammunition, Arms, or Provisions, or other Military Stores delivered out to him to be employed in the service of this Colony, shall, if an Officer, be reduced to a Private Soldier; and, if a Private Soldier, shall suffer such punishment as shall be ordered by a Regimental Court Martial.

IX.

AMERICAN ARTICLES OF WAR OF 1775.

(ENACTED JUNE 30, 1775.)

Whereas His Majesty's most faithful subjects in these colonies are reduced to a dangerous and critical situation by the attempts of the British minister to carry into execution by force of arms several unconstitutional and oppressive acts of the British parliament for laying taxes in America, to enforce the collection of those taxes, and for altering and changing the constitution and internal police of some of these colonies, in violation of the natural and civil rights of the colonies;

And whereas hostilities have been actually commenced in Massachusetts Bay by the British troops under the command of General Gage, and the lives of a number of the inhabitants of that colony destroyed; the town of Boston not only having been long occupied as a garrisoned town in an enemy's country, but the inhabitants thereof treated with a severity and cruelty not to be justified even towards declared enemies;

And whereas large reinforcements have been ordered, and are soon expected, for the declared purpose of compelling these colonies to submit to the operation of the said acts; which hath rendered it necessary, and an indispensable duty, for the express purpose of securing and defending these colonies, and preserving them in safety against all attempts to carry the said acts into execution, that an armed force be raised sufficient to defeat such hostile designs, and preserve and defend the lives, liberties and immunities of the colonists; for the due regulating and well ordering of which;

Resolved, That the following Rules and Articles be attended to and observed by such forces as are or may hereafter be raised for the purposes aforesaid;

ARTICLE I. That every officer who shall be retained, and every soldier who shall serve in the continental army, shall, at the time of his acceptance of his commission or enlistment, subscribe these rules and regulations. And that the officers and soldiers, already of that army, shall also, as soon as may be, subscribe the same; from the time of which subscription every officer and soldier, shall be bound by those regulations. But if any of the officers or soldiers, now of the said army, do not subscribe these rules and regulations, then they may be retained in the said army, subject to the rules and regulations under which they entered into the service, or be discharged from the service, at the option of the commander-in-chief.

II. It is earnestly recommended to all officers and soldiers, diligently to attend divine service; and all officers and soldiers who shall behave indecently or irreverently at any place of divine worship, shall, if commissioned officers, be brought before a court-martial, there to be publicly and severely reprimanded by the president; if non-commissioned officers or soldiers, every person so offending, shall, for his first offence, forfeit one sixth of a dollar, to be deducted out of his next pay; for the second offence, he shall not only forfeit a like sum, but be confined for twenty-four hours, and for every like offence, shall suffer and pay in like manner; which money so forfeited, shall be applied to the use of the sick soldiers of the troop or company to which the offender belongs.

III. Whatsoever non-commissioned officer or soldier shall use any profane oath or execration, shall incur the penalties expressed in the foregoing article; and if a commissioned officer be thus guilty of profane cursing or swearing, he shall forfeit and pay for each and every such offence, the sum of four shillings, lawful money.

IV. Any officer or soldier, who shall behave himself with contempt or disrespect towards the general or generals, or commanders in chief of the continental forces, or shall speak false words, tending to his or their hurt or dishonor, shall be punished according to the nature of his offence, by the judgment of a general court-martial.

V. Any officer or soldier, who shall begin, excite, cause, or join in any mutiny or sedition, in the regiment, troop, or company to which he belongs, or in any other regiment, troop or company of the continental forces, either by land or sea, or in any part, post, detachment, or guard, on any pretence whatsoever, shall suffer such punishment, as by a general court-martial shall be ordered.

VI. Any officer, non-commissioned officer, or soldier, who being present at any mutiny or sedition, does not use his utmost endeavors to suppress the same, or coming to the knowledge of any mutiny, or intended mutiny, does not, without delay, give information thereof to the commanding officer, shall be punished by order of a general court-martial, according to the nature of his offence.

VII. Any officer or soldier who shall strike his superior officer, or draw, or offer to draw, or shall lift up any weapon, or offer any violence against him, being in the execution of his office, on any pretence whatsoever, or shall disobey any lawful commands of his superior officer, shall suffer such punishment as shall, according to the nature of his offence, be ordered by the sentence of a general court-martial.

VIII. Any non-commissioned officer, or soldier, who shall desert, or without leave of his commanding officer, absent himself from the troop or company to which he belongs, or from any detachment of the same, shall, upon being convicted thereof, be punished according to the nature of his offence, at the discretion of a general court-martial.

IX. Whatsoever officer, or soldier, shall be convicted of having advised or persuaded any other officer or soldier, to desert, shall suffer such punishment, as shall be ordered by the sentence of a general court-martial.

X. All officers, of what condition soever, shall have power to part and quell all quarrels, frays, and disorders, though the persons concerned should belong to another regiment, troop, or company; and either order officers to be arrested, or non-commissioned officers, or soldiers, to be confined and imprisoned, till their proper superior officers shall be acquainted therewith; and whoever shall refuse to obey such officer, (though of an inferior rank,) or shall draw his sword upon him, shall be punished at the discretion of a general court-martial.

XI. No officer or soldier shall use any reproachful or provoking speeches or gestures to another, nor shall presume to send a challenge to any person to fight a duel: And whoever shall, knowingly and willingly, suffer any person whatsoever to go forth to fight a duel, or shall second, promote, or carry any challenge, shall be deemed as a principal; and whatsoever officer or soldier shall upbraid another for refusing a challenge, shall also be considered as a challenger; and all such offenders, in any of these or such like cases, shall be punished at the discretion of a general court-martial.

XII. Every officer, commanding in quarters or on a march, shall keep good order, and, to the utmost of his power, redress all such abuses or disorders which may be committed by any officer or soldier under his command: If upon any complaint being made to him, of officers or soldiers beating, or otherwise ill-treating any person, or of committing any kind of riot, to the disquieting of the inhabitants of this continent; he the said commander, who shall refuse or omit to see justice done on the offender or offenders, and reparation made to the party or parties injured, as far as the offender's wages shall enable him or them, shall, upon due proof thereof, be punished as ordered by a general court-martial, in such manner as if he himself had committed the crimes or disorders complained of.

XIII. If any officer should think himself to be wronged by his colonel or the commanding officer of the regiment, and shall, upon due application made to him, be refused to be redressed, he may complain to the general or commander in chief of the continental forces, in order to obtain justice, who is hereby required to examine into said complaint, and see that justice be done.

XIV. court-martial shall not be the commander-in-chief or commandant of the garrison where the offender shall be tried, nor be under the degree of a field officer.

Art. 2. The members both of general and regimental courts-martial shall, when belonging to different corps, take the same rank which they hold in the army; but when courts-martial shall be composed of officers of one corps, they shall take their ranks according to the dates of the commissions by which they are mustered in the said corps.

Art. 3. The judge-advocate general, or some person deputed by him, shall prosecute in the name of the United States of America; and in trials of offenders by general courts-martial, administer to each member the following oaths:

"You shall well and truly try and determine, according to your evidence, the matter now before you, between the United States of America, and the prisoners to be tried. So help you God.

"You A. B. do swear, that you will duly administer justice according to the rules and articles for the better government of the forces of the United States of America, without partiality, favor, or affection; and if any doubt shall arise, which is not explained by the said articles, according to your conscience, the best of your understanding, and the custom of war in the like cases. And you do further swear, that you will not divulge the sentence of the court, until it shall be approved of by the general, or commander in chief; neither will you, upon any account, at any time whatsoever, disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof as a witness by a court of justice, in a due course of law. So help you God."

And as soon as the said oath shall have been administered to the respective members, the president of the court shall administer to the judge advocate, or person officiating as such, an oath in the following words:

"You A. B. do swear, that you will not, upon any account, at any time whatsoever, disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof, as a witness, by a court of justice, in a due course of law. So help you God."

Art. 4. All the members of a court-martial are to behave with calmness and decency; and in the giving of their votes, are to begin with the youngest in commission.

Art. 5. All persons who give evidence before a general court-martial, are to be examined upon oath; and no sentence of death shall be given against any offender by any general court-martial, unless two-thirds of the officers present shall concur therein.

Art. 6. All persons called to give evidence, in any cause, before a court-martial, who shall refuse to give evidence, shall be punished for such refusal, at the discretion of such court-martial: The oath to be administered in the following form, viz:

"You swear the evidence you shall give in the cause now in hearing, shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God."

Art. 7. No field officer shall be tried by any person under the degree of a captain; nor shall any proceedings or trials be carried on excepting between the hours of eight in the morning and of three in the afternoon, except in cases which require an immediate example.

Art. 8. No sentence of a general court-martial shall be put in execution, till after a report shall be made of the whole proceedings to Congress, or to the general or commander in chief of the forces of the United States, and their or his directions be signified thereupon.

Art. 9. For the more equitable decision of disputes which may arise between officers and soldiers belonging to different corps, it is hereby directed, that the courts-martial shall be equally composed of officers belonging to the corps in which the parties in question do then serve; and that the presidents shall be taken by turns, beginning with that corps which shall be eldest in rank.

Art. 10. The commissioned officers of every regiment may, by the appointment of their colonel or commanding officer, hold regimental courts-martial for the enquiring into such disputes, or criminal matters, as may come before them, and for the inflicting corporeal punishments for small offences, and shall give judgment by the majority of voices; but no sentence shall be executed till the commanding officer (not being a member of the court-martial) or the commandant of the garrison, shall have confirmed the same.

Art. 11. No regimental court-martial shall consist of less than five officers, excepting in cases where that number cannot conveniently be assembled, when three may be sufficient; who are likewise to determine upon the sentence by the majority of voices; which sentence is to be confirmed by the commanding officer of the regiment, not being a member of the court-martial.

Art. 12. Every officer commanding in any of the forts, barracks, or elsewhere, where the corps under his command consists of detachments from different regiments, or of independent companies, may assemble courts-martial for the trial of offenders in the same manner as if they were regimental, whose sentence is not to be executed until it shall be confirmed by the said commanding officer.

Art. 13. No commissioned officer shall be cashiered or dismissed from the service, excepting by an order from the Congress, or by the sentence of a general court-martial; but non-commissioned officers may be discharged as private soldiers, and, by the order of the colonel of the regiment, or by the sentence of a regimental court-martial, be reduced to private sentinels.

Art. 14. No person whatever shall use menacing words, signs, or gestures, in the presence of a court-martial then sitting, or shall cause any disorder or riot, so as to disturb their proceedings, on the penalty of being punished at the discretion of the said court-martial.

Art. 15. To the end that offenders may be brought to justice, it is hereby directed, that whenever any officer or soldier shall commit a crime deserving punishment, he shall, by his commanding officer, if an officer, be put in arrest; if a non-commissioned officer or soldier, be imprisoned till he shall be either tried by a court-martial, or shall be lawfully discharged by a proper authority.

Art. 16. No officer or soldier who shall be put in arrest or imprisonment, shall continue in his confinement more than eight days, or till such time as a court-martial can be conveniently assembled.

Art. 17. No officer commanding a guard, or provost-martial, shall refuse to receive or keep any prisoner committed to his charge, by any officer belonging to the forces of the United States; which officer shall, at the same time, deliver an account in writing, signed by himself, of the crime with which the said prisoner is charged.

Art. 18. No officer commanding a guard, or provost-martial, shall presume to release any prisoner committed to his charge without proper authority for so doing; nor shall he suffer any prisoner to escape, on the penalty of being punished for it by a sentence of a court-martial.

Art. 19. Every officer or provost-martial to whose charge prisoners shall be committed, is hereby required within twenty-four hours after such commitment, or as soon as he shall be relieved from his guard, to give in writing to the colonel of the regiment to whom the prisoner belongs (where the prisoner is confined upon the guard belonging to the said regiment, and that his offence only relates to the neglect of duty in his own corps) or to the commander in chief, their names, their crimes, and the names of the officers who committed them, on the penalty of his being punished for his disobedience or neglect, at the discretion of a court-martial.

Art. 20. And if any officer under arrest, shall leave his confinement before he is set at liberty by the officer who confined him, or by a superior power, he shall be cashiered for it.

Art. 21. Whatsoever commissioned officer shall be convicted, before a general court-martial, of behaving in a scandalous, infamous manner, such as is unbecoming the character of an officer and a gentleman, shall be discharged from the service.

Art. 22. In all cases where a commissioned officer is cashiered for cowardice, or fraud, it shall be added in the punishment, that the crime, name, place of abode, and punishment of the delinquent, be published in the newspapers, in and about the camp, and of that particular state from which the offender came, or usually resides: After which, it shall be deemed scandalous for any officer to associate with him.

SECTION XV.

Art. 1. When any commissioned officer shall happen to die, or be killed in the service of the United States, the major of the regiment, or the officer doing the major's duty in his absence, shall immediately secure all his effects, or equipage, then in camp or quarters; and shall, before the next regimental court-martial, make an inventory thereof, and forthwith transmit the same to the office of the board of war, to the end, that his executors may, after payment of his debts in quarters and interment, receive the overplus, if any be, to his or their use.

Art. 2. When any non-commissioned officer or soldier shall happen to die, or to be killed in the service of the United States, the then commanding officer of the troop or company, shall, in the presence of two other commissioned officers, take an account of whatever effects he dies possessed of, above his regimental clothing, arms, and accoutrements, and transmit the same to the office of the board of war; which said effects are to be accounted for and paid to the representative of such deceased non-commissioned officer or soldier. And in case any of the officers, so authorized to take care of the effects of dead officers and soldiers, should, before they shall have accounted to their representatives for the same, have occasion to leave the regiment, by preferment or otherwise, they shall, before they be permitted to quit the same, deposit in the hands of the commanding officer or of the agent of the regiment, all the effects of such deceased non-commissioned officers and soldiers, in order that the same may be secured for, and paid to, their respective representatives.

SECTION XVI.

Art. 1. All officers, conductors, gunners, matrosses, drivers, or any other persons whatsoever, receiving pay or hire in the service of the artillery of the United States, shall be governed by the aforesaid rules and articles, and shall be subject to be tried by courts-martial, in like manner with the officers and soldiers of the other troops in the service of the United States.

Art. 2. For differences arising amongst themselves, or in matters relating solely to their own corps, the courts-martial may be composed of their own officers; but where a number sufficient of such officers cannot be assembled, or in matters wherein other corps are interested, the officers of artillery shall sit in courts-martial with the officers of the other corps, taking their rank according to the dates of their respective commissions, and no otherwise.

SECTION XVII.

Art. 1. The officers and soldiers of any troops, whether minute-men, militia, or others, being mustered and in continental pay, shall, at all times, and in all places, when joined, or acting in conjunction with the regular forces of the United States, be governed by these rules or articles of war, and shall be subject to be tried by courts-martial in like manner with the officers and soldiers in the regular forces, save only that such courts-martial shall be composed entirely of militia officers of the same provincial corps with the offender.

That such militia and minute-men as are now in service, and have, by particular contract with the respective States, engaged to be governed by particular regulations while in continental service, shall not be subject to the above articles of war.

Art. 2. For the future, all general officers and colonels, serving by commission from the authority of any particular State, shall, on all detachments, courts-martial, or other duty wherein they may be employed in conjunction with the regular forces of the United States, take rank next after all generals and colonels serving by commissions from Congress, though the commissions of such particular generals and colonels should be of elder date; and in like manner lieutenant-colonels, majors, captains, and other inferior officers, serving by commission from any particular State, shall, on all detachments, courts-martial or other duty, wherein they may be employed in conjunction with the regular forces of the United States, have rank next after all officers of the like rank serving by commissions from Congress, though the commissions of such lieutenant-colonels, majors, captains, and other inferior officers should be of elder date to those of the like rank from Congress.

SECTION XVIII.

Art. 1. The foregoing articles are to be read and published once in every two months, at the head of every regiment, troop or company, mustered, or to be mustered in the service of the United States; and are to be duly observed and exactly obeyed by all officers and soldiers who are or shall be in the said service.

Art. 2. The general, or commander in chief for the time being, shall have full power of pardoning or mitigating any of the punishments ordered to be inflicted, for any of the offences mentioned in the foregoing articles; and every offender convicted as aforesaid, by any regimental court-martial, may be pardoned, or have his punishment mitigated by the colonel, or officer commanding the regiment.

Art. 3. No person shall be sentenced to suffer death, except in the cases expressly mentioned in the foregoing articles; nor shall more than one hundred lashes be inflicted on any offender, at the discretion of a court-martial.

That every judge-advocate, or person officiating as such, at any general court-martial, do, and he is hereby required to transmit, with as much expedition as the opportunity of time and distance of place can admit, the original proceedings and sentence of such court-martial to the secretary at war, which said original proceedings and sentence shall be carefully kept and preserved in the office of said secretary, to the end that persons entitled thereto may be enabled, upon application to the said office, to obtain copies thereof.

That the party tried by any general court-martial, shall be entitled to a copy of the sentence and proceedings of such court-martial, upon demand thereof made by himself, or by any other person or persons, on his behalf, whether such sentence be approved or not.

Art. 4. The field officers of each and every regiment are to appoint some suitable person belonging to such regiment, to receive all such fines as may arise within the same, for any breach of any of the foregoing articles, and shall direct the same to be carefully and properly applied to the relief of such sick, wounded or necessitous soldiers as belong to such regiments; and such person shall account with such officer for all fines received and the application thereof.

Art. 5. All crimes not capital, and all disorders and neglects which officers and soldiers may be guilty of, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, though not mentioned in the above articles of war, are to be taken cognizance of by a general or regimental court-martial, according to the nature and degree of the offence, and be punished at their discretion.

XI.

But no sentence of a court-martial shall be carried into execution until after the whole proceedings shall have been laid before the said general or officer commanding the troops for the time being; neither shall any sentence of a general court-martial in time of peace, extending to the loss of life, the dismissal of a commissioned officer, or which shall either in time of peace or war respect a general officer, be carried into execution, until after the whole proceedings shall have been transmitted to the secretary at war, to be laid before Congress for their confirmation, or disapproval, and their orders on the case. All other sentences may be confirmed and executed by the officer ordering the court to assemble, or the commanding officer for the time being, as the case may be.

ART. 5. The members of all courts-martial shall, when belonging to different corps, take the same rank in court which they hold in the army. But when courts-martial shall be composed of officers of one corps, they shall take rank according to the commissions by which they are mustered in the said corps.

ART. 6. The judge advocate, or some person deputed by him, or by the general or officer commanding the army, detachment or garrison, shall prosecute in the name of the United States of America ; but shall so far consider himself as counsel for the prisoner, after the said prisoner shall have made his plea, as to object to any leading question, to any of the witnesses, or any question to the prisoner, the answer to which might tend to criminate himself ; and administer to each member the following oaths, which shall also be taken by all members of regimental and garrison courts-martial :

" You shall well and truly try and determine, according to evidence, the matter now before you, between the United States of America, and the prisoner to be tried. So help you God."

" You A. B. do swear, that you will duly administer justice, according to the rules and articles for the better government of the forces of the United States of America, without partiality, favor or affection ; and if any doubt shall arise, which is not explained by said articles, according to your conscience, the best of your understanding, and the custom of war in the like cases. And you do further swear, that you will not divulge the sentence of the court, until it shall be published by the commanding officer. Neither will you, upon any account, at any time whatsoever, disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof, as a witness, by a court of justice, in a due course of law. So help you God."

And as soon as the said oaths shall have been administered to the respective members, the president of the court shall administer to the judge advocate, or person officiating as such, an oath in the following words:

" You A. B. do swear, that you will not, upon any account, at any time whatsoever, disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof as a witness, by a court of justice, in a due course of law. So help you God."

ART. 7. All the members of a court-martial are to behave with decency and calmness; and in giving their votes, are to begin with the youngest in commission.

ART. 8. All persons who give evidence before a court-martial, are to be examined on oath, or affirmation, as the case may be, and no sentence of death shall be given against any offender by any general court-martial, unless two-thirds of the members of the court shall concur therein.

ART. 9. Whenever an oath or affirmation shall be administered by a court-martial, the oath or affirmation shall be in the following form:

" You swear (or affirm, as the case may be) the evidence you shall give in the case now in hearing, shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God."

ART. 10. On the trials of cases not capital, before courts-martial, the depositions of witnesses, not in the line or staff of the army, may be taken before some justice of the peace, and read in evidence, provided the prosecutor and person accused are present at the taking the same.

ART. 11. No officer shall be tried but by a general court-martial, nor by officers of an inferior rank if it can be avoided. Nor shall any proceedings or trials be carried on, excepting between the hours of 8 in the morning and 3 in the afternoon, except in cases which, in the opinion of the officer appointing the court, require immediate example.

ART. 12. No person whatsoever shall use menacing words, signs or gestures in the presence of a court-martial, or shall cause any disorder or riot to disturb their proceedings, on the penalty of being punished at the discretion of the said court-martial.

ART. 13. No commissioned officer shall be cashiered, or dismissed from the service, excepting by order of Congress, or by the sentence of a general court-martial; and no non-commissioned officer or soldier shall be discharged the service, but by the order of Congress, the secretary at war, the commander-in-chief, or commanding officer of a department, or by the sentence of a general court-martial.

ART. 14. Whenever any officer shall be charged with a crime, he shall be arrested and confined to his barracks, quarters or tent, and deprived of his sword by his commanding officer. And any officer who shall leave his confinement before he shall be set at liberty by his commanding officer, or by a superior power, shall be cashiered for it.

ART. 15. Non-commissioned officers and soldiers, who shall be charged with crimes, shall be imprisoned until they shall be tried by a court-martial, or released by proper authority.

ART. 16. No officer or soldier, who shall be put in arrest or imprisonment, shall continue in his confinement more than 8 days, or until such time as a court-martial can be assembled.

ART. 17. No officer commanding a guard, or provost-marshal, shall refuse to receive or keep any prisoner committed to his charge by any officer belonging to the forces of the United States, provided the officer committing shall, at the same time, deliver an account in writing signed by himself, of the crime with which the said prisoner is charged.

ART. 18. No officer commanding a guard, or provost-marshal, shall presume to release any person committed to his charge, without proper authority for so doing; nor shall he suffer any person to escape on penalty of being punished for it by the sentence of a court-martial.

ART. 19. Every officer, or provost-marshal, to whose charge prisoners shall be committed, shall, within 24 hours after such commitment, or as soon as he shall be relieved from his guard, make report in writing, to the commander-in-chief, or commanding officer, of their names, their crimes and the names of the officers who committed them, on the penalty of his being punished for disobedience or neglect at the discretion of a court-martial.

ART. 20. Whatever commissioned officer shall be convicted before a general court-martial, of behaving in a scandalous and infamous manner, such as is unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, shall be dismissed the service.

ART. 21. In cases where a court-martial may think it proper to sentence a commissioned officer to be suspended from command, they shall have power also to suspend his pay and emoluments for the same time, according to the nature and heinousness of the offence.

ART. 22. In all cases where a commissioned officer is cashiered for cowardice or fraud, it shall be added in the sentence, that the crime, name, place of abode, and punishment of the delinquent be published in the newspapers, in and about camp, and of the particular State from which the offender came, or usually resides; after which it shall be deemed scandalous for any officer to associate with him.

ART. 23. The commanding officer of any post or detachment, in which there shall not be a number of officers adequate to form a general court-martial, shall, in cases which require the cognizance of such a court, report to the commanding officer of the department, who shall order a court to be assembled at the nearest post or detachment, and the party accused, with the necessary witnesses, to be transported to the place where the said court shall be assembled.

ART. 24. No person shall be sentenced to suffer death, except in the cases expressly mentioned in the foregoing articles; nor shall more than 100 lashes be inflicted on any offender at the discretion of a court-martial.

Every judge advocate, or person officiating as such, at any general court-martial, shall transmit, with as much expedition as the opportunity of time and distance of place can admit, the original proceedings and sentence of such court-martial, to the secretary at war, which said original proceedings and sentence, shall be carefully kept and preserved, in the office of the said secretary, to the end, that persons entitled thereto may be enabled, upon application to the said office, to obtain copies thereof.

The party tried by any general court-martial, shall be entitled to a copy of the sentence and proceedings of such court-martial after a decision on the sentence, upon demand thereof made by himself, or by any person or persons in his behalf, whether such sentence be approved or not.

ART. 25. In such cases where the general or commanding officer may think proper to order a court of inquiry, to examine into the nature of any transaction, accusation or imputation against any officer or soldier, the said court shall be conducted conformably to the following regulations: It may consist of one or more officers, not exceeding 3, with the judge advocate or a suitable person as a recorder, to reduce the proceedings and evidences to writing, all of whom shall be sworn to the faithful performance of their duty. This court shall have the same power to summon witnesses as a court-martial, and to examine them on oath. But they shall not give their opinion on the merits of the case, excepting they shall be thereto specially required. The parties accused shall also be permitted to cross-examine and interrogate the witnesses, so as to investigate fully the circumstances in question.

ART. 26. The proceedings of a court of inquiry must be authenticated by the signature of the recorder and the president, and delivered to the commanding officer; and the said proceedings may be admitted as evidence, by a court-martial, in cases not capital or extending to the dismissal of an officer; provided, that the circumstances are such that oral testimony cannot be obtained. But, as courts of inquiry may be perverted to dishonorable purposes, and may be considered as engines of destruction to military merit, in the hands of weak and envious commandants, they are hereby prohibited, unless demanded by the accused.

ART. 27. The judge advocate, or the recorder, shall administer to the members the following oath :

" You shall well and truly examine and inquire, according to your evidence, into the matter now before you, without favor or affection. So help you God."

After which the president shall administer to the judge advocate, or recorder, the following oath :

" You A. B. do swear, that you will, according to your best abilities, accurately and impartially record the proceedings of the court, and the evidences to be given in the case in hearing. So help you God."

The witnesses shall take the same oath as is directed to be administered to witnesses sworn before a court-martial.

That, if such search should prove ineffectual, the officer commanding the regiment or corps to which the deserter or deserters belonged, shall insert, in the nearest gazette or newspaper, an advertisement, descriptive of the deserter or deserters, and offering a reward, not exceeding ten dollars, for each deserter, who shall be apprehended and secured in any of the gaols in the neighboring states. That the charges of advertising deserters, the reasonable extra expenses incurred by the person conducting the pursuit, and the reward, shall be paid by the secretary at war, on the certificate of the commanding officer of the troops.

ART. 22. No non-commissioned officer or soldier shall enlist himself in any other regiment, troop, or company, without a regular discharge from the regiment, troop, or company in which he last served, on the penalty of being reputed a deserter, and suffering accordingly. And in case any officer shall knowingly receive and entertain such non-commissioned officer or soldier, or shall not, after his being discovered to be a deserter, immediately confine him, and give notice thereof to the corps in which he last served, the said officer shall, by a court-martial, be cashiered.

ART. 23. Any officer or soldier who shall be convicted of having advised or persuaded any other officer or soldier to desert the service of the United States, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as shall be inflicted upon him by the sentence of a court-martial.

And it shall be the duty of every officer commanding an army, regiment, company, post, or detachment, who is knowing to a challenge being given or accepted by any officer, non-commissioned officer, or soldier, under his command, or has reason to believe the same to be the case, immediately to arrest and bring to trial such offenders.

ART. 27. All officers, of what condition soever, have power to part and quell all quarrels, frays, and disorders, though the persons concerned should belong to another regiment, troop, or company; and either to order officers into arrest, or non-commissioned officers or soldiers into confinement, until their proper superior officer shall be acquainted therewith; and whosoever shall refuse to obey such officer (though of an inferior rank), or shall draw his sword upon him, shall be punished at the discretion of a general court-martial.

ART. 28. Any officer or soldier who shall upbraid another for refusing a challenge, shall himself be punished as a challenger; and all officers and soldiers are hereby discharged from any disgrace or opinion of disadvantage which might arise from their having refused to accept of challenges, as they will only have acted in obedience to the laws, and done their duty as good soldiers who subject themselves to discipline.

ART. 29. No sutler shall be permitted to sell any kind of liquors or victuals, or to keep their houses or shops open for the entertainment of soldiers, after nine at night, or before the beating of the reveille, or upon Sundays, during divine service or sermon, on the penalty of being dismissed from all future sutling.

ART. 30. All officers commanding in the field, forts, barracks, or garrisons of the United States, are hereby required to see that the persons permitted to suttle shall supply the soldiers with good and wholesome provisions, or other articles, at a reasonable price, as they shall be answerable for their neglect.

ART. 31. ART. 32. Every officer commanding in quarters, garrisons, or on the march, shall keep good order, and, to the utmost of his power, redress all abuses or disorders which may be committed by any officer or soldier under his command; if, upon complaint made to him of officers or soldiers beating or otherwise ill-treating any person, or disturbing fairs or markets, or of committing any kind of riots, to the disquieting of the citizens of the United States, he, the said commander, who shall refuse or omit to see justice done to the offender or offenders, and reparation made to the party or parties injured, as far as part of the offender's pay shall enable him or them, shall, upon proof thereof, be cashiered, or otherwise punished, as a general court-martial shall direct.

ART. 33. When any commissioned officer or soldier shall be accused of a capital crime, or of having used violence, or committed any offense against the person or property of any citizen of any of the United States, such as is punishable by the known laws of the land, the commanding officer and officers of every regiment, troop, or company to which the person or persons so accused shall belong, are hereby required, upon application duly made by, or in behalf of, the party or parties injured, to use their utmost endeavors to deliver over such accused person or persons to the civil magistrate, and likewise to be aiding and assisting to the officers of justice in apprehending and securing the person or persons so accused, in order to bring him or them to trial. If any commanding officer or officers shall wilfully neglect, or shall refuse upon the application aforesaid, to deliver over such accused person or persons to the civil magistrates, or to be aiding and assisting to the officers of justice in apprehending such person or persons, the officer or officers so offending shall be cashiered.

ART. 34. If any officer shall think himself wronged by his Colonel, or the commanding officer of the regiment, and shall, upon due application being made to him, be refused redress, he may complain to the General commanding in the State or Territory where such regiment shall be stationed, in order to obtain justice; who is hereby required to examine into said complaint, and take proper measures for redressing the wrong complained of, and transmit, as soon as possible, to the Department of War, a true state of such complaint, with the proceedings had thereon.

ART. 35. If any inferior officer or soldier shall think himself wronged by his Captain or other officer, he is to complain thereof to the commanding officer of the regiment, who is hereby required to summon a regimental court-martial, for the doing justice to the complainant; from which regimental court-martial either party may, if he thinks himself still aggrieved, appeal to a general court-martial. But if, upon a second hearing, the appeal shall appear vexatious and groundless, the person so appealing shall be punished at the discretion of the said court-martial.

ART. 36. Any commissioned officer, store-keeper, or commissary, who shall be convicted at a general court-martial of having sold, without a proper order for that purpose, embezzled, misapplied, or wilfully, or through neglect, suffered any of the provisions, forage, arms, clothing, ammunition, or other military stores belonging to the United States to be spoiled or damaged, shall, at his own expense, make good the loss or damage, and shall, moreover, forfeit all his pay, and be dismissed from the service.

ART. 37. Any non-commissioned officer or soldier who shall be convicted at a regimental court-martial of having sold, or designedly, or through neglect, wasted the ammunition delivered out to him, to be employed in the service of the United States, shall be punished at the discretion of such court.

ART. 38. Every non-commissioned officer or soldier who shall be convicted before a court-martial of having sold, lost, or spoiled, through neglect, his horse, arms, clothes, or accoutrements, shall undergo such weekly stoppages (not exceeding the half of his pay) as such court-martial shall judge sufficient, for repairing the loss or damage; and shall suffer confinement, or such other corporeal punishment as his crime shall deserve.

ART. 39. Every officer who shall be convicted before a court-martial of having embezzled or misapplied any money with which he may have been intrusted, for the payment of the men under his command, or for enlisting men into the service, or for other purposes, if a commissioned officer, shall be cashiered, and compelled to refund the money; if a non-commissioned officer, shall be reduced to the ranks, be put under stoppages until the money be made good, and suffer such corporeal punishment as such court-martial shall direct.

ART. 40. Every captain of a troop or company is charged with the arms, accoutrements, ammunition, clothing, or other warlike stores belonging to the troop or company under his command, which he is to be accountable for to his Colonel in case of their being lost, spoiled, or damaged, not by unavoidable accidents, or on actual service.

ART. 41. All non-commissioned officers and soldiers who shall be found one mile from the camp without leave, in writing, from their commanding officer, shall suffer such punishment as shall be inflicted upon them by the sentence of a court-martial.

ART. 46. Any sentinel who shall be found sleeping upon his post, or shall leave it before he shall be regularly relieved, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as shall be inflicted by the sentence of a court-martial.

ART. 47. No soldier belonging to any regiment, troop, or company shall hire another to do his duty for him, or be excused from duty but in cases of sickness, disability, or leave of absence; and every such soldier found guilty of hiring his duty, as also the party so hired to do another's duty, shall be punished at the discretion of a regimental court-martial.

ART. 48. And every non-commissioned officer conniving at such hiring of duty aforesaid, shall be reduced; and every commissioned officer knowing and allowing such ill-practices in the service, shall be punished by the judgment of a general court-martial.

ART. 49. Any officer belonging to the service of the United States, who, by discharging of fire-arms, drawing of swords, beating of drums, or by any other means whatsoever, shall occasion false alarms in camp, garrison, or quarters, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as shall be ordered by the sentence of a general court-martial.

ART. 50. Any officer or soldier who shall, without urgent necessity, or without the leave of his superior officer, quit his guard, platoon, or division, shall be punished, according to the nature of his offense, by the sentence of a court-martial.

ART. 51. ART. 53. Any person belonging to the armies of the United States who shall make known the watchword to any person who is not entitled ART. 55. Whosoever, belonging to the armies of the United States in foreign parts, shall force a safeguard, shall suffer death.

ART. 56. Whosoever shall relieve the enemy with money, victuals, or ammunition, or shall knowingly harbor or protect an enemy, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as shall be ordered by the sentence of a court-martial.

ART. 60. All sutlers and retainers to the camp, and all persons whatsoever, serving with the armies of the United States in the field, though not enlisted soldiers, are to be subject to orders, according to the rules and discipline of war.

ART. 61. Officers having brevets or commissions of a prior date to those of the regiment in which they serve, may take place in courts-martial and on detachments, when composed of different corps, according to the ranks given them in their brevets or dates of their former commissions; but in the regiment, troop, or company to which such officers belong, they shall do duty and take rank both in courts-martial and on detachments which shall be composed of their own corps, according to the commissions by which they are mustered in the said corps.

ART. 62. If, upon marches, guards, or in quarters, different corps of the army shall happen to join, or do duty together, the officer highest in rank of the line of the army, marine corps, or militia, by commission, there on duty or in quarters, shall command the whole, and give orders for what is needful to the service, unless otherwise specially directed by the President of the United States, according to the nature of the case.

ART. 63. The functions of the engineers being generally confined to the most elevated branch of military science, they are not to assume, nor are they subject to be ordered on any duty beyond the line of their immediate profession, except by the special order of the President of the United States; but they are to receive every mark of respect to which their rank in the army may entitle them respectively, and are liable to be transferred, at the discretion of the President, from one corps to another, regard being paid to rank.

ART. 64. General courts-martial may consist of any number of commissioned officers, from five to thirteen, inclusively; but they shall not consist of less than thirteen where that number can be convened without manifest injury to the service.

ART. 65. Any general officer commanding an army, or Colonel commanding a separate department, may appoint general courts-martial whenever necessary. But no sentence of a court-martial shall be carried into execution until after the whole proceedings shall have been laid before the officer ordering the same, or the officer commanding the troops for the time being; neither shall any sentence of a general court-martial, in the time of peace, extending to the loss of life, or the dismissal of a commissioned officer, or which shall, either in time of peace or war, respect a general officer, be carried into execution, until after the whole proceedings shall have been transmitted to the Secretary of War, to be laid before the President of the United States for his confirmation or disapproval, and orders in the case. All other sentences may be confirmed and executed by the officer ordering the court to assemble, or the commanding officer for the time being, as the case may be.

ART. 66. Every officer commanding a regiment or corps may appoint, for his own regiment or corps, courts-martial, to consist of three commissioned officers, for the trial and punishment of offenses not capital, and decide upon their sentences. For the same purpose, all officers commanding any of the garrisons, forts, barracks, or other places where the troops consist of different corps, may assemble courts-martial, to consist of three commissioned officers, and decide upon their sentences.

ART. 67. No garrison or regimental court-martial shall have the power to try capital cases or commissioned officers; neither shall they inflict a fine exceeding one month's pay, nor imprison, nor put to hard labor, any non-commissioned officer or soldier for a longer time than one month.

ART. 68. Whenever it may be found convenient and necessary to the public service, the officers of the marines shall be associated with the officers of the land forces, for the purpose of holding courts-martial, and trying offenders belonging to either; and, in such cases, the orders of the senior officer of either corps who may be present and duly authorized, shall be received and obeyed.

ART. 69. The judge advocate, or some person deputed by him, or by the general, or officer commanding the army, detachment, or garrison, shall prosecute in the name of the United States, but shall so far consider himself as counsel for the prisoner, after the said prisoner shall have made his plea, as to object to any leading question to any of the witnesses or any question to the prisoner, the answer to which might tend to criminate himself; and administer to each member of the court, before they proceed upon any trial, the following oath, which shall also be taken by all members of the regimental and garrison courts-martial.

"You, A. B., do swear that you will well and truly try and determine, according to evidence, the matter now before you, between the United States of America and the prisoner to be tried, and that you will duly administer justice, according to the provisions of 'An act establishing Rules and Articles for the government of the armies of the United States,' without partiality, favor, or affection; and if any doubt should arise, not explained by said Articles, according to your conscience, the best of your understanding, and the custom of war in like cases; and you do further swear that you will not divulge the sentence of the court until it shall be published by the proper authority; neither will you disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof, as a witness, by a court of justice, in a due course of law. So help you God."

As soon as the said oath shall have been administered to the respective members, the president of the court shall administer to the judge advocate, or person officiating as such, an oath in the following words:

"You, A. B., do swear, that you will not disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof, as a witness, by a court of justice, in due course of law; nor divulge the sentence of the court to any but the proper authority, until it shall be duly disclosed by the same. So help you God."

ART. 70. When a prisoner, arraigned before a general court-martial, shall, from obstinacy and deliberate design, stand mute, or answer foreign to the purpose, the court may proceed to trial and judgment as if the prisoner had regularly pleaded not guilty.

ART. 71. When a member shall be challenged by a prisoner, he must state his cause of challenge, of which the court shall, after due deliberation, determine the relevancy or validity, and decide accordingly; and no challenge to more than one member at a time shall be received by the court.

ART. 72. All the members of a court-martial are to behave with decency and calmness; and in giving their votes are to begin with the youngest in commission.

ART. 73. All persons who give evidence before a court-martial are to be examined on oath or affirmation, in the following form:

"You swear, or affirm (as the case may be), the evidence you shall give in the cause now in hearing shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God."

ART. 74. On the trials of cases not capital, before courts-martial, the deposition of witnesses, not in the line or staff of the army, may be taken before some justice of the peace, and read in evidence; provided the prosecutor and person accused are present at the taking the same, or are duly notified thereof.

ART. 75. No officer shall be tried but by a general court-martial, nor by officers of an inferior rank, if it can be avoided. No shall any proceedings of trials be carried on, excepting between the hours of eight in the morning and three in the afternoon, excepting in cases which, in the opinion of the officer appointing the court-martial, require immediate example.

ART. 76. No person whatsoever shall use any menacing words, signs, or gestures, in presence of a court-martial, or shall cause any disorder or riot, or disturb their proceedings, on the penalty of being punished at the discretion of the said court-martial.

ART. 77. Whenever any officer shall be charged with a crime, he shall be arrested and confined in his barracks, quarters, or tent, and deprived of his sword by the commanding officer. And any officer who shall leave his confinement before he shall be set at liberty by his commanding officer, or by a superior officer, shall be cashiered.

ART. 78. Non-commissioned officers and soldiers, charged with crimes, shall be confined until tried by a court-martial, or released by proper authority.

ART. 79. No officer or soldier who shall be put in arrest shall continue in confinement more than eight days, or until such time as a court-martial can be assembled.

ART. 80. No officer commanding a guard, or provost marshal, shall refuse to receive or keep any prisoner committed to his charge by an officer belonging to the forces of the United States; provided the officer committing shall, at the same time, deliver an account in writing, signed by himself, of the crime with which the said prisoner is charged.

ART. 81. No officer commanding a guard, or provost marshal, shall presume to release any person committed to his charge without proper authority for so doing, nor shall he suffer any person to escape, on the penalty of being punished for it by the sentence of a court-martial.

ART. 82. Every officer or provost marshal, to whose charge prisoners shall be committed, shall, within twenty-four hours after such commitment, or as soon as he shall be relieved from his guard, make report in writing, to the commanding officer, of their names, their crimes, and the names of the officers who committed them, on the penalty of being punished for disobedience or neglect, at the discretion of a court-martial.

ART. 83. Any commissioned officer convicted before a general court-martial of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, shall be dismissed the service.

ART. 84. In cases where a court-martial may think it proper to sentence a commissioned officer to be suspended from command, they shall have power also to suspend his pay and emoluments for the same time, according to the nature and heinousness of the offense.

ART. 85. In all cases where a commissioned officer is cashiered for cowardice or fraud, it shall be added in the sentence, that the crime, name, and place of abode, and punishment of the delinquent, be published in the newspapers in and about the camp, and of the particular State from which the offender came, or where he usually resides; after which it shall be deemed scandalous for an officer to associate with him.

ART. 86. The commanding officer of any post or detachment, in which there shall not be a number of officers adequate to form a general court-martial, shall, in cases which require the cognizance of such a court, report to the commanding officer of the department, who shall order a court to be assembled at the nearest post or department, and the party accused, with necessary witnesses, to be transported to the place where the said court shall be assembled.

ART. 87. No person shall be sentenced to suffer death but by the concurrence of two-thirds of the members of a general court-martial, nor except in the cases herein expressly mentioned; nor shall more than fifty lashes be inflicted on any offender, at the discretion of a court-martial; and no officer, non-commissioned officer, soldier, or follower of the army, shall be tried a second time for the same offense.

ART. 88. No person shall be liable to be tried and punished by a general court-martial for any offense which shall appear to have been committed more than two years before the issuing of the order for such trial, unless the person, by reason of having absented himself, or some other manifest impediment, shall not have been amenable to justice within that period.

ART. 89. Every officer authorized to order a general court-martial shall have power to pardon or mitigate any punishment ordered by such court, except the sentence of death, or of cashiering an officer; which, in the cases where he has authority (by Article 65) to carry them into execution, he may suspend, until the pleasure of the President of the United States can be known; which suspension, together with copies of the proceedings of the court-martial, the said officer shall immediately transmit to the President for his determination. And the colonel or commanding officer of the regiment or garrison where any regimental or garrison court-martial shall be held, may pardon or mitigate any punishment ordered by such court to be inflicted.

ART. 90. Every judge advocate, or person officiating as such, at any general court-martial, shall transmit, with as much expedition as the opportunity of time and distance of place can admit, the original proceedings and sentence of such court-martial to the Secretary of War; which said original proceedings and sentence shall be carefully kept and preserved in the office of said Secretary, to the end that the persons entitled thereto may be enabled, upon application to the said office, to obtain copies thereof.

The party tried by any general court-martial shall, upon demand thereof, made by himself, or by any person or persons in his behalf, be entitled to a copy of the sentence and proceedings of such court-martial.

ART. 91. In cases where the general, or commanding officer may order a court of inquiry to examine into the nature of any transaction, accusation, or imputation against any officer or soldier, the said court shall consist of one or more officers, not exceeding three, and a judge advocate, or other suitable person, as a recorder, to reduce the proceedings and evidence to writing; all of whom shall be sworn to the faithful performance of their duty. This court shall have the same power to summon witnesses as a court-martial, and to examine them on oath. But they shall not give their opinion on the merits of the case, excepting they shall be thereto specially required. The parties accused shall also be permitted to cross-examine and interrogate the witnesses, so as to investigate fully the circumstances in the question.

ART. 92. The proceedings of a court of inquiry must be authenticated by the signature of the recorder and the president, and delivered to the commanding officer, and the said proceedings may be admitted as evidence by a court-martial, in cases not capital, or extending to the dismissal of an officer, provided that the circumstances are such that oral testimony cannot be obtained. But as courts of inquiry may be perverted to dishonorable purposes, and may be considered as engines of destruction to military merit, in the hands of weak and envious commandants, they are hereby prohibited, unless directed by the President of the United States, or demanded by the accused.

ART. 93. The judge advocate or recorder shall administer to the members the following oath:

"You shall well and truly examine and inquire, according to your evidence, into the matter now before you, without partiality, favor, affection, prejudice, or hope of reward. So help you God."

After which the president shall administer to the judge advocate or recorder the following oath :

"You, A. B., do swear that you will, according to your best abilities, accurately and impartially record the proceedings of the court, and the evidence to be given in the case in hearing. So help you God."

The witnesses shall take the same oath as witnesses sworn before a court-martial.

ART. 94. When any commissioned officer shall die or be killed in the service of the United States, the major of the regiment, or the officer doing the major's duty in his absence, or in any post or garrison, the second officer in command, or the assistant military agent, shall immediately secure all his effects or equipage, then in camp or quarters, and shall make an inventory thereof, and forthwith transmit the same to the office of the Department of War, to the end that his executors or administrators may receive the same.

ART. 95. When any non-commissioned officer or soldier shall die, or be killed in the service of the United States, the then commanding officer of the troop or company shall, in the presence of two other commissioned officers, take an account of what effects he died possessed of, above his arms and accoutrements, and transmit the same to the office of the Department of War, which said effects are to be accounted for, and paid to the representatives of such deceased non-commissioned officer or soldier. And in case any of the officers, so authorized to take care of the effects of deceased officers and soldiers, should, before they have accounted to their representatives for the same, have occasion to leave the regiment or post, by preferment or otherwise, they shall, before they be permitted to quit the same, deposit in the hands of the commanding officer, or of the assistant military agent, all the effects of such deceased non-commissioned officers and soldiers, in order that the same may be secured for, and paid to, their respective representatives.

ART. 96. All officers, conductors, gunners, matrosses, drivers, or other persons whatsoever, receiving pay or hire in the service of the artillery, or corps of engineers of the United States, shall be governed by the aforesaid Rules and Articles, and shall be subject to be tried by courts-martial, in like manner with the officers and soldiers of the other troops in the service of the United States.

ART. 97. The officers and soldiers of any troops, whether militia or others, being mustered and in pay of the United States, shall, at all times and in all places, when joined, or acting in conjunction with the regular forces of the United States, be governed by these rules and articles of war, and shall be subject to be tried by courts-martial in like manner with the officers and soldiers in the regular forces; save only that such courts-martial shall be composed entirely of militia officers.

ART. 98. All officers serving by commission from the authority of any particular State, shall, on all detachments, courts-martial, or other duty, wherein they may be employed in conjunction with the regular forces of the United States, take rank next after all officers of the like grade in said regular forces, notwithstanding the commissions of such militia or State officers may be elder than the commissions of the officers of the regular forces of the United States.

ART. 99. All crimes not capital, and all disorders and neglects which officers and soldiers may be guilty of, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, though not mentioned in the foregoing articles of war, are to be taken cognizance of by a general or regimental court-martial, according to the nature and degree of the offense, and be punished at their discretion.

ART. 100. The President of the United States shall have power to prescribe the uniform of the army.

ART. 101. The foregoing articles are to be read and published, once in every six months, to every garrison, regiment, troop, or company, mustered, or to be mustered, in the service of the United States, and are to be duly observed and obeyed by all officers and soldiers who are, or shall be, in said service.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That in time of war, all persons not citizens of, or owing allegiance to, the United States of America, who shall be found lurking as spies in or about the fortifications or encampments of the armies of the United States, or any of them, shall suffer death, according to the law and usage of nations, by sentence of a general court-martial.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the rules and regulations by which the armies of the United States have heretofore been governed, and the resolves of Congress thereunto annexed, and respecting the same, shall henceforth be void and of no effect, except so far as may relate to any transactions under them prior to the promulgation of this act, at the several posts and garrisons respectively, occupied by any part of the army of the United States.

XIII.

AMERICAN ARTICLES OF WAR OF 1874.

ARTICLE 1.—Every officer now in the army of the United States shall, within six months from the passing of this Act, and every officer hereafter appointed shall, before he enters upon the duties of his office, subscribe these rules and articles.

ART. 2.—These rules and articles shall be read to every enlisted man at the time of, or within six days after, his enlistment, and he shall thereupon take an oath or affirmation in the following form: "I, A. B., do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will bear true faith and allegiance to the United States of America; that I will serve them honestly and faithfully against all their enemies whomsoever; and that I will obey the orders of the President of the United States, and the orders of the officers appointed over me, according to the rules and articles of war." This oath may be taken before any commissioned officer of the Army.

ART. 3.—Every officer who knowingly enlists or musters into the military service any minor over the age of sixteen years without the written consent of his parents or guardians, or any minor under the age of sixteen years, or any insane or intoxicated persons, or any deserter from the military or naval service of the United States, or any person who has been convicted of any infamous criminal offense, shall, upon conviction, be dismissed from the service, or suffer such other punishment as a court-martial may direct.

ART. 4.—No enlisted man, duly sworn, shall be discharged from the service without a discharge in writing, signed by a field-officer of the regiment to which he belongs, or by the commanding officer, when no field-officer is present; and no discharge shall be given to any enlisted man before his term of service has expired, except by order of the President, the Secretary of War, the commanding officer of a department, or by sentence of a general court-martial.

ART. 5.—Any officer who knowingly musters as a soldier a person who is not a soldier shall be deemed guilty of knowingly making a false muster, and punished accordingly.

ART. 6.—Any officer who takes money, or other thing, by way of gratification, on mustering any regiment, troop, battery, or company, or on signing muster-rolls, shall be dismissed from the service, and shall thereby be disabled to hold any office or employment in the service of the United States.

ART. 7.—Every officer commanding a regiment, an independent troop, battery, or company, or a garrison, shall, in the beginning of every month, transmit through the proper channels, to the Department of War, an exact return of the same, specifying the names of the officers then absent from their posts, with the reasons for and the time of their absence. And any officer who, through neglect or design, omits to send such returns, shall, on conviction thereof, be punished as a court-martial may direct.

ART. 8.—Every officer who knowingly makes a false return to the Department of War, or to any of his superior officers, authorized to call for such returns, of the state of the regiment, troop or company, or garrison under his command; or of the arms, ammunition, clothing or other stores thereunto belonging, shall, on conviction thereof before a court-martial, be cashiered.

ART. 9.—All public stores taken from the enemy shall be secured for the service of the United States; and for neglect thereof the commanding officer shall be answerable.

ART. 10.—Every officer commanding a troop, battery, or company, is charged with the arms, accouterments, ammunition, clothing, or other military stores belonging to his command, and is accountable to his colonel in case of their being lost, spoiled, or damaged otherwise than by unavoidable accident, or on actual service.

Every officer commanding a regiment, or an independent troop, battery, or company, in the field, may grant furloughs not exceeding thirty days at one time, to five per centum of the enlisted men, for good conduct in the line of duty, but subject to the approval of the commander of the forces of which said enlisted men form a part. Every company officer of a regiment, commanding any troop, battery, or company not in the field, or commanding in any garrison, fort, post, or barrack may, in the absence of his field-officer, grant furloughs to the enlisted men, for a time not exceeding twenty days in six months, and not to more than two persons to be absent at the same time.

ART. 12.—At every muster of a regiment, troop, battery, or company, the commanding officer thereof shall give to the mustering officer certificates, signed by himself, stating how long absent officers have been absent and the reasons of their absence. And the commanding officer of every troop, battery, or company shall give like certificates, stating how long absent non-commissioned officers and private soldiers have been absent and the reasons of their absence. Such reasons and time of absence shall be inserted in the muster-rolls opposite the names of the respective absent officers and soldiers, and the certificates, together with the muster-rolls, shall be transmitted by the mustering officer to the Department of War, as speedily as the distance of the place and muster will admit.

ART. 13.—Every officer who signs a false certificate, relating to the absence or pay of an officer or soldier, shall be dismissed from the service.

ART. 14.—Any officer who knowingly makes a false muster of man or horse, or who signs, or directs, or allows the signing of any muster-roll, knowing the same to contain a false muster, shall, upon proof thereof by two witnesses, before a court-martial, be dismissed from the service, and shall thereby be disabled to hold any office or employment in the service of the United States.

ART. 15.—Any officer who, willfully or through neglect, suffers to be lost, spoiled, or damaged, any military stores belonging to the United States, shall make good the loss or damage, and be dismissed from the service.

ART. 16.—Any enlisted man who sells, or willfully or through neglect wastes the ammunition delivered out to him, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.

ART. 17.—Any soldier who sells or, through neglect, loses or spoils his horse, arms, clothing, or accouterments, shall suffer such stoppages, not exceeding one-half of his current pay, as a court-martial may deem sufficient for repairing the loss or damage, and shall be punished by confinement or such other corporal punishment as the court may direct.

ART. 18.—Any officer commanding in any garrison, fort, or barracks of the United States who, for his private advantage, lays any duty or imposition upon, or is interested in, the sale of any victuals, liquors, or other necessities of life, brought into such garrison, fort, or barracks, for the use of the soldiers, shall be dismissed from the service.

ART. 19.—Any officer who uses contemptuous or disrespectful words against the President, the Vice-President, the Congress of the United States, or the chief magistrate or legislature of any of the United States in which he is quartered, shall be dismissed from the service, or otherwise punished, as a court-martial may direct. Any soldier who so offends shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.

ART. 20.—Any officer or soldier who behaves himself with disrespect toward his commanding officer shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.

ART. 21.—Any officer or soldier who, on any pretense whatsoever, strikes his superior officer, or draws or lifts up any weapon, or offers any violence against him, being in the execution of his office, or disobeys any lawful command of his superior officer, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct.

ART. 22.—Any officer or soldier who begins, excites, causes, or joins in any mutiny or sedition, in any troop, battery, company, party, post, detachment, or guard, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct.

ART. 23.—Any officer or soldier who, being present at any mutiny or sedition, does not use his utmost endeavor to suppress the same, or having knowledge of any intended mutiny or sedition, does not, without delay, give information thereof to his commanding officer, shall suffer death, or such other punishment as a court-martial may direct.

ART. 24.—All officers, of what condition soever, have power to part and quell all quarrels, frays, and disorders, whether among persons belonging to his own or to another corps, regiment, troop, battery, or company, and to order officers into arrest, and non-commissioned officers and soldiers into confinement, who take part in the same, until their proper superior officer is acquainted therewith. And whosoever, being so ordered, refuses to obey such officer or non-commissioned officer, or draws a weapon upon him, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.

ART. 25.—No officer or soldier shall use any reproachful or provoking speeches or gestures to another. Any officer who so offends shall be put in arrest. Any soldier who so offends shall be confined, and required to ask pardon of the party offended, in the presence of his commanding officer.

ART. 27.—Any officer or non-commissioned officer, commanding a guard, who, knowingly and willingly, suffers any person to go forth to fight a duel, shall be punished as a challenger; and all seconds or promoters of duels, and carriers of challenges to fight duels, shall be deemed principals, and punished accordingly. It shall be the duty of any officer commanding an army, regiment, troop, battery, company, post, or detachment, who knows or has reason to believe that a challenge has been given or accepted by any officer or enlisted man under his command, immediately to arrest the offender and bring him to trial.

ART. 28.—Any officer or soldier who upbraids another officer or soldier for refusing a challenge shall himself be punished as a challenger; and all officers and soldiers are hereby discharged from any disgrace or opinion of disadvantage which might arise from their having refused to accept challenges, as they will only have acted in obedience to the law, and have done their duty as good soldiers, who subject themselves to discipline.

ART. 29.—Any officer who thinks himself wronged by the commanding officer of his regiment, and, upon due application to such commander, is refused redress, may complain to the general commanding in the State or Territory where such regiment is stationed. The general shall examine into said complaint and take proper measures for redressing the wrong complained of; and he shall, as soon as possible, transmit to the Department of War a true statement of such complaint, with the proceedings had thereon.

ART. 30.—Any soldier who thinks himself wronged by any officer may complain to the commanding officer of his regiment, who shall summon a regimental court-martial for the doing of justice to the complainant. Either party may appeal from such regimental court-martial to a general court-martial; but if, upon such second hearing, the appeal appears to be groundless and vexatious, the party appealing shall be punished at the discretion of said general court-martial.

ART. 31.—Any officer or soldier who lies out of his quarters, garrison, or camp, without leave from his superior officer, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.

ART. 32.—Any soldier who absents himself from his troop, battery, company, or detachment, without leave from his commanding officer, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.

ART. 34.—Any soldier who is found one mile from camp, without leave in writing from his commanding officer, shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.

If, upon such application, any officer refuses or willfully neglects, except in time of war, to deliver over such accused person to the civil magistrates, or to aid the officers of justice in apprehending him, he shall be dismissed from the service.

ART. 60.—Any person in the military service of the United States who makes or causes to be made any claim against the United States, or any officer thereof, knowing such claim to be false or fraudulent; or

ART. 61.—Any officer who is convicted of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman shall be dismissed from the service.

ART. 62.—All crimes not capital, and all disorders and neglects, which officers and soldiers may be guilty of, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, though not mentioned in the foregoing articles of war, are to be taken cognizance of by a general, or a regimental, garrison, or field-officers' court-martial, according to the nature and degree of the offense, and punished at the discretion of such court.

ART. 68.—Every officer to whose charge a prisoner is committed shall, within twenty-four hours after such commitment, or as soon as he is relieved from his guard, report in writing, to the commanding officer, the name of such prisoner, the crime charged against him, and the name of the officer committing him; and if he fails to make such report, he shall be punished as a court-martial may direct.

ART. 70.—No officer or soldier put in arrest shall be continued in confinement more than eight days, or until such time as a court-martial can be assembled.

ART. 71.—When an officer is put in arrest for the purpose of trial, except at remote military posts or stations, the officer by whose order he is arrested shall see that a copy of the charges on which he is to be tried is served upon him within eight days after his arrest, and that he is brought to trial within ten days thereafter, unless the necessities of the service prevent such trial; and then he shall be brought to trial within thirty days after the expiration of said ten days. If a copy of the charges be not served, or the arrested officer be not brought to trial, as herein required, the arrest shall cease. But officers released from arrest, under the provisions of this article, may be tried, whenever the exigencies of the service shall permit, within twelve months after such release from arrest.

ART. 72.—Any general officer commanding an army, a Territorial Division or a Department, or colonel commanding a separate Department may appoint general courts-martial whenever necessary. But when any such commander is the accuser or prosecutor of any officer under his command the court shall be appointed by the President; and its proceedings and sentence shall be sent directly to the Secretary of War, by whom they shall be laid before the President, for his approval or orders in the case.

ART. 73.—In time of war the commander of a division, or of a separate brigade of troops, shall be competent to appoint a general court-martial. But when such commander is the accuser or prosecutor of any person under his command, the court shall be appointed by the next higher commander.

ART. 74.—Officers who may appoint a court-martial shall be competent to appoint a judge-advocate for the same.

ART. 75.—General courts-martial may consist of any number of officers from five to thirteen, inclusive; but they shall not consist of less than thirteen when that number can be convened without manifest injury to the service.

ART. 76.—When the requisite number of officers to form a general court-martial is not present in any post or detachment, the commanding officer shall, in cases which require the cognizance of such a court, report to the commanding officer of the department, who shall, thereupon, order a court to be assembled at the nearest post or department at which there may be such a requisite number of officers, and shall order the party accused, with necessary witnesses, to be transported to the place where the said court shall be assembled.

ART. 77.—Officers of the Regular Army shall not be competent to sit on courts-martial to try the officers or soldiers of other forces, except as provided in Article 78.

ART. 78.—Officers of the Marine Corps, detached for service with the Army by order of the President, may be associated with officers of the Regular Army on courts-martial for the trial of offenders belonging to the Regular Army, or to forces of the Marine Corps so detached; and in such cases the orders of the senior officer of either corps, who may be present and duly authorized, shall be obeyed.

ART. 79.—Officers shall be tried only by general courts-martial; and no officer shall, when it can be avoided, be tried by officers inferior to him in rank.

ART. 80.—In time of war a field-officer may be detailed in every regiment, to try soldiers thereof for offenses not capital; and no soldier serving with his regiment, shall be tried by a regimental or garrison court-martial when a field-officer of his regiment may be so detailed.

ART. 81.—Every officer commanding a regiment or corps shall, subject to the provisions of article eighty, be competent to appoint, for his own regiment or corps, courts-martial, consisting of three officers, to try offenses not capital.

ART. 82.—Every officer commanding a garrison, fort, or other place, where the troops consist of different corps, shall, subject to the provisions of article eighty, be competent to appoint, for such garrison or other place, courts-martial, consisting of three officers, to try offenses not capital.

ART. 83.—Regimental and garrison courts-martial, and field-officers detailed to try offenders, shall not have power to try capital cases or commissioned officers, or to inflict a fine exceeding one month's pay, or to imprison or put to hard labor any non-commissioned officer or soldier for a longer time than one month.

ART. 84.—The judge-advocate shall administer to each member of the court, before they proceed upon any trial, the following oath, which shall also be taken by all members of regimental and garrison courts-martial: "You, A B, do swear that you will well and truly try and determine, according to evidence, the matter now before you, between the United States of America and the prisoner to be tried, and that you will duly administer justice, without partiality, favor, or affection, according to the provisions of the rules and articles for the government of the armies of the United States, and if any doubt should arise, not explained by said articles, then according to your conscience, the best of your understanding, and the custom of war in like cases; and you do further swear that you will not divulge the sentence of the court until it shall be published by the proper authority; neither will you disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof, as a witness, by a court of justice, in a due course of law. So help you God."

ART. 85.—When the oath has been administered to the members of a court-martial, the president of the court shall administer to the judge advocate, or person officiating as such, an oath in the following form: "You, A B, do swear that you will not disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of the court-martial, unless required to give evidence thereof, as a witness, by a court of justice, in due course of law; nor divulge the sentence of the court to any but the proper authority, until it shall be duly disclosed by the same. So help you God."

ART. 86.—A court-martial may punish, at discretion, any person who uses any menacing words, signs, or gestures, in its presence, or who disturbs its proceedings by any riot or disorder.

ART. 87.—All members of a court-martial are to behave with decency and calmness.

ART. 88.—Members of a court-martial may be challenged by a prisoner, but only for cause stated to the court. The court shall determine the relevancy and validity thereof, and shall not receive a challenge to more than one member at a time.

ART. 89.—When a prisoner, arraigned before a general court-martial, from obstinacy and deliberate design, stands mute, or answers foreign to the purpose, the court may proceed to trial and judgment, as if the prisoner had pleaded not guilty.

ART. 90.—The judge advocate, or some person deputed by him, or by the general or officer commanding the army, detachment, or garrison, shall prosecute in the name of the United States, but when the prisoner has made his plea, he shall so far consider himself counsel for the prisoner as to object to any leading question to any of the witnesses, and to any question to the prisoner, the answer to which might tend to criminate himself.

ART. 91.—The depositions of witnesses residing beyond the limits of the State, Territory, or district in which any military court may be ordered to sit, if taken on reasonable notice to the opposite party and duly authenticated, may be read in evidence before such court in cases not capital.

ART. 92.—All persons who give evidence before a court-martial shall be examined on oath, or affirmation, in the following form: "You swear (or affirm) that the evidence you shall give, in the case now in hearing, shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God."

ART. 93.—A court-martial shall, for reasonable cause, grant a continuance to either party, for such time, and as often as may appear to be just: Provided, That if the prisoner be in close confinement, the trial shall not be delayed for a period longer than sixty days.

ART. 94.—Proceedings of trials shall be carried on only between the hours of eight in the morning and three in the afternoon, excepting in cases which, in the opinion of the officer appointing the court, require immediate example.

ART. 95.—Members of a court-martial, in giving their votes, shall begin with the youngest in commission.

ART. 96.—No person shall be sentenced to suffer death, except by the concurrence of two-thirds of the members of a general court-martial, and in the cases herein expressly mentioned.

ART. 97.—No person in the military service shall, under the sentence of a court-martial, be punished by confinement in a penitentiary, unless the offense of which he may be convicted would, by some statute of the United States, or by some statute of the State, Territory, or District in which such offense may be committed, or by the common law, as the same exists in such State, Territory, or District, subject such convict to such punishment.

ART. 98.—No person in the military service shall be punished by flogging, or by branding, marking, or tattooing on the body.

ART. 99.—No officer shall be discharged or dismissed from the service, except by order of the President, or by sentence of a general court-martial; and in time of peace no officer shall be dismissed, except in pursuance of the sentence of a court-martial, or in mitigation thereof.

ART. 100.—When an officer is dismissed from the service for cowardice or fraud, the sentence shall further direct that the crime, punishment, name, and place of abode of the delinquent shall be published in the newspapers in and about the camp, and in the State from which the offender came, or where he usually resides; and after such publication it shall be scandalous for an officer to associate with him.

ART. 101.—When a court-martial suspends an officer from command, it may also suspend his pay and emoluments for the same time, according to the nature of his offense.

ART. 102.—No person shall be tried a second time for the same offense.

ART. 103.—No person shall be liable to be tried and punished by a general court-martial for any offense which appears to have been committed more than two years before the issuing of the order for such trial, unless, by reason of having absented himself, or of some other manifest impediment, he shall not have been amenable to justice within that period.

ART. 104.—No sentence of a court-martial shall be carried into execution until the whole proceedings shall have been approved by the officer ordering the court, or by the officer commanding for the time being.

ART. 105.—No sentence of a court-martial inflicting the punishment of death, shall be carried into execution until it shall have been confirmed by the President; except in the cases of persons convicted, in time of war, as spies, mutineers, deserters, or murderers, and in the cases of guerilla marauders, convicted, in time of war, of robbery, burglary, arson, rape, assault with intent to commit rape, or of violation of the laws and customs of war; and in such excepted cases the sentence of death may be carried into execution upon confirmation by the commanding general in the field, or the commander of the department, as the case may be.

ART. 106.—In time of peace no sentence of a court-martial, directing the dismissal of an officer, shall be carried into execution, until it shall have been confirmed by the President.

ART. 107.—No sentence of a court-martial appointed by the commander of a division or of a separate brigade of troops, directing the dismissal of an officer, shall be carried into execution until it shall have been confirmed by the general commanding the army in the field to which the division or brigade belongs.

ART. 108.—No sentence of a court-martial, either in time of peace or in time of war, respecting a general officer, shall be carried into execution, until it shall have been confirmed by the President.

ART. 109.—All sentences of a court-martial may be confirmed and carried into execution by the officer ordering the court, or by the officer commanding for the time being, where confirmation by the President, or by the commanding general in the field, or commander of the department, is not required by these articles.

ART. 110.—No sentence of a field-officer, detailed to try soldiers of his regiment, shall be carried into execution, until the whole proceedings shall have been approved by the brigade commander, or, in case there be no brigade commander, by the commanding officer of the post.

ART. 111.—Any officer who has authority to carry into execution the sentence of death, or of dismissal of an officer, may suspend the same until the pleasure of the President shall be known; and, in such case, he shall immediately transmit to the President a copy of the order of suspension, together with a copy of the proceedings of the court.

ART. 112.—Every officer who is authorized to order a general court-martial shall have power to pardon or mitigate any punishment adjudged by it, except the punishment of death or of dismissal of an officer. Every officer commanding a regiment or garrison in which a regimental or garrison court-martial may be held, shall have power to pardon or mitigate any punishment which such court may adjudge.

ART. 113.—Every judge-advocate, or person acting as such, at any general court-martial, shall, with as much expedition as the opportunity of time and distance of place may admit, forward the original proceedings and sentence of such court to the Judge-Advocate General of the Army, in whose office they shall be carefully preserved.

ART. 114.—Every party tried by a general court-martial shall, upon demand thereof, made by himself or by any person in his behalf, be entitled to a copy of the proceedings and sentence of such court.

ART. 115.—A court of inquiry, to examine into the nature of any transaction of, or accusation or imputation against, any officer or soldier, may be ordered by the President or by any commanding officer; but, as courts of inquiry may be perverted to dishonorable purposes, and may be employed in the hands of weak and envious commandants, as engines for the destruction of military merit, they shall never be ordered by any commanding officer, except upon a demand by the officer or soldier whose conduct is to be inquired of.

ART. 116.—A court of inquiry shall consist of one or more officers, not exceeding three, and a recorder, to reduce the proceedings and evidence to writing.

ART. 117.—The recorder of a court of inquiry shall administer to the members the following oath: "You shall well and truly examine and inquire, according to the evidence, into the matter now before you, without partiality, favor, affection, prejudice, or hope of reward: so help you God." After which the president of the court shall administer to the recorder the following oath: "You, A B, do swear that you will, according to your best abilities, accurately and impartially record the proceedings of the court and the evidence to be given in the case in hearing: so help you God."

ART. 118.—A court of inquiry, and the recorder thereof, shall have the same power to summon and examine witnesses as is given to courts-martial and the judge-advocates thereof. Such witnesses shall take the same oath which is taken by witnesses before courts-martial, and the party accused shall be permitted to examine and cross-examine them, so as fully to investigate the circumstances in question.

ART. 119.—A court of inquiry shall not give an opinion on the merits of the case inquired of unless specially ordered to do so.

ART. 120.—The proceedings of a court of inquiry must be authenticated by the signatures of the recorder and the president thereof, and delivered to the commanding officer.

ART. 121.—The proceedings of a court of inquiry may be admitted as evidence by a court-martial, in cases not capital, nor extending to the dismissal of an officer : Provided, That the circumstances are such that oral testimony cannot be obtained.

ART. 122.—If, upon marches, guards, or in quarters, different corps of the Army happen to join or do duty together, the officer highest in rank of the line of the Army, Marine Corps, or militia, by commission, there on duty or in quarters, shall command the whole, and give orders for what is needful to the service, unless otherwise specially directed by the President, according to the nature of the case.

ART. 123.—In all matters relating to the rank, duties, and rights of officers, the same rules and regulations shall apply to officers of the Regular Army and to volunteers commissioned in, or mustered into said service, under the laws of the United States, for a limited period.

ART. 124.—Officers of the militia of the several States, when called into the service of the United States, shall on all detachments, courts-martial, and other duty wherein they may be employed in conjunction with the regular or volunteer forces of the United States, take rank next after all officers of the like grade in said regular or volunteer forces, notwithstanding the commissions of such militia officers may be older than the commissions of the said officers of the regular or volunteer forces of the United States.

ART. 125.—In case of the death of any officer, the major of his regiment, or the officer doing the major's duty, or the second officer in command at any post or garrison, as the case may be, shall immediately secure all his effects then in camp or quarters, and shall make, and transmit to the office of the Department of War, an inventory thereof.

ART. 126.—In case of the death of any soldier, the commanding officer of his troop, battery, or company shall immediately secure all his effects then in camp or quarters, and shall, in the presence of two other officers, make an inventory thereof, which he shall transmit to the office of the Department of War.

ART. 127.—Officers charged with the care of the effects of deceased officers or soldiers shall account for and deliver the same, or the proceeds thereof, to the legal representatives of such deceased officers or soldiers. And no officer so charged shall be permitted to quit the regiment or post until he has deposited in the hands of the commanding officer all the effects of such deceased officers or soldiers not so accounted for and delivered.

ART. 128.—The foregoing articles shall be read and published, once in every six months, to every garrison, regiment, troop, or company in the service of the United States, and shall be duly observed and obeyed by all officers and soldiers in said service.

SEC. 1343.—All persons who, in time of war, or of rebellion against the supreme authority of the United States, shall be found lurking or acting as spies, in or about any of the fortifications, posts, quarters, or encampments of any of the armies of the United States, or elsewhere, shall be triable by a general court-martial or by a military commission, and shall, on conviction thereof, suffer death.

shall on conviction by court-martial be liable, if an officer, to be cashiered, or to suffer such less punishment as is in this Act mentioned, and if a soldier, to suffer imprisonment, or such less punishment as is in this Act mentioned. Provided that no person shall be charged under this section in respect of any offence for which special provision is made in any other part of this Act, and which is not a civil offence; nevertheless the conviction of a person so charged shall not be invalid by reason only of the charge being in contravention of this proviso, unless it appears that injustice has been done to the person charged by reason of such contravention; but the responsibility of any officer for that contravention shall not be removed by the validity of the conviction.

Offences punishable by ordinary Law.

41. Subject to such regulations for the purpose of preventing interference with the jurisdiction of the civil courts as are in this Act after-mentioned, every person who, whilst he is subject to military law, shall commit any of the offences in this section mentioned shall be deemed to be guilty of an offence against military law, and if charged under this section with any such offence (in this Act referred to as a civil offence) shall be liable to be tried by court-martial, and on conviction to be punished as follows; that is to say,

(1.) If he is convicted of treason, be liable to suffer death, or such less punishment as is in this Act mentioned; and

(2.) If he is convicted of murder, be liable to suffer death; and

(3.) If he is convicted of manslaughter or treason-felony, be liable to suffer penal servitude, or such less punishment as is in this Act mentioned; and

- (4.) If he is convicted of rape, be liable to suffer penal servitude, or such less punishment as is in this Act mentioned; and
- (5.) If he is convicted of any offence not before in this Act particularly specified which when committed in England is punishable by the law of England, be liable, whether the offence is committed in England or elsewhere, either to suffer such punishment as might be awarded to him in pursuance of this Act in respect of an act to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, or to suffer any punishment assigned for such offence by the law of England.

Provided as follows:—

- (a.) A person subject to military law shall not be tried by court-martial for treason, murder, manslaughter, treason-felony, or rape committed in the United Kingdom, and shall not be tried by court-martial for treason, murder, manslaughter, treason-felony, or rape committed in any place within Her Majesty's dominions, other than the United Kingdom and Gibraltar, unless such person at the time he committed the offence was on active service, or such place is more than one hundred miles as measured in a straight line from any city or town in which the offender can be tried for such offence by a competent civil court.
- (b.) A person subject to military law when in Her Majesty's dominions may be tried by any competent civil court for any offence for which he would be triable if he were not subject to military law.

Redress of Wrongs.

42. If an officer thinks himself wronged by his commanding officer, and on due application made to him does not receive the redress to which he may consider himself entitled, he may complain to the Commander-in-Chief, in order to obtain justice, who is hereby required to examine into such complaint, and through a Secretary of State make his report to Her Majesty in order to receive the directions of Her Majesty thereon.

43. If any soldier thinks himself wronged in any matter by any officer other than his captain, or by any soldier, he may complain thereof to his captain, and if he thinks himself wronged by his captain, either in respect of his complaint not being redressed or in respect of any other matter, he may complain thereof to his commanding officer, and if he thinks himself wronged by his commanding officer, either in respect of his complaint not being redressed or in respect of any other matter, he may complain thereof to the general or other officer commanding the district or station where the soldier is serving; and every officer to whom a complaint is made in pursuance of this section shall cause such complaint to be inquired into, and shall, if on inquiry he is satisfied of the justice of the complaint so made, take such steps as may be necessary for giving full redress to the complainant in respect of the matter complained of.

44. Punishments may be inflicted in respect of offences committed by persons subject to military law and convicted by courts-martial,—

In the case of officers, according to the scale following:

- b. Penal servitude for a term not less than five years.
- c. Imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for a term not exceeding two years.

- n. Forfeitures, fines, and stoppages.

Provided that—

- (1.) Where in respect to any offence under this Act there is specified a particular punishment, or such less punishment as is in this Act mentioned, there may be awarded in respect of that offence, instead of such particular punishment (but subject to the other regulations of this Act as to punishments, and regard being had to the nature and degree of the offence), any one punishment lower in the above scales than the particular punishment.
- (2.) An officer shall be sentenced to be cashiered before he is sentenced to penal servitude or imprisonment.
- (3.) An officer when sentenced to forfeiture of seniority of rank may also be sentenced to reprimand or severe reprimand.
- (4.) A soldier when sentenced to penal servitude or imprisonment may, in addition thereto, be sentenced to be discharged with ignominy from Her Majesty's service.
- (5.) Where a soldier on active service is guilty of an aggravated offence of drunkenness, or of an offence of disgraceful conduct, or of any offence punishable with death or penal servitude, it shall be lawful for a court-martial to award for that offence such summary punishment other than flogging as may be directed by rules to be made from time to time by a Secretary of State; and such summary punishment shall be of the character of personal restraint or of hard labour, but shall not be of a nature to cause injury to life or limb, and shall not be inflicted where the confirming officer is of opinion that imprisonment can with due regard to the public service be carried into execution.
- (6.) The said summary punishment shall not be inflicted upon a non-commissioned officer, or upon a reduced non-commissioned officer, for any offence committed while holding the rank of non-commissioned officer.
- (7.) "An aggravated offence of drunkenness" for the purposes of this section means drunkenness committed on the march or otherwise on duty, or after the offender was warned for duty, or when by reason of the drunkenness the offender was found unfit for duty; and notwithstanding anything in this Act it shall not be incumbent on the commanding officer to deal summarily with such aggravated offence of drunkenness.

- (8.) "An offence of disgraceful conduct" for the purposes of this section means any offence specified in section eighteen of this Act.
- (9.) All rules with respect to summary punishment made in pursuance of this section shall be laid before Parliament as soon as practicable after they are made, if Parliament be then sitting, and if Parliament be not then sitting, as soon as practicable after the beginning of the then next session of Parliament.
- (10.) For the purposes of commutation of punishment the summary punishment above mentioned shall be deemed to stand in the scale of punishments next below imprisonment.
- (11.) In addition to or without any other punishment in respect of any offence, an offender convicted by court-martial may be subject to forfeiture of any deferred pay, service towards pension, military decoration or military reward, in such manner as may for the time being be provided by Royal Warrant, but shall not, save as may be provided by Royal Warrant, be liable to any forfeiture under the Regimental Debts Act, 1863, or under any Act relating to the military savings banks, or any regulations made in pursuance of either of the above-mentioned Acts.
- (12.) In addition to or without any other punishment in respect of any offence, an offender may be sentenced by court-martial to any deduction authorized by this Act to be made from his ordinary pay.
- (13.) No officer or non-commissioned officer shall, under or by virtue of any power or authority derived from any foreign potentate or ruler, inflict, or cause to be inflicted, on any person subject to military law under this Act, for or in respect of any offence against such law, any punishment not authorized by this Act.

ARREST AND TRIAL.

Arrest.

45. The following regulations shall be enacted with respect to persons subject to military law when charged with offences punishable under this Act:

- (1.) Every person subject to military law when so charged may be taken into military custody: Provided that in every case where any officer or soldier not on active service remains in such military custody for a longer period than eight days without a court-martial for his trial being ordered to assemble, a special report of the necessity for further delay shall be made by his commanding officer in manner prescribed; and a similar report shall be forwarded every eight days until a court-martial is assembled or the officer or soldier is released from custody:
- (2.) Military custody means, according to the usages of the service, the putting the offender under arrest or the putting him in confinement:
- (3.) An officer may order into military custody an officer of inferior rank or any soldier, and any non-commissioned officer may order into military custody any soldier, and an officer may order into military custody any officer (though he be of higher rank) engaged in a quarrel, fray, or disorder; and any such order shall be obeyed, notwithstanding the person giving the order and the person in respect of whom the order is given do not belong to the same corps, arm, or branch of the service:

- (4.) An officer or non-commissioned officer commanding a guard, or a provost-marshal or assistant provost-marshal, shall not refuse to receive or keep any person who is committed to his custody by any officer or non-commissioned officer, but it shall be the duty of the officer or non-commissioned officer who commits any person into custody to deliver at the time of such committal or as soon as practicable, and in every case within twenty-four hours thereafter, to the officer, non-commissioned officer, provost-marshal, or assistant provost-marshal into whose custody the person is committed, an account in writing, signed by himself, of the offence with which the person so committed is charged:
- (5.) The charge made against every person taken into military custody shall without unnecessary delay be investigated by the proper military authority, and, as soon as may be, either proceedings shall be taken for punishing the offence, or such person shall be discharged from custody.

Power of Commanding Officer.

46. (1.) The commanding officer shall upon an investigation being had of a charge made against a person subject to military law under his command of having committed an offence under this Act, dismiss the charge if he in his discretion thinks that it ought not to be proceeded with, but where he thinks the charge ought to be proceeded with, he may take steps for bringing the offender to a court-martial, or in the case of a soldier may deal with the case summarily.

(2.) Where he deals with a case summarily, he may,—

(a.) Award to the offender imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any period not exceeding seven days; and

(b.) In the case of the offence of drunkenness, may order the offender to pay a fine not exceeding ten shillings, either in addition to or without imprisonment with or without hard labour; and

(c.) In addition to or without any other punishment, may order the offender to suffer any deduction from his ordinary pay authorized by this Act to be made by the commanding officer.

(3.) Where the charge is against a soldier for drunkenness not on duty, and it is not an aggravated offence of drunkenness within the meaning of section forty-four of this Act, the commanding officer shall deal with the case summarily unless the soldier has been guilty of drunkenness on not less than four occasions in the preceding twelve months, but nothing in this sub-section shall affect the jurisdiction of any court-martial.

(4.) In the case of absence without leave, the commanding officer may award imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any period not exceeding twenty-one days.

(5.) Provided that where imprisonment is awarded for absence without leave the commanding officer shall have regard to the number of days during which the offender has been absent, and in no case shall the term of imprisonment awarded, if exceeding seven days, exceed the term of absence.

(6.) Provided that in every case where the power of summary award by a commanding officer exceeds a sentence of seven days imprisonment, the accused person may demand that the evidence against him should be taken on oath, and the same oath or solemn declaration as that required to be taken by witnesses before a court-martial shall be administered to each witness in such case.

(7.) An offender shall not be liable to be tried by court-martial for any offence which has been dealt with summarily by his commanding officer, and shall not be liable to be punished by his commanding officer for any offence of which he has been acquitted or convicted by a competent civil court or by a court-martial.

(8.) A soldier ordered by his commanding officer to suffer imprisonment or pay a fine, or to suffer any deduction from his ordinary pay, shall, if he so request, have a right to be tried by a district court-martial instead of submitting to such imprisonment, fine, or deduction.

(9.) Nothing in this section shall prejudice the power of a commanding officer to award such minor punishments as he is for the time being authorized to award, so, however, that a minor punishment shall not be awarded for any offence for which imprisonment exceeding seven days is awarded.

Courts-martial.

47. (1.) Any officer authorized by or in pursuance of this Act to convene general and district courts-martial or either of them, also any commanding officer of a rank not below the rank of captain, also any officer of a rank not below the rank of captain when in command of two or more corps or portions of two or more corps, also on board a ship, a commanding officer of any rank may, without warrant and by virtue of this Act, convene a regimental court-martial for the trial of offences committed by soldiers under his command.

(2.) Such court-martial shall consist of not less than three officers, each of whom must have held a commission during not less than one whole year.

(3.) The convening officer shall appoint the president.

(4.) The president of a regimental court-martial shall not be under the rank of captain, unless where the court-martial is held on the line of march, or on board any ship, or unless, in the opinion of the convening officer, such opinion to be expressed in the order convening the court and to be conclusive, a captain is not, with due regard to the public service, available, in any of which cases an officer of any rank may be president.

(5.) A regimental court-martial shall not try an officer, nor award the punishment of death or penal servitude, or of imprisonment in excess of forty-two days, or of discharge with ignominy; but, subject as aforesaid, and save as in this Act specially mentioned, any offence under this Act committed by a person subject to military law, and triable by court-martial, may be tried and punished by a regimental court-martial.

48. The following rules are enacted with respect to general courts-martial and district courts-martial :

(1.) A general court-martial shall be convened by Her Majesty, or some officer deriving authority to convene a general court-martial immediately or mediately from Her Majesty:

- (2.) A district court-martial shall be convened by an officer authorized to convene general courts-martial, or some officer deriving authority to convene a district court-martial from an officer authorized to convene general courts-martial:
- (3.) A general court-martial shall consist in the United Kingdom, India, Malta, and Gibraltar, of not less than nine and elsewhere of not less than five officers, each of whom must have held a commission during not less than three whole years, and of whom not less than five must be of a rank not below that of captain:
- (4.) A district court-martial shall consist in the United Kingdom, India, Malta, and Gibraltar, of not less than five and elsewhere of not less than three officers, each of whom must have held a commission during not less than two whole years:
- (5.) The minimum number mentioned in this section for a general or a district court-martial shall be the legal minimum for that court-martial:
- (6.) A district court-martial shall not try a person subject to military law as an officer, nor award the punishment of death or penal servitude; but, subject as aforesaid, any offence under this Act committed by a person subject to military law, and triable by court-martial, may be tried and punished by either a general or district court-martial:
- (7.) An officer under the rank of captain shall not be a member of a court-martial for the trial of a field officer:
- (8.) Sentence of death shall not be passed on any prisoner without the concurrence of two thirds at the least of the officers serving on the court-martial by which he is tried:
- (9.) The president of a court-martial, whether general or district, shall be appointed by order of the authority convening the court, but he shall not be under the rank of field officer, unless the officer convening the court is under that rank, or unless in the opinion of the officer who convenes the court, such opinion to be expressed in the order convening the court, and to be conclusive, a field officer is not, with due regard to the public service, available, in either of which cases an officer not below the rank of captain may be the president of such court-martial, and he shall not be under the rank of captain, except in the case of a district court-martial, where in the opinion of the officer who convenes the court, such opinion to be expressed in the order convening the court, and to be conclusive, a captain is not, having due regard to the public service, available.

49. (1.) Where a complaint is made to any officer in command of any detachment or portion of troops in any country beyond the seas, that an offence has been committed by any person subject to military law under his command against the property or person of any inhabitant of or resident in such country,— then, if in the opinion of such officer it is not practicable that such offence should be tried by an ordinary general court-martial, it shall be lawful for him, although not authorized to convene general courts-martial, to convene a court-martial, in this Act referred to as a field general court-martial, for the trial of the person charged with such offence, provided as follows:

(a.) A field general court-martial shall consist of not less than three officers;

(b.) The convening officer may preside, but he shall, whenever he deems it practicable, appoint another officer as president, who may be of any rank, but shall, if practicable in the opinion of the convening officer, be not below the rank of captain.

(2.) Section forty-eight of this Act shall not apply to a field general court-martial, but sentence of death shall not be passed on any prisoner by a field general court-martial without the concurrence of all the members.

(3.) A field general court-martial may, notwithstanding the restrictions enacted by this Act in respect of the trial by court-martial of civil offences within the meaning of this Act, try any person subject to military law who is under the command of the convening officer, and is charged with any such offence as is mentioned in this section, and may award for such offence any sentence which a general court-martial is competent to award for such offence: Provided always, that no sentence of any such court-martial shall be executed until confirmed as provided by this Act.

50. (1.) The officers sitting on a court-martial may belong to the same or different corps, or may be unattached to any corps, and may try persons belonging or attached to any corps.

(2.) The officer who convened a court-martial shall not, save as is otherwise expressly provided by this Act, sit on that court-martial.

(3.) Any of the following persons, that is to say, a prosecutor or witness for the prosecution of any prisoner, or the commanding officer of the prisoner within the meaning of the provisions of this Act which relate to dealing with a case summarily, or the officer who investigated the charges on which a prisoner is arraigned, shall not, save in the case of a field general court-martial, sit on the court-martial for the trial of such prisoner, nor shall he act as judge advocate at such court-martial.

51. (1.) A prisoner about to be tried by any court-martial may object, for any reasonable cause, to any member of the court, including the president whether appointed to serve thereon originally or to fill a vacancy caused by the retirement of an officer objected to, so that the court may be constituted of officers to whom the prisoner makes no reasonable objection.

(2.) Every objection made by a prisoner to any officer shall be submitted to the other officers appointed to form the court.

(3.) If the objection is to the president, such objection, if allowed by one-third or more of the other officers appointed to form the court, shall be allowed, and the court shall adjourn for the purpose of the appointment of another president.

(4.) If an objection to the president is allowed, the authority convening the court shall appoint another president, subject to the same right of the prisoner to object.

(5.) If the objection is to a member other than the president, and is allowed by one-half or more of the votes of the officers entitled to vote, the objection shall be allowed, and the member objected to shall retire, and his vacancy may be filled in the prescribed manner by another officer, subject to the same right of the prisoner to object.

(6.) In order to enable a prisoner to avail himself of his privilege of objecting to any officer, the names of the officers appointed to form the court shall be read over in the hearing of the prisoner on their first assembling, and before they are sworn, and he shall be asked whether he objects to any of such officers, and a like question shall be repeated in respect of any officer appointed to serve in lieu of a retiring officer.

52. (1.) An oath shall be administered by the prescribed person to every member of every court-martial before the commencement of the trial in the following form; that is to say, 'You, , do swear, that you will well and truly try the prisoner [or prisoners] before the court according to the evidence, and that you will duly administer justice according to the Army Act now in force, without partiality, favour, or affection, and you do further swear that you will not divulge the sentence of the court until it is duly confirmed, and you do further swear that you will not on any account at any time whatsoever disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of this court-martial, unless thereunto required in due course of law. So help you God.'

(2.) An oath in the prescribed form or forms shall be administered by the prescribed person to the judge advocate or person officiating as judge advocate (if any), and also to every officer in attendance on a court-martial for the purpose of instruction (if any,) and also to every shorthand writer (if any) in attendance on the court-martial.

(3.) Every witness before a court-martial shall be examined on oath, which the president or other prescribed person shall administer in the prescribed form.

(4.) If a person by this Act required either as a member of, or person in attendance on, or witness before a court-martial, or otherwise in respect of a court-martial, to take an oath, objects to take an oath, or is objected to as incompetent to take an oath, the court if satisfied of the sincerity of the objection, or, where the competence of the person to take an oath is objected to, of the oath having no binding effect on the conscience of such person, shall permit such person instead of being sworn to make a solemn declaration in the prescribed form, and for the purposes of this Act such solemn declaration shall be deemed to be an oath.

53. (1.) If a court-martial after the commencement of the trial is, by death or otherwise, reduced below the legal minimum, it shall be dissolved.

(2.) If after the commencement of the trial the president dies or is otherwise unable to attend, and the court is not reduced below the legal minimum, the convening authority may appoint the senior member of the court, if of sufficient rank, to be president, and the trial shall proceed accordingly; but if he is not of sufficient rank the court shall be dissolved.

(3.) If, on account of the illness of the prisoner before the finding, it is impossible to continue the trial, a court-martial shall be dissolved.

(4.) Where a court-martial is dissolved under the foregoing provisions of this section the prisoner may be tried again.

(5.) The president of any court-martial may, on any deliberation amongst the members, cause the court to be cleared of all other persons.

(6.) The court may adjourn from time to time.

(7.) The court may also, where necessary, view any place.

(8.) In the case of an equality of votes on the finding the prisoner shall be deemed to be acquitted. In the case of an equality of votes on the sentence, or any question arising after the commencement of the trial except the finding, the president shall have a second or casting vote.

(9.) When a court-martial recommend a prisoner to mercy, such recommendation shall be attached to and form part of the proceedings of the court, and shall be promulgated and communicated to the prisoner, together with the finding and sentence.

54. (1.) The following authorities shall have power to confirm the findings and sentences of courts-martial; that is to say,

(a.) In the case of a regimental court-martial, the convening officer or officer having authority to convene such a court-martial at the date of the submission of the finding and sentence thereof:

(b.) In the case of a general court-martial, Her Majesty, or some officer deriving authority to confirm the findings and sentences of general courts-martial immediately or mediately from Her Majesty:

(c.) In the case of a district court-martial, an officer authorized to convene general courts-martial, or some officer deriving authority to confirm the findings and sentences of district courts-martial from an officer authorized to convene general courts-martial:

(d.) In the case of a field general court-martial, an officer authorized to confirm the findings and sentences of general courts-martial for the trial of offences in the force of which the detachment or portion of troops under the command of the convening officer forms part.

(2.) The authority having power to confirm the finding and sentence of a court-martial may send back such finding and sentence, or either of them, for revision once, but not more than once, and it shall not be lawful for the court on any revision to receive any additional evidence: and where the finding only is sent back for revision, the court shall have power without any direction to revise the sentence also. In no case shall the authority recommend the increase of a sentence, nor shall the court-martial on revisal of the sentence, either in obedience to the recommendation of an authority, or for any other reason, have the power to increase the sentence awarded.

(3.) The finding of acquittal, whether on all or some of the offences with which the prisoner is charged, shall not require confirmation or be subject to be revised, and if it relates to the whole of the offences shall be pronounced at once in open court, and the prisoner shall be discharged.

(4.) A member of a court-martial shall not have authority to confirm the finding or sentence of that court-martial, and where a member of a court-martial becomes confirming officer he shall refer the finding and sentence of the court-martial to a superior authority competent to confirm the findings and sentences of the like description of courts-martial, and that authority shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be in that instance the confirming authority; and where a court-martial is held in a colony, and there is no such superior authority in that colony, the governor of that colony shall have power to confirm the finding and sentence of such court-martial in like manner in all respects as if he were such superior authority as above mentioned.

(5.) An officer having authority to confirm the finding and sentence of a court-martial may withhold his confirmation wholly or partly, and refer such finding and sentence or the part not confirmed to any superior authority competent to confirm the findings and sentences of the like description of courts-martial, and that authority shall for the purposes of this Act be deemed to be in that instance and to the extent of such reference the confirming authority.

(6.) Subject to the provisions of this Act with respect to the finding of acquittal, the finding and sentence of a court-martial shall not be valid except in so far as the same may be confirmed by an authority authorized to confirm the same.

(7.) Sentence of death when passed in a colony shall not, unless passed in respect of an offence committed on active service, be carried into effect unless, in addition to the confirmation otherwise required by this Act, it is approved by the governor of the colony.

(8.) Sentence of death when passed in India in respect of the offence of treason or murder shall not (except where the offence was committed on active service) be carried into effect unless, in addition to the confirmation otherwise required by this Act, it is approved by the Governor-General, or if the offender was tried within the limits of any presidency, by the Governor-General or the governor of that presidency.

(9.) When a person subject to military law is convicted of manslaughter or rape, or any other civil offence under the section of this Act relating to the trial by court-martial of civil offences, and is sentenced to penal servitude, such sentence shall not be carried into execution unless, in addition to the confirmation otherwise required by this Act, it is approved, if the offender has been tried in India by the Governor-General, or if the offender has been tried within the limits of any presidency, by the Governor-General or by the governor of the presidency, or if he has been tried in a colony, by the governor of the colony.

55. (1.) Where a person subject to military law and being on active service with any body of forces is charged with an offence, a summary court-martial may be convened and shall have jurisdiction to try such offence, if the officer convening the court is of opinion that an ordinary court-martial cannot, having due regard to the public service, be convened to try such offence.

(2.) A summary court-martial shall be convened and constituted, and the members and witnesses sworn, and its proceedings conducted, and its finding and sentence confirmed in such manner as may be provided by this section and rules from time to time made in pursuance of this Act; and sections fifty to fifty-four (both inclusive) of this Act shall not apply to such court-martial, provided that,—

(a.) A summary court-martial shall consist of not less than three officers, unless the officer convening the same is of opinion that three officers are not available, having due regard to the public service, in which case the court-martial may consist of two officers; and the sentence shall not exceed such summary punishment as is allowed by this Act, or imprisonment; and

- (c.) A sentence of death or penal servitude awarded by a summary court-martial shall not be carried into effect unless and until it has been confirmed by the general or field officer commanding the force with which the prisoner is present at the date of his sentence.

56. (1.) A prisoner charged before a court-martial with stealing may be found guilty of embezzlement or of fraudulently misapplying money or property.

(2.) A prisoner charged before a court-martial with embezzlement may be found guilty of stealing or fraudulently misapplying money or property.

(3.) A prisoner charged before a court-martial with desertion may be found guilty of attempting to desert or of being absent without leave.

(4.) A prisoner charged before a court-martial with attempting to desert may be found guilty of desertion or of being absent without leave.

(5.) A prisoner charged before a court-martial with any other offence under this Act may, on failure of proof of an offence being committed under circumstances involving a higher degree of punishment, be found guilty of the same offence as being committed under circumstances involving a less degree of punishment.

EXECUTION OF SENTENCE.

57. (1.) The confirming authority may, when confirming the sentence of any court-martial, mitigate or remit the punishment thereby awarded, or commute such punishment for any less punishment or punishments to which the offender might have been sentenced by the said court-martial. The confirming authority may also suspend for such time as seems expedient the execution of a sentence.

(2.) When a sentence passed by a court-martial has been confirmed, the following authorities shall have power to mitigate or remit the punishment thereby awarded, or to commute such punishment for any less punishment or punishments to which the offender might have been sentenced by the said court-martial; that is to say,

(a.) As respects persons undergoing sentence in any place whatever, Her Majesty or the Commander-in-Chief or the officer commanding the district or station where the prisoner subject to such punishment may for the time be, or any prescribed officer; and

(b.) As respects persons undergoing sentences in India, the Commander-in-Chief of the forces in India, also as respects persons undergoing sentences in any presidency, the Commander-in-Chief of the forces in that presidency; and

(c.) As respects persons undergoing sentences in any colony, the officer commanding the forces in that colony; and

(d.) As respects persons undergoing sentences in any place not in the United Kingdom, India, or a colony, the officer commanding the forces in such place:

3. Provided that the power given by this section shall not be exercised by an officer holding a command inferior to that of the authority confirming the sentence, unless such officer is authorized by such confirming authority or other superior military authority to exercise such power.

4. An authority having power under this section to mitigate, remit, or commute any punishment may, if it seem fit, do all or any of those things in respect of a person subject to such punishment.

5. The provisions of this Act with respect to an original sentence of penal servitude or imprisonment shall apply to a sentence of penal servitude or imprisonment imposed by way of commutation.

58. When a person subject to military law is convicted by a court-martial, whether in the United Kingdom or elsewhere, either within or without Her Majesty's dominions, and is sentenced to penal servitude, such conviction and sentence shall be of the same effect as if such person (in this Act referred to as a military convict) had been convicted in the United Kingdom of an offence punishable by penal servitude and sentenced to penal servitude by a competent civil court, and all enactments relating to a person sentenced to penal servitude by a competent civil court shall, so far as circumstances admit, apply accordingly.

59. (1.) Where a sentence of penal servitude is passed by a court-martial in the United Kingdom, the military convict on whom such sentence has been passed shall, as soon as practicable, be transferred to a penal servitude prison to undergo his sentence according to law, and until so transferred shall be kept in military custody.

(2.) The order of the committing authority (hereafter in this section mentioned) shall be a sufficient warrant for his transfer to a penal servitude prison.

Where a soldier signs a confession that he has been guilty of desertion or of fraudulent enlistment, a competent military authority may, by the order dispensing with his trial by a court-martial, or by any subsequent order, award the same forfeitures and the same deductions from pay (if any) as a court-martial could award for the said offence, or as are consequential upon conviction by a court-martial for the said offence, except such of them as may be mentioned in the order.

(2.) If upon any such confession, evidence of the truth or falsehood of such confession cannot then be conveniently obtained, the record of such confession, countersigned by the commanding officer of the soldier, shall be entered in the regimental books, and such soldier shall continue to do duty in the corps in which he may then be serving, or in any other corps to which he may be transferred, until he is discharged or transferred to the reserve, or until legal proof can be obtained of the truth or falsehood of such confession.

(2.) A like order may be made with respect to any property found in the possession of such offender, which appears to the confirming authority or Commander-in-Chief to have been obtained by the conversion or exchange of any of the property stolen, embezzled, received, or unlawfully obtained.

(3.) Moreover where it appears to the confirming authority or Commander-in-Chief from the evidence given before the court-martial, that any part of the property stolen, embezzled, received, or unlawfully obtained was sold to or pawned with any person without any guilty knowledge on the part of the person purchasing or taking in pawn the property, the authority or Commander-in-Chief may, on the application of that person, and on the restitution of the said property to the owner thereof, order that out of the money (if any) found in the possession of the offender, a sum not exceeding the amount of the proceeds of the said sale or pawning shall be paid to the said person purchasing or taking in pawn.

(4.) An order under this section shall not bar the right of any person, other than the offender, or any one claiming through him, to recover any property or money delivered or paid in pursuance of an order under this section from the person to whom the same is so delivered or paid.

Part II.—Enlistment.

Period of Service.

76. A person may be enlisted to serve Her Majesty as a soldier of the regular forces for a period of twelve years, or for such less period as may be from time to time fixed by Her Majesty, but not for any longer period, and the period for which a person enlists is in this Act referred to as the term of his original enlistment.

77. The original enlistment of a person under this Act shall be as follows, either—

(1.) For the whole of the term of his original enlistment in army service; or

- (2.) For such portion of the term of his original enlistment as may be from time to time fixed by a Secretary of State, and specified in the attestation paper, in army service, and for the residue of the said term in the reserve.

78. (1.) A Secretary of State may from time to time, by general or special regulations, vary the conditions of service, so as to permit a soldier of the regular forces in army service, with his assent, either—

- (a.) To enter the reserve at once for the residue unexpired of the term of his original enlistment; or
- (b.) To extend his army service for all or any part of the residue unexpired of such term; or
- (c.) To extend the term of his original enlistment up to the period of twelve years.

(2.) A Secretary of State may from time to time, by general or special regulations, vary the conditions of service so as to permit a man in the reserve, with his assent, to re-enter upon army service for all or any part of the residue unexpired of the term of his original enlistment, or for any period of time not exceeding twelve years in the whole from the date of his original enlistment.

79. In reckoning the service of a soldier of the regular forces for the purpose of discharge or of transfer to the reserve—

- (1.) The service shall begin to reckon from the date of his attestation; but
- (2.) Where a soldier of the regular forces has been guilty of any of the following offences:

- (a.) Desertion from Her Majesty's service, or
- (b.) Fraudulent enlistment, then either upon his conviction by court-martial of the offence, or (if, having confessed the offence, he is liable to be tried) upon his trial being dispensed with by order of the competent military authority, the whole of his prior service shall be forfeited, and he shall be liable to serve as a soldier of the regular forces for the term of his original enlistment, reckoned from the date of such conviction or such order dispensing with trial, in like manner as if he had been originally attested at that date:

Provided that a Secretary of State may restore all or any part of the service forfeited under this section to any soldier who may perform good and faithful service, or may otherwise be deemed by such Secretary of State to merit such restoration of service, or may be recommended for such restoration of service by a court-martial.

Proceedings for Enlistment.

80. (1.) Every person authorized to enlist recruits in the regular forces (in this Act referred to as the "recruiter") shall give to every person offering to enlist a notice in the form for the time being authorized by a Secretary of State, stating the general requirements of attestation and the general conditions of the contract to be entered into by the recruit, and directing such person to appear before a justice of the peace at the time and place therein mentioned.

(2.) Upon the appearance before a justice of the peace of a person offering to enlist, the justice shall ask him whether he assents to be enlisted, and shall not proceed with the enlistment if he considers the recruit under the influence of liquor.

(3.) If he does not appear before a justice, or on appearing does not assent to be enlisted, no further proceedings shall be taken.

(4.) If he assents to be enlisted—

(a.) The justice, after cautioning such person that if he makes any false answer to the questions read to him he will be liable to be punished as provided by this Act, shall read or cause to be read to him the questions set forth in the attestation paper for the time being authorized by a Secretary of State, and shall take care that such person understands each question so read, and after ascertaining that the answer of such person to each question has been duly recorded opposite the same in the attestation paper, shall require him to make and sign the declaration as to the truth of those answers set forth in the said paper, and shall then administer to him the oath of allegiance contained in the said paper:

(b.) Upon signing the declaration and taking the oath, such person shall be deemed to be enlisted as a soldier of Her Majesty's regular forces:

(c.) The justice shall attest by his signature, in manner required by the said paper, the fulfillment of the requirements as to attesting a recruit, and shall deliver the attestation paper, duly dated, to the recruiter:

(d.) The fee for the attestation of a recruit, and for all acts and things incidental thereto, shall be one shilling and no more, and shall be paid to the clerk of the justice:

(e.) The officer who finally approves of a recruit for service shall, at his request, furnish him with a certified copy of his attestation paper.

(5.) The date at which the recruit signs the declaration and takes the oath in this section in that behalf mentioned shall be deemed to be the date of the attestation of such recruit.

(6.) The competent military authority, if satisfied that there is any error in the attestation paper of a recruit, may cause the recruit to attend before some justice of the peace, and that justice, if satisfied that such error exists, and is not so material as to render it just that the recruit should be discharged, may amend the error in the attestation paper, and the paper as amended shall thereupon be deemed as valid as if the matter of the amendment had formed part of the original matter of such paper.

(7.) Where the regulations of a Secretary of State under this part of this Act require duplicate attestation papers to be signed and attested, this section shall apply to both such duplicates, and in the event of any amendment of an attestation paper the amendment shall be made in both of the duplicate attestation papers.

81. If a recruit within three months after the date of his attestation pays for the use of Her Majesty a sum not exceeding ten pounds, he shall be discharged with all convenient speed, unless he claims such discharge during a period when soldiers in army service who otherwise would be transferred to the reserve are required by a proclamation of Her Majesty in pursuance of this Act to continue in army service, in which case he may be retained in Her Majesty's service during that period, and at the termination thereof shall, if he so require it, on the payment then of the said sum, be discharged.

Appointment to Corps and Transfers.

82. (1.) Recruits may, in pursuance of any general or special regulations from time to time made by a Secretary of State, be enlisted for service in particular corps of the regular forces, but save as is provided by such regulations, if any, recruits shall be enlisted for general service.

(2.) The competent military authority shall as soon as practicable appoint a recruit, if enlisted for service in a particular corps, to that corps, and if enlisted for general service, to some corps of the regular forces.

83. A soldier of the regular forces, whether enlisted for general service or not, when once appointed to a corps, shall serve in that corps for the period of his army service, whether during the term of his original enlistment or during the period of such re-engagement as is in this Act mentioned, unless transferred under the following provisions :

(3.) Where a soldier of the regular forces is in pursuance of any of the foregoing provisions transferred to a corps in an arm or branch different from that in which he was previously serving, the competent military authority may by order vary the conditions of his service so as to correspond with the general conditions of service in the arm or branch to which he is transferred.

(4.) A soldier of the regular forces in any branch of the service may be transferred by order of the competent military authority to any corps of the same branch which is serving in the United Kingdom in either of the following cases :

(a.) When he has been invalided from service beyond the seas ; or

(b.) When, in the case of his corps or the part thereof in which he is serving being ordered on service beyond the seas, he is either unfit for such service by reason of his health, or is within two years from the end either of the period of his army service in the term of his original enlistment, or of such re-engagement as is in this Act mentioned.

(5.) Where a soldier of the regular forces in any branch of the service, who was enlisted to serve part of the term of his original enlistment in the reserve, and has not extended his army service for the whole of that time, is on service beyond the seas, and at the time of his corps or the part thereof in which he is serving being ordered to another station or to return home, has more than two years of his army service in the term of his original enlistment unexpired, he may be transferred by order of the competent military authority to any corps of the same branch which or a part of which is on service beyond the seas.

(6.) Where a soldier of the regular forces has been transferred to serve, either as a warrant officer not holding an honorary commission, or in the corps of armourer sergeants, or in the army hospital corps, or in the army service corps, or on the staff, or in the corps of mounted military police, or in any corps not being a corps of infantry, cavalry, artillery, or engineers, he may by order of the competent military authority, either during the term of his original enlistment or during the period of his re-engagement, be removed from such service and transferred to any corps of the regular forces serving in the United Kingdom, or to any corps of the regular forces serving on the station beyond the seas on which he is serving at the time of his removal, or to the corps of the regular forces in which he was serving prior to such first-mentioned transfer either in the rank he holds at the time of his removal or any lower rank.

(7.) Where a soldier of the regular forces—

(a.) Has been guilty of the offence of desertion from Her Majesty's service or of fraudulent enlistment, and has either been convicted of the same by a court-martial, or, having confessed the offence, is liable to be tried, but his trial has been dispensed with by order of the competent military authority ; or

(b.) Has been sentenced by a court-martial for any offence to a punishment not less than imprisonment for a term of six months, such soldier shall be liable, in commutation wholly or partly of other punishment, to general service, and may from time to time be transferred to such corps of the regular forces as the competent military authority may from time to time order.

(8.) A soldier of the regular forces delivered into military custody or committed by a court of summary jurisdiction in any part of Her Majesty's dominions as a deserter shall be liable to be transferred by order of the competent military authority to any corps of the regular forces near to the place where he is delivered or committed, or to any other corps to which the competent military authority think it desirable to transfer him, and to serve in the corps to which he is so transferred without prejudice to his subsequent trial and punishment.

Re-engagement and Prolongation of Service.

84. (1.) Subject to any general or special regulations from time to time made by a Secretary of State, a soldier of the regular forces if in army service and within three years of the completion of his original term of enlistment may on the recommendation of his commanding officer, and with the approval of the competent military authority, be re-engaged for such further period of army service as will make up a total continuous period of twenty-one years of army service, reckoned from the date of his attestation, and inclusive of any period previously served in the reserve.

(2.) A soldier of the regular forces during his period of re-engagement shall be liable to forfeit his previous service during such period of re-engagement in like manner as he is liable under this part of this Act during the term of his original enlistment.

(3.) A soldier of the regular forces who so re-engages shall make before his commanding officer a declaration in accordance with the said regulations.

85. A soldier of the regular forces who has completed, or will within one year complete, a total period of twenty-one years service, inclusive of any period served in the reserve, may give notice to his commanding officer of his desire to continue in Her Majesty's service in the regular forces; and if the competent military authority approve he may be continued as a soldier of the regular forces in the same manner in all respects as if his term of service were still unexpired, except that he may claim his discharge at the expiration of any period of three months after he has given notice to his commanding officer of his wish to be discharged.

86. The regulations from time to time made in pursuance of this part of this Act may, if it seems expedient, provide that a non-commissioned officer of the regular forces who extends his army service for the residue unexpired of his original term of enlistment shall have the right at his option to re-engage, under section eighty-four, and to continue his service, under section eighty-five of this Act, or to do either of such things, subject, nevertheless, to the veto of the Secretary of State or other authority mentioned in the regulations, and to such other conditions as are specified in the regulations.

87. (1.) Where the time at which a soldier of the regular forces would otherwise be entitled to be discharged occurs while a state of war exists between Her Majesty and any foreign power, or while such soldier is on service beyond the seas, or while soldiers in the reserve are required by a proclamation, in pursuance of the enactments relating to the calling out of the reserve on permanent service, to continue in or re-enter upon army service, the soldier may be detained, and his service may be prolonged for such further period, not exceeding twelve months, as the competent military authority may order; but at the expiration of that period, or any earlier period at which the competent military authority considers his services can be dispensed with, the soldier shall, as provided by this Act, be discharged with all convenient speed.

(2.) Where the time at which a soldier of the regular forces would otherwise be entitled to be transferred to the reserve occurs while a state of war exists between Her Majesty and any foreign power, the soldier may be detained in army service for such further period, not exceeding twelve months, as the competent military authority may order, but at the expiration of that period, or any earlier period at which the competent military authority considers his services can be dispensed with, the soldier shall with all convenient speed be sent to the United Kingdom for the purpose of being transferred to the reserve.

(3.) If a soldier required under this section to be discharged or sent to the United Kingdom desires, while a state of war exists between Her Majesty and any foreign power, to continue in Her Majesty's service, and the competent military authority approve, he may agree to continue as a soldier of the regular forces in the same manner in all respects as if his term of service were still unexpired, except that he may claim his discharge at the end of such state of war, or, if it is so provided by such agreement, at the expiration of any period of three months after he has given notice to his commanding officer of his wish to be discharged.

(4.) A soldier who so agrees to continue shall make before his commanding officer a declaration in accordance with any general or special regulations from time to time made by a Secretary of State.

88. (1.) It shall be lawful for Her Majesty in Council, in case of imminent national danger or of great emergency, by proclamation, the occasion being first communicated to Parliament if Parliament be then sitting, or if Parliament be not then sitting declared by the proclamation, to order that the soldiers who would otherwise be entitled in pursuance of the terms of their enlistment to be transferred to the reserve shall continue in army service.

(2.) It shall be lawful for Her Majesty by any such proclamation to order a Secretary of State from time to time to give, and when given to revoke or vary, such directions as may seem necessary or proper for causing all or any of the soldiers mentioned in the proclamation to continue in army service.

(3.) Every soldier for the time being required by or in pursuance of such directions to continue in army service shall continue to serve in army service for the same period for which he might be required to serve, if he had been transferred to the reserve and called out for permanent service by a proclamation of Her Majesty under the enactments relating to the reserve.

(4.) Any man who has entered the reserve in pursuance of the terms of his enlistment may be called out for permanent service by a proclamation of Her Majesty under the enactments relating to the calling out of the reserve on permanent service.

Discharge and Transfer to Reserve Force.

89. In the following cases; that is to say,

(1.) Where a soldier of the regular forces has been invalided from service beyond the seas; or

(2.) Where a corps to which a soldier of the regular forces belongs, or the part thereof in which he is serving, is ordered on service beyond the seas, and the soldier is either unfit for such service by reason of his health, or is within two years of the end of the period of his army service in the term of his original enlistment, the competent military authority may by order transfer him to the reserve in like manner as if the period of his actual service were specified in his attestation paper as the portion of the term of his original enlistment which was to be spent in army service.

90. (1.) Save as otherwise provided by this Act or the Acts relating to the reserve forces, every soldier of the regular forces upon the completion of the term of his original enlistment, or of the period of his re-engagement, shall be discharged with all convenient speed, but until so discharged shall be subject to this Act as a soldier of the regular forces.

(2.) Where a soldier of the regular forces enlisted in the United Kingdom is, when entitled to be discharged, serving beyond the seas, he shall, if he so requires, be sent to the United Kingdom, and in such case shall, with all convenient speed, be sent there free of expense, and on his arrival be discharged. If such soldier is permitted, at his request, to stay at the place where he is serving, he shall not afterwards have any claim to be sent at the public expense to the United Kingdom or elsewhere.

(3.) Every soldier of the regular forces upon the completion of the period of his army service, if shorter than the term of his original enlistment, shall be transferred to the reserve, but until so transferred shall be subject to this Act as a soldier of the regular forces.

(4.) Where a soldier of the regular forces, when entitled to be transferred to the reserve, is serving beyond the seas, he shall be sent to the United Kingdom free of expense with all convenient speed, and on his arrival shall be transferred to the reserve.

(5.) A soldier of the regular forces who is discharged on the completion of the term of his original enlistment or his re-engagement as mentioned in the second sub-section of this section, or is transferred to the reserve, shall be entitled to be conveyed free of cost from the place in the United Kingdom where he is discharged or transferred to the place in which he appears from his attestation paper to have been attested, or to any place at which he may at the time of his discharge or transfer decide to take up his residence, and to which he can be conveyed without greater cost.

91. (1.) A Secretary of State may, if he think proper, on account of a soldier's lunacy, cause any soldier of the regular forces on his discharge, and his wife and child, or any of them, to be sent to the parish or union to which under the statutes for the time being in force he appears, from the statements made in his attestation paper and other available information, to be chargeable; and such soldier, wife, or child, if delivered after reasonable notice, in England or Ireland at the workhouse in which persons settled in such parish or union are received, and in Scotland to the inspector of poor of such parish, shall be received by the master or other proper officer of such workhouse or such inspector of poor, as the case may be:

(2.) Provided that a Secretary of State, where it appears to him that any such soldier is a dangerous lunatic, and is in such a state of health as not to be liable to suffer bodily or mental injury by his removal may, by order signified under his hand or under the hand of an under secretary, send such lunatic direct to an asylum, registered hospital, licensed house, or other place in which pauper lunatics can legally be confined, and for the purpose of the said order the above-mentioned parish or union shall be deemed to be the parish or union from which such lunatic is sent.

(3.) In England the lunatic shall be sent to the asylum, hospital, house, or place to which a person in the workhouse aforesaid, on becoming a dangerous lunatic, can by law be removed, and an order of the Secretary of State under this section shall be of the same effect as an order by a justice within the meaning of section seventy-two of the Act of the session of the sixteenth and seventeenth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter ninety-seven, intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the laws for the provision and regulation of lunatic asylums for counties and boroughs, and for the maintenance and care of pauper lunatics in England," and shall be subject accordingly to the provisions of that section.

(4.) The Secretary of State, before making the said order in respect of a lunatic who is liable to be delivered to the inspector of poor of a parish in Scotland, may require the inspector of poor of that parish to specify the asylum to which such lunatic if in the parish would be sent, and it shall be the duty of such inspector forthwith to specify such asylum, and thereupon the Secretary of State may make the said order for sending the lunatic to that asylum, and such order shall be of the same effect as an order by the sheriff within the meaning of section eighty-five of the Act of the session of the twentieth and twenty-first years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter seventy-one, intituled "An Act for the regulation of, and care and treatment of lunatics, and for the provision, maintenance, and regulation of lunatic asylums in Scotland," and shall be subject accordingly to the provisions of that section.

(5.) In the case of any such lunatic, who is liable to be delivered at a workhouse in Ireland, at which persons settled in the said union are received, a Secretary of State may, by order under his hand, send such soldier to the asylum of the district in which such union is situate, and such order shall be of the same effect as a warrant under the hands and seals of two justices given under the provisions of the tenth section of the Act of the session of the thirtieth and thirty-first years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter one hundred and eighteen, intituled "An Act to provide for the appointment of the officers and servants of district lunatic asylums in Ireland, and to alter and amend the law relating to the custody of dangerous lunatics and dangerous idiots in Ireland."

92. (1.) A soldier of the regular forces shall not be discharged from those forces, unless by sentence of court-martial with ignominy, or by order of the competent military authority, or by authority direct from Her Majesty, and until duly discharged in manner provided by this Act and by regulations of the Secretary of State under this Act shall be subject to this Act.

(2.) To every soldier of the regular forces who is discharged, for whatever reason he is discharged, there shall be given a certificate of discharge, stating his service, conduct, and character, and the cause of his discharge.

Authorities to enlist and attest Recruits.

93. A Secretary of State may from time to time make, and when made revoke and alter, a general or special order making such regulations, giving such directions, and issuing such forms as he may think necessary or expedient respecting the persons authorized to enlist recruits for Her Majesty's regular forces, and for the purpose of such enlistment, and generally for carrying this part of this Act into effect; and any such order shall be of the same effect as if enacted in this Act.

94. (1.) For the purposes of the attestation of soldiers in pursuance of this part of this Act—

An officer in the United Kingdom or elsewhere, if authorized in that behalf under the regulations of a Secretary of State, also every person exercising the office of a magistrate in India or a colony, and also each of the following persons, shall have the authority of a justice of the peace, and be deemed to be included in the expression "justice of the peace" wherever used in this part of this Act in relation to the attestation of soldiers; that is to say,

Any person who is for the time being an alien may, if Her Majesty think fit to signify her consent through a Secretary of State, be enlisted in Her Majesty's regular forces, so however that the number of aliens serving together at any one time in any corps of the regular forces shall not exceed the proportion of one alien to every fifty British subjects, and that an alien so enlisted shall not be capable of holding any higher rank in Her Majesty's regular forces than that of a warrant officer or non-commissioned officer:

(2.) Provided that notwithstanding the above provisions of this section any negro or person of colour, although an alien, may voluntarily enlist in pursuance of this part of this Act, and when so enlisted shall while serving in Her Majesty's regular forces be deemed to be entitled to all the privileges of a natural-born British subject.

96. The master of an apprentice in the United Kingdom who has been attested as a soldier of the regular forces may claim him while under the age of twenty-one years as follows, and not otherwise:

(1.) The master, within one month after the apprentice left his service, must take before a justice of the peace the oath in that behalf specified in the First Schedule to this Act, and obtain from the justice a certificate of having taken such oath, which certificate the justice shall give in the form in the said schedule, or to the like effect:

(2.) A court of summary jurisdiction within whose jurisdiction the apprentice may be, if satisfied on complaint by the master that he is entitled to have the apprentice delivered up to him, may order the officer under whose command the apprentice is to deliver him to the master, but if satisfied that the apprentice stated on his attestation that he was not an apprentice may, and if required by or on behalf of the said commanding officer shall, try the apprentice for the offence of making such false statement, and if need be may adjourn the case for the purpose:

(3.) Except in pursuance of an order of a court of summary jurisdiction, an apprentice shall not be taken from Her Majesty's service:

(4.) An apprentice shall not be claimed in pursuance of this section unless he was bound for at least four years by a regular indenture, and was under the age of sixteen years when so bound:

(5.) 97. The provisions of this part of this Act with respect to apprentices shall apply to a person who at the time of his attestation is an in-indentured labourer in a colony, with these qualifications, that such indentured labourer, if imported at the expense of the employer or of the colony in consideration of the indenture under which he is serving, may be claimed although above the age of twenty-one years, and though bound for a less period or at an older age than is above specified.

Where a person after his attestation on his enlistment, or the making of his declaration on re-engagement, has received pay as a soldier of the regular forces during three months, he shall be deemed to have been duly attested and enlisted or duly re-engaged, as the case may be, and shall not be entitled to claim his discharge on the ground of any error or illegality in his enlistment, attestation, or re-engagement, or on any other ground whatsoever, save as authorized by this Act, and, if within the said three months such person claims his discharge, any such error or illegality or other ground shall not until such person is discharged in pursuance of his claim affect his position as a soldier in Her Majesty's service, or invalidate any proceedings, act, or thing taken or done prior to such discharge.

(2.) Where a person is in pay as a soldier in any corps of Her Majesty's regular forces, such person shall be deemed for all the purposes of this Act to be a soldier of the regular forces, with this qualification, that he may at any time claim his discharge, but until he so claims and is discharged in pursuance of that claim he shall be subject to this Act as a soldier of the regular forces legally enlisted and duly attested under this Act.

114. (1.) The police authority for any place may cause annually a list to be made out of all persons in such place, or any particular part thereof, liable to furnish carriages and animals under this Act, and of the number and description of the carriages and animals of such persons; and where a list is so made, any justice may by warrant require any constable or constables having authority within such place to give from time to time, on demand by an officer or non-commissioned officer under this Act, orders to furnish carriages and animals, and such warrant shall be executed as if it were a special warrant issued in pursuance of this Act on such demand, and the orders shall specify the like particulars as such special warrant.

(2.) The police authority shall cause such list to be kept at some convenient place open for inspection at all reasonable times by persons interested, and any person who feels aggrieved either by being entered in such list, or by being entered to furnish any number or description of carriages or animals which he is not liable to furnish, may complain to a court of summary jurisdiction, and the court, after such notice as the court think necessary to persons interested, may order the list to be amended in such manner as the court may think just.

(3.) All orders given by constables for furnishing carriages and animals shall, as far as possible, be made from such list in regular rotation.

115. (1.) Her Majesty by order, distinctly stating that a case of emergency exists, and signified by a Secretary of State, and also in Ireland the Lord Lieutenant by a like order, signified by the Chief Secretary or Under Secretary, may authorize any general or field officer commanding Her Majesty's regular forces in any military district or place in the United Kingdom to issue a requisition under this section (hereinafter referred to as a requisition of emergency.)

(2.) The officer so authorized may issue a requisition of emergency under his hand, reciting the said order, and requiring justices of the peace to issue their warrants for the provision, for the purpose mentioned in the requisition, of such carriages and animals as may be provided under the foregoing provisions, and also of carriages of every description, and of horses of every description, whether kept for saddle or draught, and also of vessels (whether boats, barges, or other) used for the transport of any commodities whatsoever upon any canal or navigable river.

(3.) (4.) A Secretary of State shall cause due payment to be made for carriages, animals, and vessels furnished in pursuance of this section, and any difference respecting the amount of payment for any carriage, animal, or vessel shall be determined by a county court judge having jurisdiction in any place in which such carriage, animal, or vessel was furnished or through which it travelled in pursuance of the requisition.

(5.) Canal, river, or lock tolls are hereby declared not to be demandable for vessels while employed in any service in pursuance of this section or returning therefrom. And any toll collector who demands or receives toll in contravention of this exemption shall, on summary conviction, be liable to a fine not exceeding five pounds nor less than ten shillings.

(6.) A requisition of emergency, purporting to be issued in pursuance of this section and to be signed by an officer therein stated to be authorized in accordance with this section, shall be evidence until the contrary is proved, of its being duly issued and signed in pursuance of this Act, and if delivered to an officer of Her Majesty's forces or of a Secretary of State shall be a sufficient authority to such officer to demand carriages, animals, and vessels in pursuance of this section, and when produced by such officer shall be conclusive evidence to a justice and constable of the authority of such officer to demand carriages, animals, and vessels in accordance with such requisition; and it shall be lawful to convey on such carriages, animals, and vessels, not only the baggage, provisions, and military stores of the troops mentioned in the requisition of emergency, but also the officer, soldiers, servants, women, children, and other persons of and belonging to the same.

124. Any person tried by a court-martial shall be entitled on demand, at any time in the case of a general court-martial within seven years, and in the case of any other court-martial within three years after the confirmation of the finding and sentence of the court, to obtain from the officer or person having the custody of proceedings of such court a copy thereof, including the proceedings with respect to the revision and confirmation thereof, upon payment for the same at the prescribed rate, not exceeding twopence for every folio of seventy-two words, and for the purposes of this section the proceedings of courts-martial shall be preserved in the prescribed manner.

125. (1.) Every person required to give evidence before a court-martial may be summoned or ordered to attend in the prescribed manner.

(2.) Every person attending in pursuance of such summons or order as a witness before any court-martial shall, during his necessary attendance in or on such court, and in going to and returning from the same, have the same privilege from arrest as he would have if he were a witness before a superior court of civil jurisdiction.

(3.) Where a person not subject to military law is guilty of any contempt towards a court-martial, by using insulting or threatening language, or by causing any interruption or disturbance in its proceedings, or by printing observations or using words calculated to influence the members of or witnesses before such court, or to bring such court into disrepute, the president of the court-martial may certify the offence of such person, under his hand, to any court of law in the part of Her Majesty's dominions where the offence is committed which has power to commit for contempt, and that court may thereupon inquire into such alleged offence, and after hearing any witnesses that may be produced against or on behalf of the person so accused, and after hearing any statement that may be offered in defence, punish or take steps for the punishment of such person in like manner as if he had been guilty of contempt of that court.

127. A court-martial under this Act shall not, as respects the conduct of its proceedings, or the reception or rejection of evidence, or as respects any other matter or thing whatsoever, be subject to the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, or to any Act, law, or ordinance of any legislature whatsoever other than the Parliament of the United Kingdom.

128. The rules of evidence to be adopted in proceedings before courts-martial shall be the same as those which are followed in civil courts in England, and no person shall be required to answer any question or to produce any document which he could not be required to answer or produce in similar proceedings before a civil court.

129. Whereas it is expedient to make provision respecting the conduct of counsel when appearing on behalf of the prosecution or defence at general courts-martial in pursuance of rules under this Act, be it therefore enacted as follows :

(1.) Any conduct of a counsel which would be liable to censure, or a contempt of court, if it took place before Her Majesty's High Court of Justice in England, shall likewise be deemed liable to censure, or a contempt of court, in the case of a court-martial; and the rules laid down for the practice of courts-martial and the guidance of counsel shall be binding on counsel appearing before such courts-martial, and any wilful disobedience of such rules shall be professional misconduct, and, if persevered in, be deemed a contempt of court.

(2.) Where a counsel is guilty of conduct liable to censure, or a contempt of court, such offence shall be deemed to be an offence within the meaning of section one hundred and twenty-six of this Act, and the president of the court-martial may certify the same to a court of law accordingly; and the court of law to which the same is certified shall deal with such offence in the same manner as if it had been committed in a proceeding before that court.

(3.) A court-martial may, by order under the hand of the president, cause a counsel to be removed from the court who is guilty of such an offence as may, in the opinion of the court-martial, require his removal from court, but in every such case the president shall certify the offence committed to a court of law in manner provided by the above-mentioned section.

130. (1.) Where it appears on the trial by court-martial of a person charged with an offence that such person is by reason of insanity unfit to take his trial, the court shall find specially that fact; and such person shall be kept in custody in the prescribed manner until the directions of Her Majesty thereon are known, or until any earlier time at which such person is fit to take his trial.

(2.) Where on the trial by court-martial of a person charged with an offence it appears that such person committed the offence, but that he was insane at the time of the commission thereof, the court shall find specially the fact of his insanity, and such person shall be kept in custody in the prescribed manner until the directions of Her Majesty thereon are known.

(3.) In either of the above cases Her Majesty may give orders for the safe custody of such person during her pleasure, in such place and in such manner as Her Majesty thinks fit.

(4.) A finding under this section shall be subject to confirmation in like manner as any other finding.

(5.) If a person imprisoned by virtue of this Act becomes insane, then, without prejudice to any other provision for dealing with such insane prisoner, a Secretary of State in any case, and in the case of a prisoner confined in India the Governor General of India, or the Governor of any presidency in which the person is confined, and in the case of a prisoner confined in a colony the Governor of that colony, may, upon a certificate of such insanity by two qualified medical practitioners, order the removal of such prisoner to an asylum or other proper place for the reception of insane persons in the United Kingdom, India, or the colony, according as the prisoner is confined in the United Kingdom, India, or the colony, there to remain for the unexpired term of his imprisonment, and, upon such person being certified in the like manner to be again of sound mind, may order his removal to any prison in which he might have been confined if he had not become insane, there to undergo the remainder of such punishment.

General Provisions as to Prisons.

131. (1.) A Secretary of State may from time to time make arrangements with the Governor General of India or the Governor of a colony for the reception in any prison in India or in such colony of prisoners under this Act, and of deserters or absentees without leave from Her Majesty's service, on payment of such sums as are provided by the arrangement, and the governor of any prison to which any such arrangement relates shall be under the same obligation as the governor of a prison in the United Kingdom to receive and detain such prisoners, deserters, and absentees without leave:

(2.) Provided that where a prisoner has been sentenced in India or in a colony to a term of imprisonment exceeding twelve months or to a term of penal servitude, he shall be transferred as soon as practicable to a prison or convict establishment within the United Kingdom, unless in the case of imprisonment the court shall for special reasons otherwise order, there to undergo his sentence; or unless he belongs to a class with respect to which a Secretary of State has declared that, by reason of the climate or place of his birth or the place of his enlistment, or otherwise, it is not beneficial to the prisoner to transfer him to the United Kingdom; every such declaration shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament.

(3.) Any order which can be made under this section by the court may be made by the confirming authority in confirming the finding and sentence, and in the case of any commutation or remission of sentence, may be made by the authority commuting or remitting the sentence.

132. (1.) The governor of every prison in the United Kingdom, and the governor of every prison in India or a colony who is under the same obligation as the governor of a prison in the United Kingdom, shall receive and confine, until discharged or delivered over in due course of law, all prisoners sent to such prison in pursuance of this Act, and every person delivered into his custody as a deserter or absentee without leave by any person conveying him under legal authority, on production of the warrant of a court of summary jurisdiction on which such deserter or absentee without leave has been taken or committed, or of some order from a Secretary of State, or from the Governor General of India, or the governor of a colony, which order shall continue in force until the deserter or absentee without leave has arrived at his destination.

(2.) Every such governor shall also receive into his custody for a period not exceeding seven days, any soldier in military custody upon delivery to him of a written order purporting to be signed by the commanding officer of such soldier.

(3.) The provisions of this section with respect to the governor of a prison in the United Kingdom shall apply to a person having charge of any police station or other place in which prisoners may legally be confined.

Military Prisons.

133. (1.) It shall be lawful for a Secretary of State, and in India for the Governor General, to set apart any building or part of a building under the control of the Secretary of State or Governor General as a military prison, or as a public prison for the imprisonment of military prisoners, and to declare that any such building or part of a building shall be a military prison, or a public prison, as the case may be, and every military prison so declared shall be deemed to be a public prison within the meaning of the provisions of this Act relating to imprisonment, and if such prison is in India shall be deemed to be an authorized prison.

(2.) It shall be lawful for a Secretary of State, and in India for the Governor General, from time to time to make, alter, and repeal rules for the government, management and regulation of military prisons, and for the appointment and removal and powers of inspectors, visitors, governors, and officers thereof, and for the labour of military prisoners therein, and for the safe custody of such prisoners, and for the maintenance of discipline among them, and for the punishment by personal correction, not exceeding twenty-five lashes in the case of corporal punishment, restraint, or otherwise of offences committed by such prisoners, so, however, that such rules shall not authorize corporal punishment to be inflicted for any offence in addition to the offences for which such punishment can be inflicted in pursuance of the Prison Act, 1865, and the Prison Act, 1877, nor render the imprisonment more severe than it is under the law in force for the time being in any public prison in England, subject to the Prison Act, 1877, and provided that all the regulations in the Prison Act, 1865, and in the Prison Act, 1877, as to the duties of gaolers, medical officers, and coroners shall be contained in such rules, so far as the same can be made applicable.

(3.) On all occasions of death by violence or attended with suspicious circumstances in any military prison in India an inquest is to be held, to make inquiry into the cause of death. The commanding officer shall cause notice to be given to the nearest magistrate, duly authorized to hold inquests, and such magistrate shall hold an inquest into the cause of any such death, in the manner and with the powers provided in the case of similar inquiries held under the law for the time being in force in India for regulating criminal procedure.

(4.) Where from any cause there is no competent civil authority available, the commanding officer shall convene a court of inquest. Such court shall be convened and shall hold the inquest in such manner as may be prescribed.

(5.) Such rules may apply to such prisons any enactments of the Prison Act, 1865, imposing punishments on any persons not prisoners.

(6.) All rules made by a Secretary of State in pursuance of this section shall be laid before Parliament as soon as practicable after they are made, if Parliament be then sitting, and if not, as soon as practicable after the commencement of the then next session of Parliament.

134. (1.) No soldiers shall be confined, longer than is absolutely necessary, in prisons other than military prisons in India and colonies where the rules for the government and management of such prisons differ from those made by the Governor General of India and a Secretary of State in the case of India and the colonies respectively.

135. Whereas it is expedient that a clear difference should be made between the treatment of prisoners convicted of breaches of discipline and the treatment of prisoners convicted of offences of an immoral, dishonest, shameful, or criminal character, a Secretary of State shall from time to time make rules for the classification and treatment of such prisoners.

Pay.

136. The pay of an officer or soldier of Her Majesty's regular forces shall be paid without any deduction other than the deductions authorized by this or any other Act or by any Royal Warrant for the time being.

137. The following penal deductions may be made from the ordinary pay due to an officer of the regular forces:

- (1.) All ordinary pay due to an officer who absents himself without leave or overstays the period for which leave of absence has been granted him, unless a satisfactory explanation has been given through the commanding officer of such officer, and has been notified as satisfactory by the Commander-in-Chief to a Secretary of State;
- (2.) The sum required to make good such compensation for any expenses, loss, damage, or destruction occasioned by the commission of any offence as may be awarded by the court-martial by whom he is convicted of such offence;
- (3.) The sum required to make good the pay of any officer or soldier which he has unlawfully retained or unlawfully refused to pay.

138. The following penal deductions may be made from the ordinary pay due to a soldier of the regular forces:

- (1.) All ordinary pay for every day of absence either on desertion or without leave, or as prisoner of war, and for every day of imprisonment either under sentence for an offence awarded by a civil court or court-martial, or by his commanding officer, or if he is on board one of Her Majesty's ships by the commanding officer of that ship, or under detention on the charge for an offence of which he is afterwards convicted by a civil court or court-martial, or under detention on the charge for absence without leave for which he is afterwards awarded imprisonment by his commanding officer;
- (2.) All ordinary pay for every day on which he is in hospital on account of sickness certified by the proper medical officer attending on him at the hospital to have been caused by an offence under this Act committed by him;
- (3.) The sum required to make good such compensation for any expenses, loss, damage, or destruction occasioned by the commission of any offence as may be awarded by the court-martial by whom he is convicted of such offence, or if he is on board of one of Her Majesty's ships by the commanding officer of that ship, or where he has confessed the offence and his trial is dispensed with by order under section seventy-three of this Act, as may be awarded by that order or by any other order of a competent military authority under that section;
- (4.) The sum required to make good such compensation for any expenses caused by him, or for any loss of or damage or destruction done by him to any arms, ammunition, equipment, clothing, instruments, or regimental necessities or military decoration, or to any buildings or property, as may be awarded by his commanding officer, or, in case he requires to be tried by a court-martial, by that court-martial, or if he is on board one of Her Majesty's ships, by the commanding officer of that ship;

- (5.) Where a soldier at the time of his enlistment belonged to any part of the auxiliary forces, the sum required to make good any compensation for which at the time of his enlistment he was under stoppage of pay as a member of the auxiliary forces, and any sum which he is liable to pay by reason of his quitting the said part of the auxiliary forces upon his enlistment;
- (6.) Where a soldier's liquor ration is stopped by his commanding officer on board any ship, whether commissioned by Her Majesty or not, the sum equivalent to such ration, whether previously drawn by the soldier or not, not exceeding one penny a day for twenty-eight days;
- (7.) The sum required to pay a fine awarded by a court-martial, his commanding officer, or a civil court; and
- (8.) The sum required to pay any sum ordered by a Secretary of State to be paid as mentioned in this Act for the maintenance of his wife or child, or of any bastard child, or towards the cost of any relief given by way of loan to his wife or child:

Provided that—

(a.) The total amount of deductions from the ordinary pay due to a soldier in respect of the sums required to pay any compensation, fine, or sum awarded or ordered to be paid as aforesaid by a court-martial, commanding officer, or Secretary of State shall not exceed such sum as will leave to the soldier, after paying for his messing and washing, less than one penny a day; and

(b.) A person shall not be subjected in respect of any compensation, fine, or sum awarded or ordered to be paid as aforesaid to any deductions greater than is sufficient to make good the expenses, loss, damage, or destruction for which such compensation is awarded, or to pay the said sum.

139. Any deduction of pay authorized by this Act may be remitted in such manner and by such authority as may be from time to time provided by Royal Warrant, and subject to the provisions of any such warrant may be remitted by the Secretary of State.

140. (1.) Any sum authorized by this Act to be deducted from the ordinary pay of an officer or soldier may, without prejudice to any other mode of recovering the same, be deducted from the ordinary pay or from any sums due to such officer or soldier, in such manner, and when deducted or recovered may be appropriated in such manner as may be from time to time directed by any regulation or order of the Secretary of State.

(2.) And any such regulation or order may from time to time declare what shall be deemed for the purposes of the provisions of this Act relating to deductions from pay to constitute a day of absence or a day of imprisonment, so, however, that no time shall be so reckoned as a day unless the absence or imprisonment has lasted for six hours or upwards, whether wholly in one day or partly in one day and partly in another, or unless such absence prevented the absentee from fulfilling any military duty which was thereby thrown upon some other person.

(3.) In cases of doubt as to the proper issue of pay or the proper deduction from pay due to any officer or soldier, the pay may be withheld until Her Majesty's order respecting it has been signified through a Secretary of State, which order shall be final.

141. RULES OF PROCEDURE.

PART I.—ARREST AND TRIAL.

Arrest.

1. The special report of the necessity for further delay in ordering a court-martial to assemble for the trial of an officer or soldier required under section 45 of the Army Act, 1881, shall be made by means of a letter from the commanding officer of such officer or soldier reporting such necessity to the general or other officer commanding the district, garrison, or station.

Power of Commanding Officer.

2. Every commanding officer will take care that a person under his command, when charged with an offence, is not detained in custody for more than forty-eight hours after the committal of such person into custody is reported to him, without the charge being investigated (a), unless such investigation seems to him impracticable with due regard to the public service. Every case of detention beyond a period of forty-eight hours, and the reason thereof, shall be reported by the commanding officer to the general or other officer commanding the district, garrison, or station.

3. (A.) Every charge against a soldier will be heard in the presence of the accused. The accused will have full liberty to cross-examine any witness against him, and to call any witnesses and make any statement in his defence.

(B.) If on a charge of absence without leave exceeding seven days, the accused demands that the evidence against him be taken on oath (b), the oath will be administered to each witness by the investigating officer in the same form as provided for a court-martial (c), or, in the case of a witness allowed before a court-martial to make a solemn declaration (d), the like solemn declaration will be made before the investigating officer (c).

4. (A.) The commanding officer will dismiss a charge brought before him if in his opinion the evidence does not show that some offence under the Army Act, 1881, has been committed, or if, in his discretion, he thinks the charge ought not to proceed with (e).

(B.) At the conclusion of the hearing of a charge, if the commanding officer is of opinion that the charge ought to be proceeded with, he shall, without unnecessary delay, dispose of the case, either summarily if the accused is a soldier, or whether the accused is or not a soldier, by remanding him for trial by court-martial, or by reference to the proper superior military authority (f).

(a) Army Act, 1881, s. 45. (5.)

(b) Army Act, 1871, s. 46. (6.)

(c) See Rule 80.

(d) Army Act, 1881, s. 52. (4.)

(e) Army Act, 1881, s. 46. (1.)

(C.) If the accused is remanded for trial by court-martial, the commanding officer shall without unnecessary delay either issue an order for the assembly of a court-martial, or apply to the proper military authority to convene a court-martial, as the case requires; this delay and any delay in the reference to superior military authority should not ordinarily exceed thirty-six hours.

5. (A.) Where the accused is remanded by his commanding officer for trial by general or district court-martial the evidence of the witnesses who were present before the commanding officer shall be taken down in writing in a narrative form in the presence of the prisoner, who, if there is any variance between the evidence of any witness so taken down and the evidence previously given before the commanding officer, shall be allowed to put questions to the witness with reference to such variance; and such questions with the answers shall be added in writing to the evidence taken down.

(B.) The evidence of each witness when taken down as provided in (A.) shall be read over to him and shall be signed by him, or if he cannot write his name, shall be attested by his mark and witnessed. Any statement of the prisoner material to his defence shall be added in writing.

(C.) The above evidence and the statement, if any, shall be taken down before the commanding officer or such officer as he directs, and if the commanding officer thinks it desirable he may rehear the case and reconsider his decision and dispose of it as provided by Rule 4. (B.)

(D.) The evidence and statement (if any) taken in pursuance of this rule (in these rules referred to as the summary of evidence), or a true copy thereof, shall be laid before the court-martial before whom the prisoner is tried on the assembly of the court.

(E.) A true copy thereof shall, if the case is such as appears to the convening officer to render it desirable, be given to the prisoner gratis, and in any other case, shall, if the prisoner so requests, be given to him on payment of one penny for every seventy-two words; and where the prisoner has not obtained a copy of the summary of evidence the court should permit him to inspect the summary or the copy thereof laid before the court, or may order a copy thereof to be given to the prisoner gratis.

6. (A.) The term of imprisonment when awarded by a commanding officer in days shall begin on the day of the award. The term of imprisonment when awarded by a commanding officer in hours, shall begin at the hour when the prisoner is received at the provost prison or the public prison, military or civil, to which he is committed, or if he has not been sooner received into the prison, shall begin on the day after the day of the award at the hour fixed for the commitment and release of prisoners.

(B.) When the commanding officer has once awarded punishment for an offence he cannot afterwards increase that punishment for that offence.

7. (A.) A soldier who, in consequence of the summary award of his commanding officer will suffer any deduction from his ordinary pay, shall have the same right to be tried by a district court-martial as if he were ordered by his commanding officer to suffer that deduction.

(B.) If the prisoner will in consequence of the summary award of his commanding officer suffer any deduction from his ordinary pay, or is ordered by the summary award of his commanding officer to suffer imprisonment or to pay a fine, or to suffer any deduction from his ordinary pay, the commanding officer will inform the soldier of his right (a) to be tried by a district court-martial, and will ask him if he wishes to be so tried. If the commanding officer omits to ask the above question, the soldier may at any time on the same day before the hour fixed for the commitment and release of prisoners, claim his right to be tried by a court-martial.

(C.) If the soldier, upon the above question being put to him, or otherwise, claims his right to be tried by a court-martial, the commanding officer will remand him for trial by court-martial: the court, if the soldier demands it, must be a district court-martial, but otherwise may, if the commanding officer thinks fit, be a regimental court-martial.

(D.) Except as mentioned in this rule, a soldier has no right to claim a trial by court-martial instead of submitting to the summary award of his commanding officer, but the commanding officer may, if he thinks proper, vindicate the justice of his award finding the soldier guilty by remanding him for trial by court-martial instead of punishing him summarily, but he must do so before the soldier leaves his presence after the award is made.

8. (A.) Where an officer is charged with an offence under the Army Act, 1881, the investigation shall be held, and the evidence taken in his presence in writing, if he requires it, in the same manner, as nearly as circumstances admit, as is required by Rules 3 and 5 in the case of a soldier.

(B.) Where an officer is ordered for trial by court-martial without any such taking of evidence in his presence, an abstract of the evidence to be adduced shall be delivered to him gratis not less than twenty-four hours before his trial, and shall be laid before the court-martial on its assembly.

Framing Charges.

9. (A.) A charge-sheet contains the whole issue or issues to be tried by a court-martial at one time.

(B.) A charge means an accusation contained in a charge-sheet that a person amenable to military law has been guilty of an offence.

(C.) A charge-sheet may contain one charge or several charges.

10. Every charge-sheet will begin with the name and description of the person charged, and should state, in the case of an officer, his name, and rank, and corps (if any), and in the case of a soldier, his name, number, rank, and corps (if any), and where he does not at the time of the trial belong to the regular forces, should show by the description of him or directly by an express averment that he is amenable to military law in respect of the offence charged.

11. (A.) Each charge should state one offence only, and in no case should an offence be described in the alternative in the same charge.

(a) Army Act, 1881, s. 46, (8).

- (B.) Each charge should be divided into two parts—
 - (1.) The statement of the offence; and
 - (2.) The statement of the particulars of the act, neglect, or omission constituting the offence.
- (C.) The offence should be stated, if not a civil offence, in the words of the Army Act, 1881 (a), and if a civil offence, in such words as sufficiently describe that offence, but not necessarily in technical words.
- (D.) The particulars should state such circumstances respecting the alleged offence as will enable the accused to know what act, neglect, or omission is intended to be proved against him as such offence.
- (E.) The particulars in one charge may be framed wholly or partly by a reference to the particulars in another charge, and in that case so much of the latter particulars as is so referred to shall be deemed to form part of the first-mentioned charge as well as of the other charge.
- (F.) Where it is intended to prove any facts in respect of which any deduction from ordinary pay can be awarded as a consequence of the offence charged, the particulars should state those facts.

12. (A.) A charge-sheet shall not be invalid by reason only of any mistake in the name or description of the person charged, if he does not object to the charge-sheet during the trial, and it is not shown that injustice has been done to the person charged.

(B.) In the construction of a charge-sheet or charge, there shall be presumed in favour of supporting the same every proposition, which may reasonably be presumed to be impliedly included, though not expressed, therein.

Prisoner's Preparation for Defence.

13. A prisoner for whose trial a court-martial has been ordered to assemble shall be afforded proper opportunity of preparing his defence, and shall be allowed free communication with his witnesses and with any friend or legal adviser whom he may wish to consult.

14. (A.) The prisoner before he is arraigned should be informed by an officer of every charge on which he is to be tried; and also that, on his giving the names of any witnesses whom he desires to call in his defence, reasonable steps will be taken for procuring their attendance, and those steps shall be taken accordingly: the interval between his being so informed and his arraignment should not be less, in the case of a regimental court-martial, than eighteen, and in the case of any other court-martial, than twenty-four hours.

(B.) The officer at the time of so informing the prisoner should give the prisoner a copy of the charge-sheet, and, where the prisoner is a soldier, should, if necessary, explain the charge-sheet and charges to him, and should also, if he is illiterate, read the charges to him.

(C.) A list of the names, rank, and corps (if any) of the president and officers who are to form the court, and where officers in waiting are named also of those officers, should, as soon as the president and officers are named, be delivered to the prisoner if he desires it.

(D.) If it appears to the court that the prisoner is liable to be prejudicted by any non-compliance with this rule, the court shall take steps, and if necessary adjourn, to avoid the prisoner being so prejudiced.

15. Any number of prisoners may be tried together for an offence charged to have been committed by them collectively, but in such case notice of the intention to try the prisoners together should be given to each prisoner at the time of his being informed of the charge, and any prisoner may claim, either by notice to the authority convening the court, or, when arraigned before the court, by notice to the court, to be tried separately, on the ground that the evidence of one or more of the other prisoners proposed to be tried together with him will be material to his defence; the convening authority or court, if satisfied that such evidence will be material, and if the nature of the charge admits of it, shall allow the claim, and such prisoner shall be tried separately.

Convening of Court-martial.

16. A regimental court-martial shall be ordered to assemble as soon as seems to the convening officer practicable—having regard to Rule 14 (A.)—after the completion of the investigation by the commanding officer into the charge which the court-martial is to try (a).

17. (A.) An officer before convening a court-martial should first satisfy himself that the charges to be tried by the court are for offences within the meaning of the Army Act, 1881, and that the evidence justifies a trial on those charges, and if not so satisfied should order the release of the prisoner, or refer the case to superior authority.

(B.) He should also satisfy himself that the case is a proper one to be tried by the description of court-martial which he proposes to convene.

(C.) If more than fifteen days in the United Kingdom, or more than thirty days elsewhere, elapse between the time when an officer having power to convene a general or district court-martial receives an application for a court-martial and the date at which the case is disposed of, either by the assembly of a general or district court-martial, or otherwise, the officer shall report the case, and the reasons for the delay, to the commander-in-chief.

(D.) The officer convening a court-martial shall appoint or detail the officers to form the court, and may also appoint or detail such waiting officers as he thinks expedient.

(E.) The officer convening a court-martial shall send to the officer appointed president the original charge-sheet on which the prisoner is to be tried, and the summary or abstract of evidence.

18. (A.) If before the prisoner is arraigned the full number of officers detailed are not available to serve, by reason of non-eligibility, disqualification, challenge, or otherwise, the court should ordinarily adjourn for the purpose of fresh members being appointed, and the president should report the circumstances to the convening authority; but if the court are of opinion that in the interests of justice and for the good of the service it is inexpedient so to adjourn, they may, if not reduced in number below the legal minimum (a), proceed, recording their reasons for so doing.

(B.) If the court adjourn for the purpose of the appointment of a new president (b) or of fresh members, whether under these rules or otherwise, the convening officer may, if he thinks fit, convene another court.

19. (A.) An officer is not eligible for serving on a court-martial if he is not subject to military law.

(B.) An officer is disqualified for serving on a court-martial on a prisoner if such officer—

- (i.) Is the officer who convened the court; or
- (ii.) Is the prosecutor or a witness for the prosecution; or
- (iii.) Investigated the charges before trial, or was a member of a court of inquiry respecting the matters on which the charges against the prisoner are founded; or
- (iv.) Is the commanding officer of the prisoner or of the corps or battalion to which the prisoner belongs; or
- (v.) Has a personal interest in the case (c).

(C.) An officer is not eligible to serve on a court-martial, unless he has held a commission during not less than the following periods next preceding the day appointed for the assembling of the court; that is to say:—

- (i.) if it is a regimental court-martial, one whole year;
- (ii.) if it is a district court-martial, two whole years;
- (iii.) if it is a general court-martial, three whole years (d).

20. (A.) A general or district court-martial shall, as far as seems to the convening officer practicable, be composed of officers of different corps, and in no case shall be composed exclusively of officers of the same regiment of cavalry or the same battalion of infantry, unless the convening officer states in the order convening the court that, in his opinion, other officers are not, having due regard to the public service, available, and also, if he belongs to the same regiment of cavalry or battalion of infantry as the prisoner, that an order to convene a court composed partly of other officers cannot be obtained from superior authority within a reasonable time.

(B.) In the case of a court-martial for the trial of a prisoner belonging to the auxiliary and not to the regular forces, unless the convening officer states in the order convening the court that in his opinion it is not (having due regard to the public service) practicable, two members at least of the court should belong to the auxiliary forces, and one or both of those members of the court should belong to the branch of the auxiliary forces to which the prisoner belongs.

21. (A.) In the case of a general court-martial five at least of the members must not be below the rank of captain (e).

(a) See Army Act, 1881, s. 48. (5).

(b) See Army Act, 1881, ss. 51. (3), 53. (2).

(c) See Army Act, 1881, s. 50 (2) (3). The corps to which an officer belongs does not (except under Rule 20) affect his eligibility to serve on a court-martial. See Army Act, 1881, s. 50 (1).

(d) See Army Act, 1881, s. 48.

(e) See Army Act, 1881, s. 48 (3), (7).

(B.) The members of a court-martial for the trial of an officer shall be of an equal, if not superior, rank to that officer, unless, in the opinion of the convening officer, to be stated in the order convening the court, and to be conclusive, officers of that rank are not, having due regard to the public service, available, and in no case shall an officer under the rank of captain be a member of a court-martial for the trial of a field officer (a).

Procedure at Trial.—Constitution of Court.

22. (A.) On the court assembling (b), the order convening the court shall be read, and also the names, rank, and corps of the officers appointed to serve on the court, and it shall be the first duty of the court to satisfy themselves that the court is legally constituted; that is to say,

- (i.) That so far as the court can ascertain, the court has been convened in accordance with the Army Act, 1881, and these Rules (c);
- (ii.) That the court consists of a number of officers not less than the legal minimum (d), and save as mentioned in Rule 18 not less than the number detailed;
- (iii.) That each of the officers so assembled is eligible and not disqualified (e) for serving on that court-martial;
- (iv.) That the president is of the required rank (f) and duly appointed; and
- (v.) In the case of a general court-martial that the officers are of the required rank (g).

(B.) The court should further, if it is a general or district court-martial to which a judge advocate has been appointed, ascertain that the judge advocate is duly appointed, and is not disqualified for acting at that court-martial (h).

(C.) The court, if not satisfied on the above matters, should report their opinion to the convening authority, and may adjourn for that purpose.

23. (A.) The court, when satisfied on the above matters, should satisfy themselves (i) in respect of each charge about to be brought before them,—

- (i.) That it appears to be laid against a person amenable to military law, and to the jurisdiction of the court (j); and
- (ii.) That each charge discloses an offence under the Army Act, 1881, and is framed in accordance with these rules (k), and is so explicit as to enable the prisoner readily to understand what he has to answer.

(B.) The court, if not satisfied on the above matters, should report their opinion to the convening authority, and may adjourn for that purpose.

Procedure at Trial.—Challenge and Swearing.

24. When the court have satisfied themselves as to the above facts the prosecutor, who must be a person subject to military law, should take his place, and the court shall cause the prisoner to be brought before the court (a).

25. (A.) The court, upon the prisoner being brought before them, shall ascertain that the court is constituted of officers to whom the prisoner makes no reasonable objection (a) (b).

(B.) The prisoner has no right to object to the prosecutor or judge advocate.

(C.) The prisoner shall state the names of all the officers to whom he objects before any objection is disposed of.

(D.) The prisoner may call any person to give evidence in support of his objection.

(E.) If more than one officer is objected to, the objection to each officer will be disposed of separately, and the objection to the lowest in rank will be disposed of first; and on an objection to an officer, all the other officers present shall vote on the disposal of such objection, notwithstanding that objections have been made to any of those officers.

(F.) When an objection to an officer is allowed, that officer shall forthwith retire and take no further part in the proceedings.

(G.) Where an officer objected to (other than the president) retires and there are any officers in waiting, the vacancy shall be forthwith filled by one of the officers in waiting being directed to serve in lieu of the retiring officer. If there is no officer in waiting available the court will proceed as directed by Rule 18.

(H.) The eligibility, absence of disqualification, and freedom from objection of an officer filling a vacancy, including that of president, will be ascertained by the court as in the case of other officers appointed to serve on the court.

26. As soon as the court is constituted with the proper number of officers who are not objected to, or the objections to whom have been overruled, the oath (c) shall be administered to each member of the court as follows (d):

(i.) If there is a judge advocate the oath shall be administered by him, to the president first, and afterwards to the other members of the court:

(ii.) If there is no judge advocate the oath shall be administered by the president to the other members of the court, and shall be administered to the president by any member of the court already sworn (a).

27. After the members of the court are all sworn (a) an oath shall be administered to the following persons, or to such of them as are present at the court-martial, by the president, or by some other member of the court, or, except in the case of the judge advocate, by the judge advocate, if present, in the following form (b):

(A.) The form of oath for the judge advocate shall be :

"You do swear that you will not, unless it is necessary for the due discharge of your official duties, divulge the sentence of this court-martial until it is duly confirmed ; and that you will not on any account, at any time whatsoever, disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of this court-martial, unless thereunto required in due course of law. So help you God."

(B.) The form of oath for an officer attending for the purpose of instruction shall be :

"You do swear that you will not divulge the sentence of this court-martial until it is duly confirmed ; and that you will not on any account, at any time whatsoever, disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of this court-martial, unless thereunto required in due course of law. So help you God."

(C.) The form of oath for a shorthand writer shall be :

"You do swear that you will truly take down to the best of your power the evidence to be given before this court-martial and such other matters as you may be required, and will when required deliver to the court a true transcript of the same. So help you God."

(D.) The form of oath for an interpreter shall be :

"You do swear that you will to the best of your ability truly interpret and translate, as you shall be required to do, touching the matter before this court-martial. So help you God."

28. Where a person is permitted to make a solemn declaration instead of being sworn (c), the form of declaration shall be as follows ; that is to say,

(A.) In the case of the president or other member of the court—

I do solemnly promise and declare that I will well and truly try the prisoner before the court according to the evidence, and that I will duly administer justice according to the Army Act now in force, without partiality, favour, or affection; and I do further solemnly promise and declare that I will not divulge the sentence of the court until it is duly confirmed; and further that I will not on any account, at any time whatsoever, disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of this court-martial, unless thereunto required in due course of law.

(a) A solemn declaration may be substituted under the circumstances specified in Army Act, 1881, s. 52. See Rule 28.

(b) See Army Act, 1881, s. 52 (2).

(c) A solemn declaration may be substituted under the circumstances specified in Army Act, 1881, s. 52 (4).

(B.) In the case of the judge advocate—

I do solemnly promise and declare that I will not, unless it is necessary for the due discharge of my official duties, divulge the sentence of this court-martial until it is duly confirmed; and that I will not on any account, at any time whatsoever, disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of this court-martial, unless thereunto required in due course of law.

(C.) In the case of an officer attending for the purpose of instruction—

I do solemnly promise and declare that I will not divulge the sentence of this court-martial until it is duly confirmed; and that I will not on any account, at any time whatsoever, disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of this court-martial, unless thereunto required in due course of law.

(D.) In the case of a shorthand writer—

I do solemnly promise and declare that I will truly take down to the best of my power the evidence to be given before this court-martial, and when required will deliver to the court a true transcript of the same.

(E.) In the case of an interpreter—

I do solemnly promise and declare that I will to the best of my ability faithfully and truly interpret and translate as I shall be required to do touching the matter now before this court-martial.

(F.) The declaration shall be taken before some person authorized by these rules to administer the oath.

29. Where the oath is administered to or the declaration taken by the members of a court who are about to try several prisoners, the plural shall be substituted for the singular wherever required.

30. An oath may be administered in such form and with such ceremonies as the person to be sworn declares to be, according to his religion, binding on his conscience, and the words "You do swear" and "So help me God" may be omitted or varied for the purpose.

Prosecution, Defence, and Summing up.

31. (A.) After the members of the court and other persons are sworn as above mentioned (a) the prisoner shall be arraigned on the charges against him (b).

(B.) The charges upon which the prisoner is arraigned will be read to him, and he will be required to plead separately to each charge.

32. The prisoner, when required to plead to any charge, may object to the charge (b) on the ground that it does not disclose an offence under the Army Act, 1881, or is not in accordance with these rules.

33. (A.) At any time during the trial if it appears to the court that there is any mistake in the name or description of the prisoner in the charge-sheet, the court may amend the charge-sheet so as to correct that mistake.

(B.) If on the trial of any charge it appears to the court, at any time

(a) See Rules 26 to 28.

(b) See Second Appendix, Form of Proceedings, par. 3.

before they have begun to examine the witnesses, that in the interests of justice any addition to or omission from or alteration in the charge is required, they may report their opinion to the convening authority, and may adjourn, and the convening authority may either direct a new trial to be commenced, or amend the charge, and order the trial to proceed with such amended charge after due notice to the prisoner.

34. (A.) The prisoner, before pleading to a charge, may offer a special plea to the general jurisdiction of the court (a), and if he does so, and the court consider that anything stated in such plea shows that the court have not jurisdiction, they shall receive any evidence offered in support, together with any evidence offered by the prosecutor in disproof or qualification thereof, and any address by the prisoner and reply by the prosecutor in reference thereto.

(B.) If the court overrule the special plea they should proceed with the trial.

(C.) If the court allow the special plea, they shall record their decision and the reasons for it, and report it to the convening authority and adjourn; such decision shall not require any confirmation, and the convening authority shall either forthwith convene another court for the trial of the prisoner or order the prisoner to be released.

(D.) If the court are in doubt as to the validity of the plea they may refer the matter to the convening authority, and may adjourn for that purpose, or may record a special decision with respect to such plea and proceed with the trial.

35. (A.) If no special plea to the general jurisdiction of the court is offered, or if such plea, being offered, is overruled, the prisoner's plea—"Guilty" or "Not guilty" (or if he refuses to plead, or does not plead intelligibly either one or the other, a plea of "Not guilty")—shall be recorded on each charge (a).

(B.) Before recording a plea of "Guilty" the court should ascertain that the prisoner understands the nature of the charge to which he has pleaded "Guilty," and should inform him of the general effect of that plea, and in particular of the difference in the procedure which will be made by that plea.

36. (A.) If the plea of guilty is recorded on a charge, the court before the finding shall (b) receive any statement which the prisoner desires to make in reference to the charge, and if from such statement or otherwise it appears to the court that the prisoner did not understand the effect of his plea of guilty, the court shall alter the record and enter a plea of not guilty, and proceed with the trial accordingly, but if the plea of guilty is not so altered, the court will find the prisoner guilty on the said charge. The court should receive the said statement and record the said finding when the findings on the other charges in the same charge-sheet are recorded.

(B.) If there are other charges in the same charge-sheet to which the plea recorded is "Not guilty," the trial will proceed with respect to those other charges, but if the other charges are alternative charges the court may proceed with respect to all the charges as if he had not pleaded guilty to any charge, or may, instead of trying them, enter a finding of "Not guilty" on each alternative charge to which the prisoner has not pleaded guilty.

(a) See Second Appendix, Form of Proceedings, par. 3.

(b) See Second Appendix, Form of Proceedings, par. 4.

(C.) If a plea of "Guilty" is recorded and the trial does not proceed on any other charges, a general or district court-martial, after recording the finding on the plea of "Guilty," should (a) read the summary of evidence or abstract of evidence and annex it to the proceedings, and if there is no summary or abstract of evidence, should proceed as directed by (E.).

(D.) After the summary or abstract of evidence is read, the prisoner may call witnesses as to his character, and may make a statement in mitigation of punishment, but no other address will be allowed.

(E.) If a plea of "Guilty" is recorded and the trial does not proceed on any other charges a regimental court-martial, after recording the finding on the plea of "Guilty," should (a) take and record sufficient evidence to enable them to determine the sentence and the confirming officer to know all the circumstances connected with the offence. This evidence will be taken in like manner as is directed by these rules in the case of a plea of "Not guilty" (b) (c). The prisoner may call witnesses as to his character, and may make a statement in mitigation of punishment, but no other address will be allowed.

(F.) Where the prisoner at any court-martial (general, district, or regimental) states anything in mitigation of punishment which, in the opinion of the court, requires to be proved, and would, if proved, affect the amount of punishment, the court may permit the prisoner to call witnesses to prove the same.

37. The prisoner may, if he thinks fit, at any time during the trial withdraw his plea of "Not guilty," and plead "Guilty," and in such case the court will at once, subject to a compliance with Rule 35 (B.), record a plea of "Guilty," and shall, so far as is necessary, proceed in manner directed by Rule 36.

38. After the plea of "Not guilty" to any charge is recorded the trial will proceed as follows : (b).

(A.) The prosecutor may, if he desires, make an opening address.

(B.) The evidence for the prosecution shall then be taken.

(C.) If it should be necessary for the prosecutor to give evidence for the prosecution he should give it after the delivery of his address, and he must be sworn, and give his evidence in detail.

(D.) He may be cross-examined by the prisoner, and afterwards may make any statement which might be made by a witness on re-examination.

39. (1.) At the close of the evidence for the prosecution, the prisoner will be asked if he intends to call any witnesses other than witnesses as to character (b).

(2.) If the prisoner does not state that he intends to call any witnesses other than witnesses as to character, the procedure will be as follows (a):—

- (A.) The prosecutor may address the court a second time, for the purpose of summing up the evidence for the prosecution.
- (B.) The prisoner will be asked if he has anything to say in his defence, and may address the court in his defence.
- (C.) The prisoner may call witnesses as to his character.
- (D.) The prosecutor may produce, in reply to the witnesses as to character, proof of former convictions and entries in the defaulters' book, but he may not again address the court.

40. If the prisoner states that he intends to call witnesses other than witnesses as to character the procedure will be as follows (b):

- (A.) The prisoner will be asked if he has anything to say in his defence and may address the court in his defence.
- (B.) The prisoner may call his witnesses, including witnesses as to character.
- (C.) After the evidence of all the witnesses for the defence has been taken the prisoner may again address the court, and the time at which such second address is allowed is in these rules referred to as the time for the second address of the prisoner.
- (D.) The prosecutor will be entitled to address the court in reply.

41. (A.) The judge advocate, if any, will, unless he and the court think a summing-up unnecessary, sum up in open court the whole case to the court.

(B.) After the judge advocate has spoken no other address shall be allowed.

Finding and Sentence.

42. (A.) The court will deliberate on their finding in closed court (c).

(B.) The opinion of each member of the court will be taken separately on each charge (d).

43. (A.) The finding on every charge will be recorded (e) (f), and, except as mentioned in these rules, will be recorded simply as a finding of "guilty," or of "not guilty," or of "Not guilty and honourably acquit him of the same" (g).

(B.) Where the court are of opinion, as regards any charge, that the facts which they find to be proved in evidence differ materially from the facts alleged in the statement of particulars in the charge, but are nevertheless sufficient to prove the offence stated in the charge, and that the difference is not so material as to have prejudiced the prisoner in his defence, they may, instead of a finding of "not guilty," record a special finding (a).

(c.) The special finding may find the prisoner guilty on a charge subject to the statement of exceptions or variations annexed to the finding (a).

(d.) Where the court are of opinion, as regards any charge, that the facts proved do not disclose an offence under the Army Act, 1881, the court will acquit the prisoner of that charge (a) (b).

(e.) If the court doubt, as regards any charge, whether the facts proved show the prisoner to be guilty or not of an offence under the Army Act, 1881, they may before recording a finding on that charge refer to the confirming authority for an opinion, and, if necessary, adjourn for that purpose (a).

(f.) Where there are alternative charges, and the facts proved appear to the court not to constitute the offence mentioned in any of those alternative charges, the court shall record a finding of not guilty on that charge; but if the court think that the facts so proved constitute one of the offences stated in two or more of the alternative charges, but doubt which of those offences the facts do in law constitute, then they may either before recording a finding on those charges refer to the confirming authority for an opinion, and if necessary adjourn for the purpose, or they may record a special finding (a) stating the facts which they find to be proved, and stating that they doubt whether those facts constitute in law the offence in such one or another of the alternative charges as are specified in the finding.

44. (A.) If the finding on each of the charges in a charge-sheet is "Not guilty," the president will date and sign the proceedings, the findings will be announced in open court, and the prisoner will be released in respect of those charges (b).

(B.) The proceedings shall then, upon being signed by the judge advocate (if any), be transmitted at once in like manner as is directed by these rules in the case where the findings require confirmation (c).

45. (A.) If the finding on any charge is guilty, then, for the guidance of the court in determining their sentence, and of the confirming authority in considering the sentence, the court, before deliberating on their sentence, may (d) take evidence of and record the prisoner's character, age, service, and rank, and the length of time he has been in arrest or in confinement on any previous sentence, and any deferred pay, military decoration, or military reward of which he may be in possession or to which he is entitled, and which the court can sentence him to forfeit (e).

(B.) Evidence on the above matters may be given by a witness verifying a statement which contains a summary of the entries in the regimental books respecting that prisoner, and identifying the prisoner as the person referred to in that summary.

(C.) Evidence on the part of the prosecution upon the above matters should not be given by a member of the court.

(D.) The prisoner may cross-examine any such witness, and may call witnesses to rebut such evidence, and if the prisoner so requests, the regimental books, or a duly certified copy of the material entries therein shall be produced, and if the prisoner alleges that the summary is in any respect not in accordance with the regimental books, or such certified copy, as the case may be, the court shall compare the summary with those books or copy, and if they find it is not in accordance therewith, shall cause the summary to be corrected accordingly.

46. Where the court desire to sentence an officer to forfeit seniority of rank they may sentence him to take rank and precedence in his corps, or in the army, or in both, as if his appointment to the rank or ranks held by him and specified in the sentence bore the date of some day or days specified in the sentence and later than the actual date of his said appointment (b).

47. The court shall award one sentence (c) in respect of all the offences of which the prisoner is found guilty, and such sentence shall be deemed to be awarded in respect of the offence in each charge in respect of which it can be legally given, and not to be awarded in respect of any offence in a charge in respect of which it cannot be legally given.

48. (A.) If the court make a recommendation to mercy (c), they shall give their reasons for such recommendation.

(B.) If the court recommend any restoration of service under section 79 of the Army Act, 1881, the recommendation, with the reasons for it, shall be entered in the proceedings (c).

(C.) The number of votes by which a recommendation mentioned in this rule, or any question relative thereto, is adopted or rejected, may be entered in the proceedings.

49. Upon the court awarding the sentence, the president shall date and sign the sentence (c), and such signature shall authenticate the whole of the proceedings, and the proceedings upon being signed by the judge advocate, if any, shall be at once transmitted for confirmation (d.)

Confirmation and Revision.

50. (A.) In the case of a finding which does not require confirmation, the confirming officer shall not make any remarks in the proceedings; but if he thinks that anything in the case requires further attention, he shall report it to superior military authority as directed by Her Majesty's Regulations.

(b) See Army Act, 1881, s. 44 (f.)

(c) See Second Appendix, Form of Proceedings, par. 10.

(d) See Rule 95.

(B.) In the case of findings or sentences which require confirmation (a) the confirming authority—

- (1.) may direct the reassembly of the court for revision of the finding and sentence, or either of them, stating the reasons for such revision; and
- (2.) upon receiving the proceedings, whether original or revised, may confirm or refuse confirmation, and may add any remarks on the case which such authority may think fit, and such confirmation and remarks shall be entered in and form part of the proceedings.

51. (A.) Where the finding or sentence is sent back for revision, the court should reassemble in closed court (b), and shall not receive any further evidence (c).

(B.) Where the finding is sent back for revision (d), and the court do not adhere to their former finding, they shall revoke the finding and sentence, and record a new finding, and, if such new finding involves a sentence, pass sentence afresh (e).

(C.) Where the sentence alone is sent back for revision, the court shall not revise the finding.

(D.) After revision the president shall date and sign the decision of the court (d), and the proceedings, upon being signed by the judge advocate, if any, shall be at once transmitted for confirmation (e).

52. The charge, finding (f), sentence, and confirmation of a court-martial shall be promulgated in such manner as the confirming authority may direct, and if no direction is given, according to the custom of the service.

53. (A.) Where a sentence has been awarded by court-martial in respect of offences in several charges, and the confirming authority confirms the finding on some but not on all of such charges, that authority shall take into consideration the fact of such non-confirmation, and shall, if it seems just, mitigate, remit, or commute the punishment awarded according as seems just, having regard to the offences in the charges, the findings on which are confirmed.

(B.) Where a sentence has been awarded by a court-martial in respect of offences in several charges, and has been confirmed, and any one of such charges, or the finding thereon, is found to be invalid, the authority having power to remit or commute the punishment awarded by such sentence shall take into consideration the fact of such invalidity, and if it seems just, mitigate, remit, or commute the punishment awarded according as seems just, having regard to the offences in the charges which, with the findings thereon, are not invalid, and such punishment shall be as valid as if it had been originally awarded only in respect of those offences.

(a) See Second Appendix, Form of Proceedings, par. 12.

(b) See Rule 62.

(c) See Army Act, 1881, s. 54 (2).

(d) See Second Appendix, Form of Proceedings, par. 11.

(e) See Rule 95.

(f) See Army Act, 1881, s. 53 (9), s. 54 (3).

54. (A.) Where a special finding has been recorded in relation to alternative charges under Rule 43 (F.), and the confirming authority is of opinion that the facts found by such special finding constitute in law the offence charged by any of such alternative charges, such authority may (a) confirm the finding, and in that case shall declare that the finding amounts to a finding of guilty on that charge, but if it is afterwards declared by any authority having power to remit or commute the punishment awarded that the said facts constitute in law the offence charged in one of the other alternative charges, then the confirming authority, or such other authority as aforesaid, may declare (a) that the finding amounts to a finding of guilty on that alternative charge; and the finding shall be a valid finding of guilty on the charge specified in that behalf in the declaration made on confirmation, or, in case of a subsequent declaration, in that subsequent declaration.

(B.) The sentence awarded in the case of any such special finding may likewise be confirmed, subject to this proviso, that if the offence in one of such alternative charges involves a higher punishment, or is otherwise graver, than the offence in the charge of which the prisoner is found to be guilty under the terms of any declaration mentioned in (A.), the authority making the declaration, or some other authority having power to remit or commute the punishment awarded, shall remit or commute the punishment according as seems just, having regard to the last-mentioned offence; and such punishment shall be as valid as if it had been originally awarded in respect of the last-mentioned offence.

55. (A.) If the sentence of a court-martial is informally expressed, the confirming authority may, in confirming the sentence, vary the form so that it shall be properly expressed; and if the punishment awarded by the sentence is in excess of the punishment authorized by law, the confirming authority may vary the sentence so that the punishment shall not be in excess of the punishment authorized by law; and the confirming authority may confirm the finding and the sentence as so varied of such court-martial.

(B.) Whenever it appears that a court-martial had jurisdiction to try a prisoner, and that the prisoner was charged with some offence or offences under the Army Act, 1881, and was shown by legal evidence to have been guilty of the offence or one of the offences charged, the finding in respect of the offence or offences of which he is so shown to be guilty and the sentence may be confirmed, and if so confirmed shall be valid, notwithstanding any deviation from these rules or any defect or objection, technical or other, unless it appears that any injustice has been done to the prisoner; but nothing in this rule shall relieve an officer from any responsibility for any wilful or negligent disregard of any of these rules.

Insanity.

56. (A.) Where the court find, either that the prisoner is unfit, by reason of insanity, to take his trial, or that he committed the offence with which he is charged but was insane at the time of the commission thereof, the president shall date and sign the finding, and the proceedings upon being signed by the judge advocate, if any, shall be at once transmitted for confirmation (a).

(B.) If such finding is not confirmed, the prisoner may be tried by the same or another court-martial for the offence with which he was originally charged (b).

(C.) Where such finding is confirmed, then, until the directions of Her Majesty as to the disposal of such prisoner are known, or in the case of a prisoner unfit to take his trial until any earlier time at which such prisoner is fit to take his trial, the prisoner shall be confined in such manner as may in the opinion of the proper military authority be best calculated to keep him securely without unnecessary harshness, as he is not to be considered as a criminal, but as a person labouring under a disease (b).

General Provisions as to Proceedings of Court.

57. The members of a court-martial will take their seats according to their army rank, except that in the case of a regimental court-martial consisting entirely of officers of the same corps they will take their seats according to their rank in that corps.

58. (A.) The president is responsible for the trial being conducted in proper order and in accordance with the Army Act, 1881, and these rules, and will take care that everything is conducted in a manner befitting a court of justice (c).

(B.) It is the duty of the president to see that justice is administered, and that the prisoner has a fair trial, and that he does not suffer any disadvantage in consequence of his position as a prisoner, or of his ignorance or of his incapacity to examine or cross-examine witnesses or otherwise (d).

59. (A.) It is the duty of the prosecutor to assist the court in the administration of justice, to behave impartially, to bring the whole of the transaction before the court, and not to take any unfair advantage of, or suppress any evidence in favour of, the prisoner.

(B.) The court may stop the prosecutor in referring to any matter not relevant to the charge then before the court, or any matter which the court is not investigating, and it is the duty of the court to restrain any undue violence of language or want of fairness or moderation on the part of the prosecutor.

(C.) The court should allow great latitude to the prisoner in making his defence; he must abstain from any remarks contemptuous or disrespectful towards the court and from coarse and insulting language towards others, but he may for the purpose of his defence impeach the evidence and the motives of the witnesses and prosecutor, and charge other persons with blame and even criminality, subject if he does so to any liability to further proceedings to which he would otherwise be subject. The court may caution the prisoner as to the irrelevance of his defence, but should not, unless in special cases, stop his defence solely on the ground of such irrelevance.

(a) See Rule 95 and Second Appendix, Form of Proceedings, par. 9.

(b) See Army Act, 1881, s. 130.

(c) See Army Act, 1881, ss. 28, 126.

(d) See Rule 101 (G).

60. Where two or more prisoners are tried together and any evidence is tendered by any one or more of the prisoners, the evidence and addresses on the part of all the prisoners will be taken before the prosecutor replies, and the prosecutor will make one address only in reply as regards all the prisoners.

61. (A.) Where the convening officer directs any charges against a prisoner to be inserted in different charge-sheets, the prisoner shall be arraigned, and until after the finding tried, upon each charge-sheet separately, and accordingly the procedure in Rules 31 to 43, both inclusive, shall, until after the finding, be followed in respect of each charge-sheet, as if it contained the whole of the charges against the prisoner.

(C.) When the court have tried the prisoner upon all the charge-sheets they shall, in the case of the finding being "Not guilty," on all the charges, proceed as directed by Rule 44, and, in case of the finding on any one or more of the charges being "Guilty," proceed as directed by Rules 36 and 45 to 49, both inclusive, in like manner in each case, as if all the charges in the different charge-sheets had been contained in one charge-sheet, and the sentence passed shall be of the same effect as if all the charges had been contained in one charge-sheet.

(D.) If the convening officer directs that, in the event of the conviction of a prisoner upon a charge in any charge-sheet, he need not be tried upon the subsequent charge-sheets, the court in such event may, without trying the prisoner upon any of the subsequent charge-sheets, proceed as before directed by (C.)

(E.) Where a charge-sheet contains more than one charge, the prisoner may, before pleading, claim to be tried separately in respect of any charge or charges in that charge-sheet on the ground that he will be embarrassed in his defence if he is not so tried separately, and in such case the court, unless they think his claim unreasonable, shall arraign and try the prisoner in like manner as if the convening officer had inserted the said charge or charges in different charge-sheets.

(F.) If the prisoner pleads "Guilty" to a charge in a charge-sheet, and the trial does not proceed—as mentioned in Rule 36 (B.)—with respect to the other charges in that charge-sheet, the court shall, subject to the directions of the convening officer, proceed to try the prisoner on the charges in the next charge-sheet before they proceed as directed by Rule 36 (C.), (D.), (E.), and (F.)

62. (A.) When a court-martial sit in closed court on any deliberation amongst the members or otherwise, no person shall be present except the members of the court, the judge advocate, and any officers under instruction; and the court may either retire or may cause the place where they sit to be cleared of all other persons not entitled to be present (a).

(B.) Except as above mentioned all the proceedings, including the view of any place (b), shall be in open court and in the presence of the prisoner.

(a) See Army Act, 1881, s. 53 (5).

(b) See Army Act, 1881, s. 53 (7).

63. (A.) A court-martial may sit at such times and for such period between the hours of six in the morning and six in the afternoon as may be directed by the proper superior military authority, and so far as no such direction extends as the court from time to time determine.

(B.) If the court consider it necessary to continue a trial after six in the afternoon they may do so, and if they do so, should record in the proceedings their reason for so doing.

(C.) In cases requiring an immediate example, or when the convening officer, or the general or other officer commanding any body of troops, certifies under his hand that it is expedient for the public service, trials may be held at any hour.

(D.) If the court, or the convening officer, or other superior military authority think that military exigencies or the interests of discipline require the court to sit on Sunday, Christmas Day, or Good Friday, the court may sit accordingly, but otherwise the court should not sit on any of those days.

64. (A.) When a court is once assembled and the prisoner has been arraigned, the court should (but subject to the provisions of the Army Act, 1881, and of these rules as to adjournment) continue the trial from day to day and sit for a reasonable period on every day unless it appears to the court that an adjournment is necessary for the ends of justice, or that such continuance is impracticable.

(B.) A court-martial in the absence either of a president, or of a judge advocate (if a judge advocate has been appointed for that court-martial), shall not proceed, and if necessary shall adjourn.

(C.) The senior officer on the spot may also, for military exigencies, adjourn or prolong the adjournment of the court.

(D.) Any adjournment may be made from place to place as well as from time to time. If the time to which the adjournment is made is not specified the adjournment will be until further orders from the proper military authority; if the place to which such adjournment is made is not specified the adjournment will be to the same place or to such place as may be specified in further orders from the proper military authority (a) (b).

65. (A.) Where in consequence of anything arising while the court are sitting the court are unable by reason of dissolution (as specified in section 53 of the Army Act, 1881, or otherwise), or of the absence of the president, to continue the trial, the president or in his absence the senior member present will immediately report the facts to the convening authority (b).

(B.) Where a court-martial is dissolved before the finding or in the case of a finding of guilty before the sentence, the proceedings are null and the prisoner may be tried before another court-martial.

66. In case of the death of the prisoner or of such illness of the prisoner as renders it impossible to continue the trial, the court will ascertain the fact of the death or illness by evidence and record the same and adjourn and transmit the proceedings to the convening authority (c).

(a) See Army Act, 1881, s. 53 (6).

(b) See Second Appendix, Form of Proceedings, par. 5.

(c) See Army Act, 1881, s. 53 (3).

67. (A.) A member of a court who has been absent while any part of the evidence on the trial of a prisoner is taken can take no further part in the trial by that court of that prisoner, but the court will not be affected except as provided by section fifty-three of the Army Act, 1881.

(B.) An officer cannot be added to a court-martial after the prisoner has been arraigned.

68. (A.) Every member of a court must give his opinion on every question which the court has to decide, and must give his opinion as to the sentence, notwithstanding that he has given his opinion in favour of acquittal.

(B.) Subject to the provisions of the Army Act, 1881, (a) every question shall be determined by an absolute majority of the opinions of the members of the court, and in the case of an equality of opinions the president's second or casting vote will be reckoned as determining the majority.

(C.) The opinions of the members of the court should be taken in succession, beginning with the junior in rank.

69. If any question should arise incidentally during the trial, the person, whether prosecutor or prisoner, requesting the opinion of the court is to speak first; the other person is then to answer, and the first person is to be allowed to reply.

70. (A.) A court may be sworn at the same time to try any number of prisoners then present before it, whether the prisoners are to be tried together or separately, and each prisoner shall have power to object to the members of the court, and shall be asked separately whether he objects to any member.

(B.) In the case of several prisoners to be tried separately, the court upon one of those prisoners objecting to a member may, according as they think fit, proceed to determine that objection, or postpone the case of that prisoner and swear the members of the court for the trial of the others alone.

(C.) In the case of several prisoners to be tried separately, the court, when sworn, shall proceed with one case, postponing the other cases, and taking them afterwards in succession.

71. (A.) At any time of the trial an impartial person may, if the court think it necessary, and shall, if either the prosecutor or the prisoner requests it on any reasonable ground, be sworn to act as interpreter (b).

(B.) An impartial person may, at any time of the trial, if the court think it desirable, be sworn to act as a shorthand writer (b).

(C.) Before a person is sworn as interpreter or shorthand writer, the prisoner should be informed of the person who is proposed to be sworn, and may object to such person as not being impartial; and the court, if they think that such objection is reasonable, shall not swear that person as interpreter or shorthand writer.

(a) See Army Act, 1881, ss. 51 (3), (5). 53 (8).

(b) See Rules 27 and 28.

General Provisions as to Witnesses and Evidence.

72. (A.) A court-martial shall not receive evidence for the prosecution which is not relevant to the facts stated in the statement of particulars in the charge, or any evidence which is not admissible either according to the rules of civil courts in England, or under the Army Act, 1881, or under any other Act of the United Kingdom.

(B.) The rules of evidence adopted in civil courts in England will be followed by courts-martial, and objections to any question to a witness or to the admission of any evidence may be made accordingly, and a person will not be required by a court-martial to answer any question or produce any document which he could not be required to answer or produce in a like proceeding before a civil court in England (a).

(C.) By "civil court" in this rule is meant a court of ordinary criminal jurisdiction in England, including a court of summary jurisdiction.

73. The court may take judicial notice of all matters of notoriety, including all matters within their general military knowledge.

74. The prosecutor is not bound to call all the witnesses whose evidence is in the summary of evidence or in the abstract of evidence given to the prisoner, but he should ordinarily call such of them as the prisoner desires to be called, in order that the prisoner may, if he thinks fit, cross-examine them, and the prosecutor should for this reason, so far as seems to the court practicable, secure the attendance of all such witnesses.

75. If the prosecutor intends to call a witness whose evidence is not contained in any summary or abstract given to the prisoner, notice of the intention shall be given to the prisoner a reasonable time before the witness is called, and if such witness is called without such notice having been given, the court shall, if the prisoner, so desire it, either adjourn after taking the evidence of the witness, or allow the cross-examination of such witness to be postponed, and the court shall inform the prisoner of his right to demand such adjournment or postponement.

76. The prisoner shall not be required to give to the prosecutor a list of the witnesses whom he intends to call, but it shall rest with the prisoner alone to secure the attendance of any witness whose evidence is not contained in the summary or abstract and for whose attendance the prisoner has not requested steps to be taken as provided by Rule 14 (A.)

77. (A.) The convening officer, or after the assembly of the court the president, shall take the proper steps to procure the attendance of the witnesses whom the prosecutor or prisoner desires to call, and whose attendance can reasonably be procured, but the person requiring the attendance of a witness may be required to undertake to defray the cost (if any) of such attendance.

(B.) Any such witness who is not subject to military law may be summoned to attend by order (a) under the hand of the convening officer, the president of the court, the judge advocate, or the commanding officer of the prisoner (b).

(c.) Any such witness who is subject to military law shall be ordered to attend by the proper military authority (b).

78. If such proper steps as mentioned in the preceding rule have not been taken as to any witness, or if any witness, whose attendance could not be reasonably procured before the assembly of the court, is essential to the prosecution or defence, the court shall adjourn and report the circumstances to the convening officer.

79. During the trial a witness, other than the prosecutor, ought not, except by special leave of the court, to be in court while not under examination, and if while he is under examination a discussion arises as to the allowance of a question, or the sufficiency of his answers, or otherwise as to his evidence, he may be directed to withdraw.

80. (A.) A witness, before he gives his evidence, shall be sworn (c) by the judge advocate, or by the president, or by a member of the court.

(B.) The form of oath for a witness shall be as follows:

The evidence which you shall give before this court shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God.

(C.) Rule 30 shall apply to every witness.

(D.) Where a witness is permitted to make a solemn declaration instead of being sworn (d), the declaration may be taken before a person authorized to administer the oath, and the form of declaration shall be as follows:

I do solemnly promise and declare that the evidence which I shall give before this court shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

81. (A.) Every question may be put to a witness orally by the prosecutor, prisoner, or judge advocate, without the intervention of the court, and the witness will forthwith reply, unless an objection to the question is made by the court, judge advocate, prosecutor, or prisoner, in which case he will not reply until the objection is disposed of. The witness will address his reply to the court.

(B.) The evidence of a witness as taken down should be read to him after he has given all his evidence and before he leaves the court, and such evidence may be explained or corrected by the witness at his instance. If he makes any explanation or correction the prosecutor and prisoner may respectively examine him respecting the same.

82. (A.) A witness may be examined (e) by the person calling him, and may be cross-examined by the opposite party to the proceeding, and on the conclusion of the cross-examination may be reëxamined by the person calling him on matters raised by the cross-examination (a).

(b.) The court may, if they think fit, allow the cross-examination of a witness to be postponed.

83. (A.) At any time before the time for the second address of the prisoner the judge advocate, also any member of the court, may with the permission of the court address through the president any question to a witness.

(B.) Upon any such question being answered the president shall also put to the witness any question relative to that answer which he may be requested to put by the prosecutor or the prisoner, and which the court deem reasonable.

84. (A.) At the request of the prosecutor or prisoner, a witness may, by leave of the court, be recalled, at any time before the time for the second address of the prisoner, for the purpose of having any question put to him through the president.

(B.) A witness may in special cases be allowed by the court to be called or recalled by the prosecutor before the time for the second address of the prisoner, for the purpose of rebutting any material statement made by a witness for the defence upon his examination by the prisoner on any new matter which the prosecutor could not reasonably have foreseen.

(C.) Where the prisoner has called witnesses as to character, the prosecutor before the time for the second address of the prisoner may call or recall witnesses for the purpose of proving a previous conviction or entries in the defaulters' book against the prisoner.

(D.) The court may call or recall any witness at any time before the finding, if they consider that it is necessary for the ends of justice.

Friend of Prisoner and Counsel.

85. (A.) A prisoner may have a person to assist him during the trial, whether a legal adviser or any other person.

(B.) A person so assisting him may advise him on all points, and suggest the questions to be put to witnesses, and if an officer subject to military law, shall have the same rights and duties as counsel have under these rules, and the right of the prisoner shall be limited in like manner.

86. (A.) Subject to these rules, counsel shall be allowed to appear on behalf of the prosecutor and prisoner at general courts-martial:

- (1.) When held in the United Kingdom; and
- (2.) When held elsewhere, if the commander-in-chief, or the convening officer, declares that it is expedient to allow the appearance of counsel thereat, and such declaration may be made as regards all general courts-martial held in any particular place, or as regards any particular general court-martial, and may be made subject to such reservation as to cases on active service, or otherwise as seems expedient.

(B.) Save as provided in Rule 85, the rules with respect to counsel will apply only to the courts-martial at which counsel are under this rule allowed to appear.

87. (A.) Where a prisoner gives notice of his intention to have a counsel to assist him during the trial, either on the day on which he is informed of the charge (a), or at any time not being less than seven days before the trial, or such shorter time before the trial as in the opinion of the court would have enabled the prosecutor to obtain, if he had thought fit, a counsel to assist him during the trial, and would have enabled the authority appointing a judge advocate to appoint a counsel to act as judge advocate at the trial, or where such notice as mentioned in (B.) is given to the prisoner on the part of the prosecution, a counsel may appear at the court-martial to assist the prisoner.

(B.) If the convening officer so directs, a counsel may appear on behalf of the prosecutor, but in that case, unless the notice in (A.) has been given by the prisoner, notice of the direction for counsel to appear shall be given to the prisoner at such time (not in any case less than seven days) before the trial, as would, in the opinion of the court, have enabled the prisoner to obtain a counsel to assist him at the trial.

(C.) A counsel who appears before a court-martial on behalf of the prosecutor or prisoner shall have the same right as the prosecutor or prisoner for whom he appears, to call, and orally examine, cross-examine, and re-examine witnesses, to make an objection or statement, to address the court, to put in any plea, and to inspect the proceedings, and shall have the right otherwise to act in the course of the trial in the place of the person on whose behalf he appears, and he shall comply with these rules as if he were that person; and in such case that person shall not have the right himself to do any of the above matters except as regards the statement allowed by Rule 92, or except so far as the court permit him so to do.

(D.) When counsel appears on behalf of the prosecutor, the prosecutor, if called as a witness, may be examined and re-examined as any other witness, and Rule 38 (c.) and (D.) shall not apply.

88. (A.) The counsel for the prosecution should always make an opening address, and should state therein the substance of the charge against the prisoner, and the nature and general effect of the evidence which he proposes to adduce in support of it without entering into unnecessary detail.

(B.) The counsel appearing on behalf of the prosecutor shall have the same duty as the prosecutor, and is subject to be stopped and restrained by the court in the manner provided by Rule 59 (B.)

89. (A.) The counsel appearing on behalf of the prisoner has the like rights and is under the like obligations as are specified in Rule 59 (c.) in the case of the prisoner.

(B.) If the court ask the counsel for the prisoner a question as to any witness or matter he may decline to answer, but he must not give to the court any answer or information which is misleading.

90. (A.) Counsel, whether for the prosecution or for the prisoner, will conform strictly to these rules and to the rules of civil courts in

(a) See Rule 14.

England relating to the examination, cross-examination, and reëxamination of witnesses and relating to the duties of counsel.

(B.) If a counsel puts to a witness a question as to a matter which is not relevant except so far as it affects the credit of the witness by injuring his character, and the witness objects to answering the question, the court shall consider whether the witness should be compelled to answer it; and

- (1.) If they are of opinion that the imputation conveyed by the question would, if true, seriously affect their opinion as to the credibility of the witness, the court should require the witness to answer the question; but
- (2.) If they are of opinion that the said imputation, if true, would not affect, or would not seriously affect the opinion of the court as to the credibility of the witness, the court should disallow the question.

If the question is disallowed, counsel on both sides will refrain from further examining or commenting on the said matter.

(C.) Counsel will not state as a fact any matter which is not proved or which he does not intend to prove in evidence.

(D.) Counsel will not state what is his own opinion as to any matter of fact before the court.

(E.) Counsel will not, in a question to any witness, assume that facts have been given in evidence which have not been given in evidence, or that particular answers have been given contrary to the fact.

(F.) Counsel will treat the court and judge advocate with due respect, and shall, while regarding the exigencies of his case, bear in mind the requirements of military discipline in the respectful treatment of any superior officer of the prisoner who may attend as a witness.

91. (A.) Neither the prosecutor nor the prisoner has any right to object to any counsel, if properly qualified.

(B.) A counsel shall be deemed properly qualified—

- (1.) If in England or Ireland he is a barrister-at-law,
- (2.) If in Scotland he is an advocate,
- (3.) If in India he is a barrister-at-law, or advocate,
- (4.) If in any other part of Her Majesty's dominions, he is recognized by the convening officer as having in that part rights and duties similar to those of a barrister-at-law in England and as being subject to punishment or disability for a breach of professional rules.

92. (A.) A prisoner assisted by counsel, or by an officer subject to military law, may, if he thinks fit, at the close of the case for the prosecution, and before the address by such counsel or officer, make any statement giving his own account of the subject of the charges against him, but such statement must be made orally, as if he were a witness, except that he must not be sworn and that no question can be put to him by the court or by any person.

(B.) If the prisoner makes such a statement, the procedure will, so far as possible, be the same as if the prisoner had called witnesses other than witnesses as to character.

Proceedings.

93. (A.) At a court-martial the judge advocate, or if there is none, the president, shall record or cause to be recorded all transactions of that court, and shall be responsible for the accuracy of such record (in these rules referred to as the proceedings), and if the judge advocate is called as a witness by the prisoner, the president will be responsible for the accuracy of the record in the proceedings of the evidence of the judge advocate.

(B.) The evidence shall be taken down in a narrative form in as nearly as possible the words used, but in any case where the prosecutor, the prisoner, the judge advocate, or the court, considers it material, the question and answer shall be taken down verbatim.

(C.) Any question which has been objected to and the tender of any evidence which has been objected to shall, if the prosecutor or prisoner so requests or the court think fit, be entered with the grounds of the objection and the decision of the court thereon.

(D.) Where any address by or behalf of the prosecutor or prisoner, or the summing up of the judge advocate, is not in writing, it shall not be necessary to record the same in the proceedings further or otherwise than the court think proper, or in the case of the summing up than the judge advocate requires, except that—

(1.) the court shall in every case make such record of the defence made by the prisoner as will enable the confirming officer to judge of the reply made by or on behalf of the prisoner to each charge against him; and

(2.) the court should also record any particular matters in the address by or on behalf of the prosecutor or prisoner which the prosecutor or prisoner, as the case may be, requires.

(E.) The court shall not enter in the proceedings any comment on anything before the court, or any report of any fact not forming part of the trial, but if any such comment or report seems to the court necessary, the court may forward it to the proper military authority in a separate document signed by the president.

94. The proceedings shall be deemed to be in the custody of the judge advocate (if any), or if there is none, of the president, but may, with proper precautions for their safety, be inspected by the members of the court, the prosecutor, and prisoner respectively, at all reasonable times before the court is closed to consider the finding.

95. (A.) Where the court is a general court-martial, the proceedings shall be at once sent by the person having the custody thereof (a) to such person as may be from time to time directed by Her Majesty, and, subject to the provisions of any such direction of Her Majesty, as may be directed by the order convening the court.

(B.) Where the court is a district court-martial, the proceedings shall be at once sent by the person having the custody thereof (a) to such person as may be directed by the order convening the court, or in default of such direction to the confirming officer.

(C.) Where the court is a regimental court-martial the proceedings shall be at once sent by the president to the confirming officer.

96. (A.) The proceedings of a court-martial (other than a regimental court-martial) shall after promulgation be forwarded as circumstances require to the office of the Judge Advocate General in London or India, or to the Admiralty, and there preserved for not less, in the case of a general court-martial, than seven years, and in the case of any other court-martial, than three years (a).

(a) See Rule 94.

(B.) The proceedings of a regimental court-martial when promulgated shall be preserved for not less than three years with the regimental records of the corps to which the prisoner belonged, in manner from time to time directed by Her Majesty's regulations (a).

97. The rate at which copies of the proceedings of a court-martial are to be supplied shall be the actual cost of the copy required, not exceeding twopence for every folio of seventy-two words, and the officer or person having the custody of those proceedings must, on demand made within the time limited (b) for the preservation of such proceedings, supply a copy accordingly to any person tried by such court-martial (a).

98. (A.) If the original proceedings of a court-martial or any part thereof are lost, a copy, if any, certified by the president of or the judge advocate at the court-martial, may be accepted in lieu of the original.

(B.) If there is no such copy, and sufficient evidence of the charge, finding, sentence, and transactions of the court can be procured, that evidence may, with the assent of the prisoner, be accepted in lieu of the original proceedings or part thereof lost.

(C.) In any case above in this rule mentioned, the finding and sentence, if requiring confirmation, may be confirmed and shall be as valid as if the original proceedings or part thereof had not been lost.

(D.) If, in a case where confirmation of a finding or finding and sentence is required, the proceedings or part thereof were lost before confirmation, and there is no such copy or evidence, or the prisoner refuses such assent as above mentioned, the prisoner may be tried again; and on the issue of an order convening the court for such trial, the said finding and sentence of the previous court of which the proceedings or part thereof were so lost shall be null.

Judge Advocate.

99. (A.) Where the convening officer is authorized to appoint a judge advocate he shall in the case of a general, and may in the case of a district court-martial, by order appoint a fit person to act as judge advocate at such court-martial.

(B.) An officer who is disqualified for sitting on a court-martial shall be disqualified for acting as judge advocate at that court-martial.

(C.) A court-martial shall not be invalid by reason of any invalidity in the appointment of the judge advocate officiating thereat, in whatever manner appointed, if a fit person has been appointed; but this rule shall not relieve from responsibility the person who made such invalid appointment.

100. If the judge advocate dies, or from illness or from any cause whatever is unable to attend, the court shall adjourn and the president shall report the circumstance to the convening authority, and a person not disqualified to be judge advocate may be appointed by the proper authority, who shall be sworn (a), and act as judge advocate for the residue of the trial, or until the judge advocate returns (b).

(a) See Army Act, 1881, s. 124.

(b) See Rule 96.

101. The powers and duties of a judge advocate are as follows:

- (A.) The prosecutor and the prisoner respectively are, at all times after the judge advocate is named to act on the court, entitled to his opinion on any question of law relative to the charge or trial, whether he is in or out of court, subject, when he is in court, to the permission of the court.
- (B.) At a court-martial he represents the judge advocate-general.
- (C.) He is responsible for informing the court of any informality or irregularity in the proceedings. Whether consulted or not, he will inform the convening officer and the court of any informality or defect in the charge or in the constitution of the court, and will give his advice on any matter before the court.
- (D.) Any information or advice given to the court on any matter before the court will, if he or the court desires it, be entered in the proceedings.
- (E.) At the conclusion of the case he will, unless both he and the court consider it unnecessary, sum up the evidence, and give his opinion upon the legal bearing of the case before the court proceed to deliberate upon their finding.
- (F.) Upon any point of law or procedure which arises upon the trial which he attends, the court should be guided by his opinion and not overrule it except for very weighty reasons. The court are responsible for the legality of their decisions, but they must consider the grave consequences which may result from their disregard of the advice of the judge advocate on any legal point. The court in following the opinion of the judge advocate on a legal point may record that they have decided in consequence of that opinion.
- (G.) The judge advocate has, equally with the president, the duty of taking care that the prisoner does not suffer any disadvantage in consequence of his position as prisoner, or of his ignorance or incapacity to examine or cross-examine witnesses or otherwise, and may for that purpose, with the permission of the court, call witnesses and put questions to witnesses which appear to him necessary or desirable to elicit the truth.
- (H.) In fulfilling his duties the judge advocate will be careful to maintain an entirely impartial position.

Exception from Rules.

102. Where it appears to the officer convening a court-martial, or to the senior officer on the spot, that military exigencies or the necessities of discipline render it impossible or inexpedient to observe any of the Rules 5, 8, 13, and 14, he may by order under his hand (c) make a declaration to that effect specifying the nature of such exigencies or necessities, and thereupon the trial or other proceeding shall be as valid as if the rule mentioned in such declaration had not been contained herein; and such declaration may be made with respect to any or all of the rules above in this rule mentioned in the case of the same court-martial:

Provided that the prisoner shall have full opportunity of making his defence, and shall be afforded every facility for preparing it which is practicable, having due regard to the said exigencies or necessities.

Field General Court-Martial.

103. In the case of a field general court-martial under section forty-nine of the Army Act, 1881, the foregoing rules applicable to a general court-martial shall apply, subject to the following exceptions and provisions:

- (A.) The interval between the prisoner being informed of the charge under Rule 14, and his arraignment, shall, when that rule cannot be complied with, be as long as practicable, having regard to the exigencies of the service.
- (B.) Rules 5, 8, 20, 21, and 102 shall not apply.
- (C.) Rule 95 and 96 shall apply as if the court were a district court-martial.
- (D.) Rule 19 (B.) and (C.) shall not apply, except that an officer shall be disqualified for serving on the court if he is the prosecutor, or is a witness for the prosecution, or has a personal interest in the case.
- (E.) A judge advocate shall not be required, and the president may do anything authorized by these rules to be done in the case of a court-martial by the judge advocate.
- (F.) On a plea of guilty the court shall proceed as in the case of a regimental court-martial.
- (G.) Rules 13, 38, 39, 40, and 63 shall apply only so far as it appears to the convening officer or the court to be practicable, having due regard to the exigencies of the service: Provided that the prisoner shall have full opportunity of making his defence, and shall be afforded every facility for preparing it which is practicable, having due regard to the said exigencies.

Summary Court-martial.

The foregoing rules shall not, save as hereinafter mentioned, apply to summary courts-martial, which shall be subject to the following rules:—

104. (A.) A summary court-martial may be convened by the commanding officer of any corps or portion of a corps on active service, or by any officer in immediate command of a portion of a body of forces on active service.

(B.) Where it appears to any such officer, on complaint or otherwise, that a person subject to military law has committed an offence, he may convene a summary court-martial to try such person, if he is satisfied that it is not practicable* to try such person by an ordinary court-martial, and—where he is below the rank of field officer and is not a commanding officer—is further satisfied that it is not practicable* to delay the trial for reference to a superior officer.

105. (A.) Not less than three officers must be appointed, unless the convening officer is of opinion that three officers are not available,* in which case two may be appointed.

(B.) If the convening officer is of opinion that three other officers are not available* to form the court, he may appoint himself president of the court; but if he is of opinion either that three other officers are available,* or that although three other officers are not available* he himself is by reason of his position as confirming officer or otherwise not available,* he should appoint another officer to be president, who may be of any rank, but should not be below the rank of captain, unless in the opinion of the convening officer an officer of that or some higher rank is not available.*

(C.) The officers should have held commissions for not less than one year, and if in the opinion of the convening officer any officers are available* who have held commissions for not less than three years he should appoint those officers in preference to officers of less service.

(D.) The provost marshal, an assistant provost marshal, and an officer who is prosecutor or a witness for the prosecution, must not be appointed a member of the court, but save as aforesaid any available officers may be appointed to sit.

106. The court may be convened and the proceedings of the court recorded in accordance with the form in the Second Appendix to these rules; but where it appears to the convening officer that military exigencies or other circumstances prevent the use of such form, the court-martial may be convened and the proceedings carried on without any writing, except that such written record as seems practicable* must be kept by the provost marshal or assistant provost marshal, if present, or if not, by the president and the officer charged with the promulgation, stating, as near as may be, the particulars set forth in the form, and stating at least the name (or, if the name is not known, the description) of the offender, the offence charged, the finding, the sentence, and the confirmation.

107. The statement of an offence may be made briefly in any language sufficient to describe or disclose an offence under the Army Act, 1881.

108. The court may be sworn at the same time to try any number of prisoners then present before it, but, except so far as prisoners are tried together for an offence committed collectively, the trial of each prisoner will be separate.

109. (A.) The names of the president and members of the court will be read over in the hearing of the prisoners, who will be asked if any of them objects to be tried by any of those officers.

(B.) If any prisoner objects to an officer, and any member of the court thinks the objection reasonable, steps will be taken to try the prisoner before a court composed of officers against whom he has no reasonable objection.

* See below, Rule 121.

110. The president will administer to the other members of the court, and a member of the court when sworn will administer to the president, the following oath :

You do swear, that you will well and truly try the prisoner [or prisoners] before the court according to the evidence, and that you will duly administer justice according to the Army Act now in force, without partiality, favour, or affection; and you do further swear that you will not divulge the sentence of the court until it is duly confirmed; and you do further swear that you will not on any account, at any time whatsoever, disclose or discover the vote or opinion of any particular member of this court-martial, unless thereunto required in due course of law. So help you God.

111. When the court are sworn the president will state to the prisoner then to be tried the offence with which he is charged, with, if necessary, an explanation giving him full information of the act or omission with which he is charged, and will ask the prisoner whether he is guilty or not of the offence.

112. If a special plea to the general jurisdiction is offered by the prisoner, and is considered by the court to be proved, the court shall report the same to the convening officer.

113. (A.) The witnesses for the prosecution will be called and the prisoner will be allowed to cross-examine them and to call any available witnesses for his defence.

(B.) The following oath shall be administered by a member of the court to every witness :

The evidence which you shall give before this court shall be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth. So help you God.

114. (A.) A member of the court or a witness may take an oath with such ceremonies and in such manner as makes the same binding on his conscience, and the words "you" and "So help you God" may be varied or omitted for the purpose.

(B.) A member of the court or a witness who objects to take an oath, or is objected to as incompetent to take an oath, may be allowed by the court in lieu of an oath to make a solemn declaration, which will be in the same form as the oath, with the substitution of "I" for "you," and with the omission of "You do swear that" and "So help you God," and with the substitution or addition, where necessary, of "I do solemnly declare that."

115. The prisoner will be asked what he has to say in his defence, and shall be allowed to make his defence.

116. (A.) In the case of an equality of votes on the finding the prisoner will be acquitted.

(B.) The finding of acquittal requires no confirmation, and if it relates to all the offences charged against a prisoner will be declared at the time of the finding, and the prisoner will thereupon be discharged from custody.

117. (A.) The court, if consisting of three or more officers, may award any sentence which a general court-martial can award; but if the court pass sentence of death the whole court must concur.

(B.) The court, if consisting of two officers, may award any sentence authorized for the offence, not exceeding summary punishment or two years' imprisonment with hard labour.

(C.) Any recommendation to mercy will be attached to the proceedings, and communicated to the prisoner together with the finding and sentence.

118. (A.) Except as provided by Rules 109 (B.), 116, and 117, every question will be determined by the majority of votes, and in case of equality the president shall have a second or casting vote.

(B.) If after the commencement of the trial the court consider that any prisoner named in the schedule to the order convening the court should be tried by an ordinary court-martial, the court may strike the name of that prisoner out of the schedule.

(C.) The proceedings shall be held in open court, in the presence of the prisoner, except on any deliberation among the members, when the court may be closed.

(D.) The court may adjourn from time to time, and may, if necessary, view any place.

119. (A.) Except in the case of acquittal the finding and sentence of the court shall be valid only in so far as the same are confirmed by proper military authority.

(B.) The provost marshal or an assistant provost marshal cannot confirm the finding or sentence of the court.

(C.) A prosecutor of a prisoner or a member of the court trying a prisoner cannot confirm the finding or sentence of the court as regards that prisoner, except that if a member of the court trying a prisoner would otherwise under these rules have power to confirm the sentence, and is of opinion that it is not practicable* to delay the case for the purpose of referring it to any other officer, he may confirm the finding and sentence.

(D.) Where a sentence of death or penal servitude has been passed, the sentence shall not be carried into effect until confirmed by a general or field officer commanding the force with which the prisoner is present at the date of his sentence:

Provided that in case of a sentence of death it shall be the duty of any such officer who is not in chief command of the forces in the field comprising the said force with which the prisoner is present, to reserve the sentence for confirmation by a superior officer, except where he is of opinion that by reason of the nature of the country, the great distance, or the operations of the enemy, it is not practicable* to delay the case for confirmation by the said officer in chief command, or by any officer superior to himself in command of the said force with which the prisoner is present, and in that case he may confirm the same.

(E.) Subject to the exceptions in (B.), (C.), and (D.), the finding and sentence of a summary court-martial as regards any prisoner may be confirmed by any general or field officer or by the commanding officer of a corps or portion of a corps, or by any officer not qualified as aforesaid but being in immediate command of a detachment or portion of the body of the forces with which the prisoner is present: Provided that—

(1.) It shall be the duty of any such officer in immediate command as aforesaid, if not otherwise qualified to confirm, to reserve for confirmation by superior authority a finding and sentence, except where he is of opinion that it is not practicable* to delay the case for that purpose; and

(2.) it shall be the duty of an officer who has not power to confirm the finding and sentence of a general or district court-martial to reserve—save as provided by (F.)—for confirmation by an officer having that power a sentence awarding a punishment in excess of that which a regimental court-martial can award.

(F.) Where the punishment awarded by a sentence is such that an officer is required to reserve the same for confirmation, that officer may nevertheless, if he thinks fit, confirm the sentence, if in confirming it he mitigates, remits, or commutes the punishment, so as to make it a punishment a sentence for which he has power to confirm.

(G.) Any officer may, if he thinks it desirable, reserve any finding or sentence for confirmation by superior authority.

(H.) An officer not having power to confirm the finding and sentence of a district court-martial shall not have power to commute summary punishment into imprisonment for any period exceeding forty-two days.

(I.) A confirming authority shall not send back a finding and sentence for revision more than once, and on any revision the court shall not take further evidence nor increase the sentence.

120. The foregoing rules, 53 (Mitigation of sentence on partial confirmation,) 55 (Confirmation notwithstanding informality in or excess of punishment), 95 (Transmission of proceedings after finding), 96 (Preservation of proceedings), 97 (Rate of payment for copies of proceedings), and 98 (Loss of proceedings), shall, so far as practicable, apply as if a summary court-martial were a district court-martial.

121. (A.) In the rules with respect to summary courts-martial, unless the context otherwise requires, the expressions "practicable" and "available" mean respectively practicable and available, having due regard to the public service.

(B.) The expression "commanding officer of a corps or portion of a corps" means the officer whose duty it is under the provisions of Her Majesty's Regulations, or, in the absence of any such provisions, under the custom of the service, to deal with a charge against any of the persons belonging to such corps or portion of a corps who are present under his command, of having committed an offence, that is, to dispose of the charge on his own authority, or to refer it to superior authority.

122. Any statement in an order convening a summary court-martial as to the opinion of the convening officer, and any statement in the minute confirming the finding or sentence of a summary court-martial as to the opinion of the confirming officer, shall be conclusive evidence of such opinion, but this rule shall not prejudice the proof at any time of any such opinion when not so stated.

PART II.—MISCELLANEOUS.

Regulations for Courts of Inquiry, other than Courts of Inquiry held under Section 72 of the Army Act, 1881.

193. (A.) A court of inquiry may be assembled by the officer in command of any body of troops, whether belonging to one or more corps.

(B.) The court may be composed of any number of officers of any rank, and of any branch or department of the service, according to the nature of the investigation.

(C.) The court will be guided by the written instructions of the officer who assembled the court. The instructions should be full and specific, and must state the general character of the information required from the court in their report.

(D.) A court of inquiry has no judicial power, and is in strictness not a court at all, but an assembly of persons directed by a commanding officer to collect evidence with respect to a transaction into which he cannot conveniently himself make inquiry.

(E.) Previous notice should be given of the time and place of the meeting of a court of inquiry, and of all adjournments of the court, to all persons concerned in the inquiry.

(F.) Whenever any inquiry affects the character of an officer or soldier, full opportunity must be afforded to such officer or soldier of being present throughout the inquiry, and of making any statement he may wish to make, and of cross-examining any witness whose evidence, in his opinion, affects his character, and producing any witnesses in defence of his character.

(G.) A court of inquiry has no power to compel witnesses to attend, and the evidence cannot be taken on oath.

(H.) A court of inquiry will give no opinion on the conduct of any officer or soldier, and the proceedings of a court of inquiry cannot be given in evidence against an officer or soldier. Nevertheless in the event of an officer or soldier being tried by court-martial in respect of any matter or thing which has been reported on by a court of inquiry, such officer or soldier shall be entitled to a copy of the proceedings of the court of inquiry.

(I.) The whole of the proceedings of a court of inquiry will be forwarded by the president to the commanding officer who assembled the court, and that commanding officer will, on his own responsibility, form such opinion as he thinks just.

(J.) When, in consequence of the assembling of a court of inquiry, an opinion adverse to the character of any officer or soldier is formed by the officer who determines the case so inquired into, whether such officer be the officer who assembled the court or a superior officer to whom the case has been referred by such last-mentioned officer, such adverse opinion shall be communicated to the officer or soldier against whom it has been given.

(K.) The court may be reassembled as often as the convening officer may direct, for the purpose of examining additional witnesses or recording further information.

(L.) Members of a court of inquiry in a case which is subsequently the subject of a court-martial, are not to be detailed as members of the court-martial.

Regulations for Courts of Inquiry under Section 72 of the Army Act, 1881, for the purpose of determining the illegal Absence of Soldiers.

124. (A.) A court of inquiry under section 72 of the Army Act, 1881, will, when assembled, require the attendance of such witnesses as they think sufficient to prove the absence and other facts specified as matters of inquiry in the said section.

(B.) They will take down the evidence given them in writing, and at the end of the proceedings will make a declaration of the conclusions at which they have arrived in respect of the facts they are assembled to inquire into.

(C.) The commanding officer of the absent soldier will enter in the regimental books a record of the declaration of the court, and the original proceedings will be destroyed.

(D.) The court of inquiry will examine all witnesses who may be desirous of coming forward on behalf of the absentee, and in making their declaration will give due weight to the evidence of such witnesses.

(E.) A court of inquiry will administer the same oath or solemn declaration to the witnesses as if the court were a court-martial (a), but the members of such court will not themselves be sworn.

Explanation of "Prescribed" and "Commanding Officer."

125. (A.) The committing authority under ss. 59, 60, 61, 64, and 65 of the Army Act, 1881, shall include the officer commanding the military district or station where the military convict or military prisoner may for the time being be, and when the convict or prisoner is in Ireland the general commanding the forces in Ireland, but any officer in this rule mentioned shall not, by virtue of this rule, be a discharging authority.

(B.) The removing authority under section 64, and the competent military authority under section 67 of the said Act shall, as regards a military prisoner for the time being in Ireland, include the general commanding the forces in Ireland.

(C.) The general commanding the forces in Ireland, as respects a military prisoner undergoing his sentence in Ireland, and the adjutant general, as respects persons undergoing sentence in any place whatever, shall be authorities having power under section 57 of the Army Act, 1881, to mitigate, remit, or commute punishment awarded by sentence of a court-martial.

126. Where a court of inquest is required to be convened by the commanding officer under section 133 of the Army Act, 1881, the court shall be convened and inquest held in manner following:

(a) See Rule 80.

- (b.) The court will consist of three officers and of a medical officer.
- (c.) The court shall not take evidence on oath, and shall warn every person who is accused or suspected that he is not required to give evidence criminating himself, but that any statement or evidence he gives may be used against him in the event of any further proceedings being instituted.
- (d.) The court, after hearing the evidence, will report to the officer commanding the station the evidence as to the cause of the death, together with the written opinion of the medical officer of the court on his examination of the body as to the cause of death.
- (e.) The commanding officer will, as soon as practicable, forward the report of the court to the nearest civil magistrate having authority to hold an inquest on death, who may proceed thereon as if he had himself held the inquest.

127. The competent military authority in Part II of the Army Act, 1881, includes, in addition to the commander-in-chief and adjutant general in section 101 of that Act mentioned, the following officers, namely:—

(i.) In India—

The commander-in-chief of the forces in India, and
The commander-in-chief of the forces of any presidency in India;

(ii.) In any place situate out of India, and out of the United Kingdom, the general or other officer commanding the forces in such place.

In addition to the above-mentioned officers it also includes—

- (iii.) For the purpose of sections 80, 82, 84, and 85 of the said Act, the commanding officer of the soldier, and every officer superior in command to that commanding officer, and not hereinbefore included;
- (iv.) For the purposes of any transfer by consent under section 82 (2), the general commanding the forces in Ireland, and the general commanding a military district in the United Kingdom;
- (v.) For the purposes of section 99, any officer having power to convene a district court-martial for the trial of the soldier;
- (vi.) It also includes such officer as may be directed from time to time by Her Majesty's Regulations to perform in any place, or for any purpose specified in that behalf, the duty of the competent military authority.

128. The expression "commanding officer" as used in the sections of the Army Act, 1881, relating to "Courts-martial," to the "Execution of sentence," and to the "Power of commanding officer," and in the provisions consequential thereon, and in these rules, means in relation to any person the officer whose duty it is under the provisions of Her Majesty's Regulations, or in the absence of any such provisions, under the custom of the service, to deal with a charge against that person of having committed an offence, that is, to dispose of it on his own authority or refer it to a superior authority.

129. (a) A military prisoner who has been sentenced to imprisonment in any place out of the United Kingdom may, if he is in any place mentioned in the first column of the following table, be committed, or, if he has been committed to prison, be removed, if occasion arises, to a military prison wherever situate (b), or to an authorized prison situate in any place mentioned opposite thereto in the second column of the following table:—

(a) The main object of this rule as regards a colony where there is no military prison, is to enable a prisoner to be removed with or sent to his regiment if the regiment is serving in that colony, but not to allow prisoners in any other case to be sent to that colony. No prisoners will be committed or removed to a colony where troops are not serving without the consent of the government of that colony.

PART III.—SUPPLEMENTAL.

130. Any power or jurisdiction given to, and any act or thing to be done by, to, or before any person holding any military office, for the purpose of these rules, may be exercised by, or done by, to, or before any other person for the time being authorized in that behalf according to the custom of the service. †

131. In any case not provided for by these rules such course will be adopted as appears best calculated to do justice.

132. (A.) The forms in the appendices to these rules should be followed in all cases in which they are applicable, and when used shall be valid in law, but a deviation from such forms will not, by reason only of such deviation, render any charge, warrant, order, proceedings, or other document invalid.

(B.) An omission of any such form will not by reason only of such omission render any act or thing invalid.

(C.) The notes to and instructions in the forms will be considered as instructions which it is expedient to follow in all cases to which such notes and instructions apply.

133. In these rules, unless the context otherwise requires,—

(A.) The expression “proper military authority” when used in relation to any power, duty, act, or matter means such military authority as, in pursuance of Her Majesty’s Regulations or the custom of the service, exercises or performs that power or duty or is concerned with that act or matter.

(B.) The expression “commander-in-chief” means, as regards India, the commander-in-chief in India.

(C.) The expression “Army Act, 1881,” includes any Act whether passed before or after the date of these rules which amends or applies that act, also any act whether passed before or after the date of these rules which enacts an offence which is triable by court-martial.

(D.) Other expressions have the same meaning as if these rules formed part of the Army Act, 1881 (a), and accordingly words in the singular number include the plural, and words in the plural number include the singular, and the masculine gender includes the feminine gender.

134. (A.) Time, for the purposes of any proceeding or other matter under these rules, shall be reckoned exclusive of Sunday, Good Friday, and Christmas Day, but any time reckoned for the purposes of Rule 6, or of any punishment, or of any deduction of pay, shall include those days.

(B.) Any report or application directed by these rules to be made to a superior authority or proper military authority shall be made in writing through the proper channel, unless such authority, on account of military exigencies or otherwise, dispenses with the writing.

(C.) These rules shall apply to a person subject to military law as an officer (b) in like manner, so nearly as circumstances admit, as if he were an officer, and to a person subject to military law as a soldier (a) in like manner, so nearly as circumstances admit, as if he were a soldier, subject nevertheless to the restrictions contained in the Army Act, 1881, and to this qualification—that nothing in these rules shall confer on any person not an officer or soldier any jurisdiction or power as an officer or soldier.

(a) See s. 190.

(b) See Army Act, 1881, s. 175 (7), (8).

(D.) Nothing in these rules shall be construed to be contrary to or inconsistent with any provision of the Army Act, 1881.

135. These rules shall, save as otherwise expressly provided, apply to the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man in like manner as if they were part of the United Kingdom.

136. These rules shall apply in every place, whether within or without Her Majesty's dominions.

137. These rules may be cited as the Rules of Procedure, 1881.

138. (A.) The foregoing rules, so far as they relate to summary courts-martial, shall come into operation in any place at the date thereof, or if that date is prior to the commencement of the Army Discipline and Regulation (Annual) Act, 1881, in that place, then on that commencement, and on such rules coming into operation in any place the rules in force with respect to field general courts-martial under section 72 of the Army Discipline and Regulation Act, 1879, shall determine in that place.

(B.) Rule 125 and so much of the foregoing rules as relate to the forms in the Third Appendix, shall come into operation in any place on the commencement in that place of the Regulation of the Forces Act, 1881, and so much of any rules then in operation as are inconsistent therewith shall determine in that place.

(C.) The foregoing rules, so far as they are not already in operation on the first day of January 1882, shall come into operation on that day, except in any place in which that day precedes the commencement of the Regulation of the Forces Act, 1881, in that place, in which case these rules shall come into operation in that place on that commencement, and on the day on which these rules come into operation in any place the rules made in pursuance of the Army Discipline and Regulation Act, 1879, so far as they are then in force, shall determine.

(D.) Any court-martial, proceeding, or thing held, done, or commenced under any rules determined in pursuance of this rule shall be as valid and may be completed and carried into effect as if the said rules were still in force.

Her Majesty has made the foregoing rules in pursuance of the Army Act, 1881, and those rules will therefore be observed by all persons concerned.

ARMY PROCEDURE RULES.

FIRST APPENDIX.—FORMS OF CHARGES.

Note as to Use of Forms of Charges.

(1.) Every charge-sheet will begin as shown in the forms in Part I of the forms of charges, which are given as examples.

The description of an officer or soldier of the regular forces by his rank and corps is a sufficient averment that he is an officer or soldier, and that he is amenable to military law. In other cases words must be added to show that the person is amenable to military law. (See Rule 10.)

(2.) The commencement of the charge-sheet (according to the form in Part I) will be followed by the charge or charges.

(3.) Each charge will consist of two parts, a statement of the offence and a statement of the particulars. (Rule 11 (B).)

(4.) The statement of the offence will be in one of the forms in Part II.

(5.) Where two or more words or expressions occur in Part II bracketed together one under the other, the particular word or expression should be used which most accurately describes the offence which appears to the officer framing the charge to be capable of proof by legal evidence.

(6.) Where the officer framing the charge is doubtful whether the offence so capable of being proved by legal evidence is more accurately described by one word or expression, or by another, he may frame two or more alternative charges, each charge containing one of the words or expressions which appear to the officer to be applicable to the facts as capable of proof.

(7.) Where two or more of the words or expressions bracketed together appear, when coupled together with the word "and," accurately to describe the offence, the charge may couple together such words or expressions; but in no case must the charge couple with the word "or" two or more of the words or expressions bracketed together. (See Rule 11 (A).)

(8.) For example, a man may be charged with making away with his arms, ammunition, and necessities, but a charge for making away with his arms, ammunition or necessities will be a bad charge.

(9.) A man should not be charged, however, with making away with by pawning and selling his arms, and necessities, as in such case he is charged with at least two distinct offences which ought to be included in at least two distinct charges, one for making away with by pawning his arms and necessities, the other for making away with by selling his arms and necessities; but he may, if desirable, be charged in four distinct charges, one for pawning his arms, another for pawning his necessities, a third for selling his arms, and a fourth for selling his necessities.

(10.) In the former example (par. 8) the offence is the sale of some article which he is prohibited from selling, and is the same offence although committed in respect of different articles. In the second example (par. 9) there are two distinct offences of making away with his articles,—(a) by pawning, (b) by selling,—although committed in respect of the same objects—arms and necessities.

(11.) In a few cases, shown in italics bracketed, thus [],—as for instance in s. 4 (1 b), s. 6 (7) (8) and (12), and s. 24,—words may be inserted in the charge which are not in the Act. In these cases the Act contains a general expression such as “other person,” or “other place,” or “other means,” and the officer framing the charge must omit these words, and insert a description of the person, place, or means.

(12.) Words inserted in brackets, thus [], without italics, must be adopted or not according to circumstances. For example, if the offender was not on active service the words “when on active service” must be omitted.

(13.) In some cases,—for example, s. 10 (4), s. 14, s. 15 (3), s. 16, and ss. 18, 27 (3) (4), and 37,—the offence can only be committed by an officer or by a non-commissioned officer or by a soldier. The forms of charge do not contain any reference to this fact, inasmuch as it will appear from the commencement of the charge whether the prisoner is or is not an officer, non-commissioned officer or soldier, and therefore capable of committing the offence. Care, however, must be taken not to charge an officer with an offence which a soldier only can commit, nor a soldier with an offence which an officer only can commit. In some cases the offence, even though not expressed in the Act to be limited to an officer or soldier, can, from the nature of things, only be committed by an officer or soldier. For example, the offence in s. 4 (1) (a), can only be committed by an officer, while the offence of losing regimental necessities (s. 24) can only be committed by a soldier.

(14.) The statement of the offence in each charge will be followed by the appropriate statement of particulars, commencing with the words “in that he,” &c., or “in having,” &c., and stating in brief ordinary language what the prisoner is alleged to have done.

(15.) The words “in that he” will be followed by the verb in the past tense; the words “in having” will be followed by the past participle. The sentence stating the particulars will be framed more easily sometimes in the one form, sometimes in the other.

(16.) In the case of several charges the particulars in one charge may refer to the particulars in another (Rule 11 (E.)) ; as, for example, “in having done the acts alleged in the particulars to the first charge,” or “in that at the place and time aforesaid he was deficient in the necessities above mentioned in the second charge which it was his duty to have.” If the prisoner is acquitted on any charge in which full particulars were set out, and is convicted on a charge which referred to those particulars, the particulars referred to must be treated as having been set out in full in the charge on which the prisoner is convicted, and must be set out in full in any record of conviction in which the particulars are set out.

(17.) The statement of particulars should specify all the ingredients necessary to constitute the offence; for example, if the charge is under s. 9 (2), for disobeying a lawful command, the "particulars" must state the command, and show that it was given by a superior officer, and also how the prisoner disobeyed the command; while, if the charge is under s. 9 (1), the "particulars" should also show how the command was given personally, and how the prisoner showed a wilful defiance of authority.

(18.) The "particulars" should always give a general description of the place where the offence was committed, such as the station or town or "the line of march," and, if it is material to the charge and is known, the exact place. The prepositions "near" or "between" may be used (for instance, "at or near," "between,") to assist in describing a place not exactly known, but they must never be used where the exact place is of the essence of the offence.

(19.) The "particulars" should always state the date at which the offence was committed. If the exact date or time is unknown the offence may be stated as having been committed "on or about" a particular day or time. This must never be done where the time is of the essence of the offence, as, for example, the case of absence without leave, or being drunk on a post.

(20.) In some cases the offence may be stated with most accuracy as having been committed between two days or between two times; as, for instance, in the case of absence without leave or of quitting a post; in other cases "between" may be used in consequence of the exact day or exact time not being known.

(21.) The words "or near" and "or about" and "between" should never be used unless it is impossible to express the exact place or time, or the exact place or time is clearly unimportant, or unless the word "between" is the most accurate expression of the place or time.

(22.) In many cases, as, for instance, where the prisoner's defence is an alibi, the time and place may be of the utmost importance in proving that alibi, although it is not the essence of the offence.

(23.) There must be added at the end of the "particulars" a statement of any expenses, loss, or damage in respect of which the court-martial will be asked to award compensation under section 137 or 138 (Rule 11 (F).) For example, there may be added to the "particulars" in the case of a charge of fraudulent enlistment an averment to the effect that the prisoner thereby obtained a free kit, value pounds, and, in the case of a charge under s. 10 (2) or (3), that the prisoner thereby damageds coat to the value of shillings, ands watch to the value of shillings; and other statements may be made according to the facts.

(24.) If, however, the expenses, loss or damage, were caused by an act or omission which constitutes another offence separately specified in the Act, that act or omission should be charged as a separate offence; for example, if a man deserts and is deficient in his regimental necessaries, he should be charged in a separate charge for loss by neglect of his necessaries. It would not be proper to state it as a consequence of the desertion, or to award compensation for it upon a conviction for desertion only.

(25.) A charge for an offence under the Acts relating to the auxiliary forces or reserve forces or any other Act other than the Army Act, 1881, must, in accordance with the Rules of Procedure 11 and 133, follow as nearly as possible the words of the Act, and where the enactment is in the alternative, each charge must, as in the following forms, state one only of the alternatives.

Each court shall consist of three members, two of whom shall constitute a quorum, and each member shall be entitled to the rank and pay of a colonel of cavalry, shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, and shall hold his office during the war, unless the court shall be sooner abolished by Congress. For each court there shall be one judge advocate, to be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, with the rank and pay of a captain of cavalry, whose duties shall be as prescribed by the Rules and Articles of war, except as enlarged or modified by the purposes and provisions of this act, and who shall also hold his office during the war, unless the court shall be sooner abolished by the Congress; and in case of the absence or disability of the judge advocate, upon the application of the court, the commander of the army corps to which such court is attached may appoint or detail an officer to perform the duties of judge advocate during such absence or disability, or until the vacancy, if any, shall be filled by the President.

SEC. 2. Each court shall have the right to appoint a provost marshal to attend its sittings and execute the orders of the court, with the rank and pay of a captain of cavalry; and also a clerk, who shall have a salary of one hundred and twenty-five dollars per month, who shall keep the record of the proceedings of the court, and shall reduce to writing the substance of the evidence in each case, and file the same in the court. The provost marshal and the clerk shall hold their offices during the pleasure of the court. Each member and officer of the court shall take an oath well and truly to discharge the duties of his office to the best of his skill and ability, without fear, favor, or reward, and to support the Constitution of the Confederate States. Each member of the court, the judge advocate, and the clerk shall have the power to administer this.

SEC. 3. Each court shall have power to adopt rules for conducting business and for the trial of causes, and to enforce the rules adopted, and to punish for contempt, and to regulate the taking of evidence, and to secure the attendance of witnesses, and to enforce and execute its orders, sentences, and judgments, as in cases of courts-martial.

FORM OF A RECORD OF A TRIAL BY A GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL.

Special Orders } HEADQUARTERS, DEPT. OF ,
No. } 1886.

A General Court-Martial is appointed to meet at at 10 o'clock A. M., on Monday, 1886, or as soon thereafter as practicable, for the trial of First Lieutenant , and such other persons as may be brought before it.

DETAIL FOR THE COURT.

1. Lieutenant Colonel
2. Major
3. Captain
4. Captain
5. First Lieutenant

Judge Advocate.

A greater number of officers than those named cannot be assembled without manifest injury to the service.

The travel required by this Order is necessary for the public service.

By command of Brigadier General

Assistant Adjutant General.

FIRST DAY.

Pursuant to the foregoing Order, the Court assembled at the place, date, and hour therein specified. Present the following Members:—

Lieut. Col.
 Major
 Captain

The Judge Advocate, Captain, and the Accused, First Lieutenant, were also present.

There being no quorum, the members present adjourned to at o'clock A. M.

SECOND DAY.

Pursuant to the foregoing Order and to adjournment the Court re-assembled at the said place and date, at the hour of o'clock A. M. Present the following Members:—

Lieut. Col.
 Major
 Captain
 Captain
 First Lieut.

The Judge Advocate, Captain, and the Accused, First Lieutenant, were also present.

First Lieutenant, the Member absent on the first day, tendered an explanation in writing of his absence which was directed by the Court to be annexed to the Record, marked "Exhibit A."

The Judge Advocate stated that he had appointed, as Reporter for this trial, Mr., who, being introduced, was duly sworn by the Judge Advocate.

The Accused asked leave to introduce, as his Counsel,, Esq., Counsellor at Law. The Court assenting, the Counsel appeared and took his seat.

The Order convening the Court was then read by the Judge Advocate, and the Accused was asked if he objected to any of the members. He thereupon, through his Counsel, interposed a challenge to Major, on the ground that he had investigated the case and preferred the charges, and was to be presumed to have formed an opinion on the merits.

The challenged member, on being called upon by the President of the Court for remarks, stated that while he had in fact preferred the charges after an examination of the evidence, he had done so officially, and did not consider that he had formed such opinion as to affect his impartiality.

After argument by the Judge Advocate and Counsel, the Court was cleared for deliberation. On the doors being reopened, it was announced by the President that the challenge was sustained.

The Accused, being asked if he objected to any other member, replied in the negative.

The Court being reduced below a quorum, the Judge Advocate was instructed to communicate the fact to the Convening Authority.

THIRD DAY.

Pursuant to adjournment, the Court reassembled at the said place and date at the hour of o'clock A. M. Present the following Members:

Lieut. Col.
 Captain
 Captain
 First Lieut.

The Judge Advocate, Captain, and the Accused, First Lieut., with his Counsel, were also present.

The Proceedings of the foregoing day were read and approved.

The following Order, detailing a new Member, was then read by the Judge Advocate.

(Insert copy of G. O. or S. O.)

The newly-detailed Member, Major, took his seat upon the Court.

The Accused being asked if he desired to object to said Member, replied in the negative.

The Members of the Court were then severally duly sworn by the Judge Advocate, and the Judge Advocate was duly sworn by the President of the Court;—all of which oaths were administered in the presence of the Accused.

The Accused was thereupon arraigned upon the following Charges and Specifications:—

(Insert original Charges, &c., or copy.)

To the First Charge, ("Disrespect to his Commanding Officer, in violation of the Twentieth Article of War,") and its Specifications, the Accused, through his Counsel, interposed the Special Plea of Former Trial,—in that he had been arraigned upon the same before a previous General Court-Martial, had duly pleaded thereto, and the proceedings had thereupon been discontinued by the United States, without fault or act of his.

The Judge Advocate replied that, immediately upon the original arraignment, the Court had been dissolved, for the reason that several of the Members had been required for active service in the field; and he contended that, as the proceedings had been carried no farther, there had been no "former trial" in the sense of the 102d Article of War.

The fact in regard to the dissolution of the first Court being conceded, on the part of the Accused, to be as stated,—after argument had upon the Plea, the Court cleared for deliberation, and on its being reopened, it was announced by the President that the Plea was not sustained.

The Accused, through his Counsel, then moved to strike out the Specification to the Second Charge, ("Breach of Arrest, in violation of the Sixty-fifth Article of War,") on account of indefiniteness and uncertainty; it alleging simply that the Accused, having been confined, &c., did, without authority, "quit his confinement," without setting forth in what the offence of quitting consisted, i. e. where he went or what he did; so that he, the Accused, was not apprized by the Specification with what particular act he was charged, or what he was called upon to defend.

The Judge Advocate replied, and the Court was then cleared. On reopening, it was announced by the President that the Motion would be granted unless the Judge Advocate should amend the Specification by averring in what act or acts the alleged offence consisted. The Judge Advocate thereupon, by consent of the Court, amended the Specification by adding thereto the words—"by going to, and remaining for one hour at, the quarters of another officer, Captain of said regiment."

The Accused thereupon pleaded to the several Charges and Specifications, as follows:—

To the 1st Specification, First Charge—Not Guilty.

To the 2d Specification, First Charge—Not Guilty.

To the First Charge—Not Guilty.

To the Specification, Second Charge—Guilty.

To the Second Charge—Guilty.

At the suggestion of a Member, the President directed all persons present as witnesses to leave the court-room and not return until severally called upon to testify.

The Judge Advocate thereupon opened the testimony for the prosecution by calling as a witness Captain, who, being duly sworn, testified, in answer to questions by the Judge Advocate, as follows:
